Centex To Show Redesigned Plan For Quadroxplex

The Centex Corp. is expected to present redesigned plans for its proposed 152-unit quadroxplex development at a public hearing tonight on the proposal.

Representatives of the Elk Grove Village homeowners who are fighting the development met with Centex officials this week and indicated satisfaction with the revised plans for the development, located near Alexian Brothers Medical Center.

"It appeared to me that many favorable improvements were presented in the plan," said Donal Quinn, a representative of the homeowners. "Basically there were substantial improvements."

Centex officials said two new land plans — one with townhouses and one with redesigned quadroxplexes — were presented to the homeowners.

"We're working together to try to come up with a land plan more acceptable to them," said Centex real estate manager Robert Calkins.

THE LAND involved is "Parcel C" in the planned unit development area west of Arlington Heights Road and north of Biesterfeld Road. Residents of the Elk Grove Estates area opposed the quadroxplexes because, they said, the quadroxplexes lower the values of their homes.

Residents also contended that Centex salesmen who sold them their homes said townhouses like those in Elk Grove Estates, would be built in "Parcel C". Those townhouses sell for $33,000 to $44,000, the quadroxplexes for about $24,000.

Both Calkins and representatives of the homeowners expressed confidence that some sort of agreement would be reached.

"I feel confident that Centex is responding to the public demand for alternatives to the quadroxplexes," said another homeowner, Norman Proges. "We're confident that Centex will come through with an equitable proposal." The homeowners planned to distribute flyers last night to residents in the area explaining what had been done and urging them to attend the hearing.

The flyers noted that those involved in negotiations with Centex felt that gains had been made in the areas of "land use, architectural design, monetary values and aesthetics."

QUINN indicated that Centex still was working on specifics of the revisions to have them ready for the public hearing.

The public hearing, originally set for Nov. 18 by the plan commission, was scheduled after about 100 residents of the area appeared before the village board to object to the quadroxplexes. The hearing was delayed on request of the homeowners, who indicated they wanted additional time to negotiate with Centex.

Centex had obtained approval for the quadroxplexes from the plan commission last summer, but the homeowners protested the plan when it came up for final approval before the village board.

The original plan for the area west of Arlington Heights Road and north of Biesterfeld Road was approved by the village in 1968. Centex was required to get additional approval when it changed the original attached row house proposal on Parcel "C" to the quadroxplex plan.

gram, supervised by Alice Giles, is open to handicapped children of all types and is offered on Saturdays. The program can accommodate up to 20 children.

Park Program Offers A Chance

Handicapped Kids Like Play, Too

Kids with handicaps like to play as much as any kid and a program offered by the Elk Grove Park District gives them the chance.

About 10 children are now in the special recreation program supervised by Alice Giles, which is offered on Saturdays. The first session of the program will end this Saturday and will resume Feb. 5.

The children have a wide variety of handicaps, Mrs. Giles said, ranging from various severities of mental retardation to physical defects.

Mrs. Giles, who used to work for the Skokie Park District, said she gears the activities to the children's abilities and concentrates as much on social development as she does on building skills.

"My main purpose is helping them enjoy activities," she said, "and I want to help them build their own self-confidence."

The children do many things in the program, she said, from physical games to dance and drama. "You think of an activity and then gear it for their capabilities, just like you do for any group of children," she said.

And she always keeps things flexible, she said. "If something doesn't work I move on to something else."

MRS. GILES has an assistant who helps with the program and if more children join, she said, she will add other helpers.

The children range in age all the way to one teenager. Mrs. Giles is especially concerned about the older children.

"If they are little, handicapped children are accepted more easily by other children. Teenagers have the hardest time. I would really like to see a program just for handicapped teens," she said.

The special recreation program was offered for the first time this summer and Mrs. Giles, who with her husband moved to the village in July, became involved this fall.

"I love the recreation field," she said, "especially working with the handicapped. In a way we all have handicaps; there are some things I can't do as well as others, too."

Jaycees Continue To Seek Disabled

The Elk Grove Village Jaycees are continuing their canvass of the village in search of disabled persons in order to identify them for special protection during emergencies.

In cooperation with the fire department, Jaycees plan to place a four-inch red "D" decal in bedroom windows of disabled persons and an Elk Grove Village Fire Department "D" sticker on the front door frame.

The decals will alert firemen to the presence of a disabled person within the home when they are called in an emergency.

"This is Elk Grove's answer to the 'Red Ball' program which some communities think is so successful," Fire Chief Allen Hulett said. The "Red Ball" program involves designating bedrooms of children in the same way the Elk Grove Village program identifies disabled persons' bedrooms.

"In a place like Elk Grove Village, it

(the Red Ball) wouldn't mean a thing any more because 75 to 80 per cent of the homes would have a Red Ball on their windows," Hulett said.

About a quarter of the way through their canvass of the village, Jaycee members have located nine homes in which disabled persons live.

For additional information about the program or to report the home of an invalid not covered during the canvass, residents may call Hulett at 439-3900 or Jaycee Charles Gunn at 593-2555.

Crane Lashes New Economy

Lashing out at President Nixon's economic recovery plan, U. S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., said in a speech yesterday, "The wage-price controls attack the symptoms, not the cause, of inflation."

Crane spoke yesterday to the members of the Elk Grove Village Association of Industry and Commerce during their annual meeting held at the Holiday Inn, Elk Grove Village.

Crane told the businessmen the "tragedy" of all the current government economic measures "is their failure to recognize the true cause of inflation." The cause, he said, was the government's "deficit financing and expansion of the currency supply."

Crane termed the current "inflation psychology" in which wage earners expect periodic raises just to maintain the current earning power a "sorry problem." But, he added, "the public's attention has been diverted from the source of that problem with the wage-price controls."

Borrowing an analogy from economist Milton Friedman, Crane likened the wage-price controls to "putting a brick on a pressure cooker when Congress is controlling the heat." Doing this, he said, would only result in the need "for more bricks."

Most of his letters from businessmen have indicated support for wage-price controls, Crane said. But he warned, "When the teeth begin to apply, the businessman will find he is working with more constraints than labor or the consumer."

INDICATING his support for fewer government controls on the economy, Crane said that "the alternative to a free economy is coercion." He said "history shows the sorry results when government increases that control."

Crane predicted that as government enlarges its economic controls the first victims could well be small businessmen. "With more constraints, the profit margins will get thinner and thinner. I can anticipate the end of small entrepreneurs."

Though Crane feels the situation is worsening, he also said it was not hopeless. "I urge you not to adopt a defeatist attitude."

Instead, he told businessmen to become more active in the governmental process. "You should monitor legislation as an association. Even the big business associations don't do this as well as the unions." He urged businessmen to take public stands on economic issues, and, he said, "Know when, where and how to fight."

Christmas Concert Set

A Christmas band concert will be held at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Grove Junior High School in Elk Grove Village. Selections will be performed by the beginners' band, intermediate band and the concert band. Members of the bands are from Clearmont, Grant Wood, Ridge, Rupley and Mark Hopkins schools.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference said it will not accept the resignation of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of SCLC's Operation Breadbasket. Jackson offered his resignation earlier this week after he had been suspended while SCLC officials investigated corporations he allegedly set up without their knowledge, including "Black Expo."

Congress began eliminating the final barriers to adjournment of the first session of the 92nd Congress. Only mass absenteeism and the fading threat of a filibuster against foreign aid appeared to stand in the way.

A Miami-based ship line said one of its cargo vessels was being attacked by a Cuban gunboat. A spokesman for the Coast Guard said it was powerless to take any action other than sending medical aid because the ship was in international waters and was of Panamanian registry.

Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton was freed of charges in the 1967 killing of an Oakland policeman when the district attorney decided a fourth trial would be fruitless. The dismissal ended a four-year effort involving three trials to convict Newton for the slaying of Police- man John Frey in a predawn street battle.

The State

Federal Appeals Court Judge Otto Kerner, former Illinois governor, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of bribery, mail fraud, tax evasion, perjury and conspiracy in a race track stock scandal. Kerner asked for, and was immediately relieved of participation in any activity of the court pending final disposition of the charges against him.

A Republican ward committeeman and two driver testing examiners were indicted on charges of bribery and official misconduct for allegedly allowing unqualified applicants to pass driving tests. The employees included Eddie Mack Jones, a 17th Ward committeeman.

The World

Pakistan walked out of the Security Council after denouncing the United Nations as a "fraud and farce" that delayed action in the India-Pakistan war until India could capture Dacca. The Council was considering a heavily pro-Indian resolution offered by Poland to stop the war.

Pakistani commanders in East Pakistan asked India for a cease-fire as Indian troops and tanks drove to nearly a mile from the besieged eastern capital of Dacca. A dispatch from Dacca reported India and Pakistan did not seem to be too far apart on terms for stopping the fighting in East Pakistan.

The War

The United States put off the next Vietnam peace talk session for another week, and the Communists responded by charging the move was aimed at killing the conference. In Cambodia, Communist forces firing massive mortar and rocket barrages cut off an estimated three brigades of Cambodian troops 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh. Thousands of civilian refugees were reported fleeing southward.

The Market

An early mid-morning calm on Wall Street was shattered by aggressive buying of stocks after midday. The Dow Jones industrial average, finished with a net gain of 3.62 at 863.76. The average price of a New York Stock Exchange Common share rose 33 cents. Advances outnumbered declines, 906 to 521 among the 1,726 issues on the tape. Turnover was 16,890,000 shares. Prices advanced in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Probe Bomb Threat In Adoption Fight

by MARGE FERROLI

Arlington Heights police are investigating a bomb threat made late Tuesday to Mrs. Paula Marshall, an Arlington Heights mother who earlier Tuesday was granted custody of her daughter, Amy, after a two-year court battle.

Police spokesmen said Mrs. Marshall reported the caller was a male and sounded as though in his 40s. He reportedly used abusive language and threatened her house would be bombed after saying he had adopted children of his own.

Police advised the telephone company of the call and are taking "the usual precautions."

Mrs. Marshall, who lives at 2234 Goebbert Rd. with her 7 year old daughter, was awarded custody of the 2½ year old child when Cook County Circuit Court Judge Helen McGillicuddy upheld an Illinois Appellate Court ruling ordering a Colorado Springs, Colo. couple to return Amy to her natural mother.

Mrs. Marshall said yesterday she received only one threatening phone call, "but it was enough to scare me."

"You hear about things like this all the time, but when someone threatens your own life, it's another story," she said. "There are just some sick people in this world."

The court ordered that Mrs. Marshall receive immediate custody of the child, but Mrs. Sylvia Decker, one of her attorneys, said she has not yet been advised when Amy will be returned to her natural mother. But she said she expects notification shortly.

AMY IS NOW IN the custody of her adoptive parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Huebert. The Hueberts adopted the baby in June, 1969.

However, the court ruled Mrs. Marshall, in giving up her child had been defrauded and had been under strain and duress.

"She never consented to give the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker said. "She was told at the time by the lawyer for the adoptive parents there would be a six-month waiting period during which she could reclaim custody of the child."

This waiting period, however, was nonexistent, Mrs. Decker said, which led her to unknowingly hand the child over to the Hueberts.

Mrs. Marshall's husband, Timothy, from whom she was then and is currently separated, was responsible for handing the child to the Cook County Dept. of Public Aid, which handled the adoptive proceedings, Mrs. Decker said.

She explained Marshall gave the child to a Julie Brown, who in turn presented Amy to the public aid department.

"She (Miss Brown) had a financial interest in putting the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker claimed, explaining the adoption would have eliminated child support payments for Amy by Marshall.

Miss Brown was a mutual friend of the Marshalls, Mrs. Decker said. Mrs. Marshall was unaware of her husband's relationship with her at the time of the adoption and "completely trusted her," she said.

MRS. DECKER placed the blame for the confusion over the adoption in three places:

—on the Hueberts' attorney who had claimed there would be a six-month waiting period;

—on the Public Aid department for not fully explaining the adoption proceedings to Mrs. Marshall; —and on Miss Brown for "misleading" Mrs. Marshall and giving her advice to turn the child over to the public aid department.

Mrs. Decker said Mrs. Marshall was under strain shortly after Amy's birth because she had just separated from her husband. She also did not have a job and worried about supporting her two children.

"A child cannot be taken away from its natural mother unless the mother consents to it or is proven unfit," Mrs. Decker said. "The court has no right to investigate the qualifications of a natural mother, except in an extreme case of child abuse."

She said Mrs. Marshall went to the public aid department for advice on how best to handle her situation shortly after Amy's birth.

"They told her in 15 minutes all her rights, which is a complete farce," Mrs. Decker said. "The public aid department must fully explain adoption procedures and assistance or they might as well just kidnap a child."

THE PUBLIC AID department, although dealing primarily with welfare payments, does act as an adoption service, but is not a state recognized adoption agency, Mrs. Decker said. The regular investigation proceedings of the adoptive and natural parents made by a recognized adoption agency are not conducted by the county office.

The public aid office handles its adoptions through "direct placement," Mrs. Decker said, which does not allow "full protection" to adoptive parents that they will always maintain custody of a child.

"It's tragic this has taken over two years," Mrs. Decker said. Mrs. Marshall asked the Hueberts to return Amy to her five days after she was handed over to the public aid department, but they refused and court proceedings further delayed the case, she said.

Kiwansians Seek Donations

Brighten Yule For Needy

Elk Grove Township residents are being asked to help make the Christmas holidays a little brighter for needy township residents.

Township Supervisor William Rohlwing has proposed residents consider "adopting" needy families during the Christmas season.

In a similar project, the Elk Grove Kiwanians are asking residents to donate clothes, toys, and money to 350 needy individuals.

Rohlwing suggested residents help needy families by either inviting them to be included in the Christmas Day celebration of the supporting family or to purchase gifts and food for a needy family.

"Many families are still on welfare in the township because of illness, loss of jobs, desertion and many other personal reasons," he said. "Most of these families don't have any relatives in the area who can help, and they are finding it difficult to get the day-to-day essentials."

"The special Christmas meal and gift-giving and exchanging that we all enjoy will not be possible for those families without help from those who can afford it."

THE SUPERVISOR offered services of the township office as the go-between for the plan. He promised the plan would be handled on a confidential basis and asked interested persons to call the office at 437-0300 during regular office hours.

The Kiwanis plan, "Project Share," involves donating needed items to needy individuals identified by the group.

Kiwanian Clyde Brooks said the group has identified 350 individuals in the township who are in need of help. The needy individuals include both children and adults, Brooks said.

"We are putting a priority on clothing for these people," he said, "but we will be glad to accept other items."

Items to be donated may be dropped off at any of the three Elk Grove Village fire stations. "Kiwanis" should be marked on the box. Cash for needy persons should be sent in care of Robert Haskell, 500 Elk Grove Blvd.

Persons seeking information or wishing to identify needy persons may call Donna Fritchard at 437-3527.

With Matrimony In Mind, County Posts Holiday Hours

Christmas and New Year's — and not spring — may be the times when a young man's proverbial fancy turns to thoughts of love.

At least that seems to be the thinking of Cook County Clerk Edward J. Barrett.

Barrett, described by one of his aides as "a sentimental guy," announced yesterday his marriage license bureau in the county building in Chicago will do business as usual Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve. That is, the office will be open Dec. 24 and Dec. 31 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Most other county offices will close at noon those days.

A spokesman for Barrett said he thinks the action was taken because "Barrett's a sentimental guy and it's also in the best interest of the public. With Christmas and New Year's coming up, many couples probably think, 'Why not do it now,'" the spokesman said.

To further accommodate such frivolous inclinations, the spokesman said, "It's only about 20 steps from the license bureau to the marriage court, which he said, will keep the same hours as the bureau."

Barrett's spokesman said it must be a romantic time of year. "Last year on New Year's Eve, we had them backed up four deep down the hall waiting to get married."

He conceded, however, the sudden, last-minute rush may have been connected in some way with income taxes.

Just Politics

by Bob Lahey

Mark Gaines is 18 and he wants to go to the Democratic National Convention. Not as a spectator. As a delegate.

And a working delegate at that — Mark's prime goal at the Miami convention would be to get himself a seat on the platform committee, so he can have a voice in shaping the policies of the Democratic National Party for the next four years.

That's pretty heady stuff for a guy who hasn't cleared high school yet. But Mark is not without credentials in Democratic politics.

Now a senior at Palatine High School — and the president of the study body — Mark already has established himself as a precinct captain of some distinction.

In the 1970 election, Gaines took over a Palatine precinct that went 7 to 1 for the Republicans in 1968. He rang doorbells every night for 30 consecutive days before the election, plugging for votes for Adlai E. Stevenson III for U.S. senator.

Stevenson carried the precinct by five votes, out of something more than 500 total votes.

GAINES appeared Tuesday night at a meeting of the Regular Democratic Organization of Palatine Township to ask the support of the middle-aged and the elderly assembled there.

He's a good-looking guy, standing 6-foot-something, well-groomed with hair down to not-quite-shoulder length, neatly dressed in moderate-mod with white turtleneck and white flared corduroy coat.

The hair and the clothes, he is aware, turn some of the older people off, but the fact that he doesn't change them says something for the guy.

He told the party members he will run as a delegate committed to Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine, because he believes Muskie is the one man who can beat Richard Nixon.

But more importantly, he wants to be in Miami to speak for his generation.

"In 1968," he declared, "people of my age bracket — you could say a whole generation — were ignored, in their desire for peace, for a war on poverty, for fair representation for people of all ages and races."

THE 1968 CONVENTION taught him — he was 15 then — that "the only way anyone can make it in the convention is to fight, the way Julian Bond did, and the way the blacks and the Chicanos from Texas did."

So Mark has begun his fight for a place in the convention.

His first task is to gather 600 signatures on nominating petitions, and he has friends on high school and college campuses collecting those for him.

Beyond that, he needs the votes of, as he put it, "senior citizens, blacks, those of middle-income, the middle-aged . . . or rather, those more mature than my generation."

Of the 170 delegates the Democrats will send to the national convention from 24 Congressional districts, only four will be from the 12th District, due to its small Democratic voter turnout.

SO PICKING OFF one of those four spots seems a tall order for an 18-year-old.

But he's working on it. Following Tuesday's meeting, a prominent member of the township organization approached Gaines and shook hands with him.

"I had a tentative commitment to work for a friend of mine who wants to be a delegate," said the man of the more mature generation. "I just resigned that job. I'll work for you."

Mark looked a little startled.

County Drug Deaths Hit Peak

The number of deaths in Cook County from drug overdoses reached a new high for the year in November when 35 more drug deaths were reported, according to the Cook County coroner.

Dr. Andrew J. Toman, coroner, said 282 people have died from drug overdoses during the first 11 months of 1971, as compared with 277 drug deaths during all 1970 — a figure that set a county record. Twenty-four drug overdose deaths were reported in November 1970, Toman said.

Ten of the 35 deaths last month occurred in suburban Cook County, including four in Oak Park. The other included deaths in Park Ridge, Kenilworth, Harvey, Chicago Heights, Blue Island and Berwyn.

Dr. Toman said 22 of the 35 victims died from overdoses of heroin or morphine, which become chemically identical in the body, 11 died from overdoses of barbiturates and the remaining 2 from a combination of other drugs.

Twenty-one of the victims were men and 24 of the 35 were white, Dr. Toman said.

"It is obvious that unless some type of drastic action is taken we are going to have record drug overdose fatalities every month," the coroner said. "One of the most alarming aspects is that the number of drug overdose victims in our suburban areas has increased substantially."

Dr. Toman said it appears the present drug abuse programs are having little effect on the number of overdose deaths, and said he feels more educational programs are needed to warn of the immediate dangers of drugs and particularly the combination of drugs and alcohol.

WORTH MORE IN 'HAND'

Here's a remarkable new kind of wool pile broadloom. Richer, thicker, livelier. Obvious to the eye, hotter in feel. Tuft for tuft, there's more of the fiber you want most in carpet — pure wool.

WORTH MORE BECAUSE IT CLEANS WITH LESS EFFORT

Thicker, denser, deeper wool pile carpet masks dirt more effectively. Requires minimal care. Stains and spills just swish away. Original beauty lasts and lasts.

WORTH MORE BECAUSE OF BRIGHTER COLOR

Color is reflected light. Programmed Pile Wool carpet has more surface to reflect. Therefore, each color is visibly intensified. Wait 'til you see the difference in this carpet. As an added distinction, Stevens Gulistan Carpet bears the Woolmark label — the mark of the world's best . . . pure wool pile.

24-K PROGRAMMED PILE WOOL?
It's a new method for making wool yarns used in better carpets, researched by the International Wool Secretariat and the Wool Bureau. Perfected by Stevens Gulistan Carpet to add extra crimp to wool fibers. Result: wool pile yarns are given greater bulk for more luxurious carpet appearance, a heftier 'hand', increased crush-resistance and other long-lasting performance virtues.

'Temporary' Stop Signs To Stay Up

Temporary stop signs at Oakton Avenue at Wildwood Road will apparently become permanent signs in accordance with a recommendation from the Elk Grove Village Police Department.

Police Chief Harry Jenkins told the village board of trustees the amount of traffic coming into the village at that point justified making the signs permanent. There is a large number of children in the area, Jenkins said.

The signs were originally put up to slow traffic using the Oakton detour from Higgins Road. With the detour no longer in effect, however, Trustee Ed Kenna urged the signs be removed.

"The amount of traffic there just doesn't warrant it," he said.

Other trustees indicated agreement with the police department recommendation though, and asked an ordinance be drawn up for the signs. An ordinance is necessary because the signs were put up only under temporary powers.

Other temporary stop signs had been put up on Arlington Heights Road and Oakton, but the board last week ordered those signs removed, over Kenna's objection.

In other business Tuesday night, the board:

—Approved payment of $13,677 to the C. B. Construction Co. for laying a 12-inch water main in Brummel Avenue between Lively Boulevard and Well Site No. 9. Centex Corp. has agreed to reimburse the entire sum to the village when they begin on Brummel Avenue.

—Referred to the plan commission a proposal to rezone land on the northwest corner of Busse Road and Greenleaf Avenue to permit its use as a restaurant. The request, filed by Jack Sauers, is for a proposal similar to one approved two years ago for Sauers at Busse Road and Lunt Avenue. Sauers said that plan fell through due to financial reasons.

School Closings Up To Schaible

Decision to close Schaumburg School Dist. 54 schools in emergency situations is delegated to Supt. Wayne Schaible.

Board of Education policy states that schools will be closed for the day when the 7 a.m. temperature reading at O'Hare Airport is minus 15 degrees or lower on the day in question.

However in the event of severe snowstorms, boiler breakdowns and other emergencies the authority to close schools is delegated to the superintendent.

Dist. 54 depends on radio stations WCFL (1000), WGN (720), WIND (560), WBBM (780), WMAQ (570) and WLS (890) to carry the emergency closing announcements.

Parents are urged to listen after 6:30 a.m. when threatening conditions exist.

Parents are also urged to make arrangements for their children's care in the event schools are dismissed early. If a severe storm develops it is possible for students to be sent home early.

The decision to close or open will be made each day and parents are asked to listen every morning when storm conditions exist.

Drug Task Force Makes First Arrest

A narcotics ring operating in Arlington Heights was cracked Tuesday night by a special suburban police coalition formed this year to fight drug traffic in the north and northwest suburbs.

Arlington Heights police arrested three youths at Dana Point apartments, 1405 Central Rd., at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, after one of the youths allegedly made a narcotics sale to an undercover agent of the Metropolitan Narcotics Dangerous Drugs Enforcement Group (MEG).

Phillip Smith, 21, 1405 Central Rd., Arlington Heights, was charged with illegal sale of dangerous drugs. He allegedly made the sale to an MEG undercover agent in the parking lot of the apartment complex. Barbara Armbrust, 20, of 272 Kirchoff Rd., Palatine, and Michael

CLEANUP CREWS WORKED through the night removing equipment, uniforms and as much as eight inches of water from the locker rooms and fieldhouse at Rolling Meadows High School after heavy rains caused sewers to backup. The school was closed yesterday to all students.

Rain, Wind Cause Blackouts

Rain and high winds yesterday morning caused blackouts in parts of Arlington Heights and on the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove border.

However, Paul Parker of Commonwealth Edison said the effects of the storm were no more than they'd have expected on a normal working day.

Parker said flooding in the Surrey Ridge section of Arlington Heights caused a section fuse to blow about 6 a.m. This left some 70 homes without electricity for about an hour and one-half.

Edison crews worked through the afternoon to string up temporary power lines to nine homes in the Surrey Ridge section that remained without power, because a transformer was almost completely under water.

The second power failure took place about 9 a.m. in the area of McHenry and Aptakis roads in northwest Wheeling and adjacent Buffalo Grove. Parker said some 20 customers were without power for about an hour.

Bocka, 18, of Roselle, were also arrested and charged with conspiracy to sell dangerous drugs. The arrests climaxed a two-month narcotics investigation by MEG.

According to Arlington Heights police, 800 tablets of mescaline (a hallucinogenic drug) and 240 grams of marijuana, were seized in the raid.

THE ARLINGTON Heights investigation was the first conducted solely by MEG. The group has been involved with numerous arrests made by state drug agents.

MEG was created in June to control drug use in the suburbs and consists of agents from 19 north and Northwest suburban police departments. The organization works with a $197,000 federal grant under the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968.

The Cook County Sheriff's police also supplies manpower to the organization. Local police department membership includes Palatine, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Mount Prospect.

According to MEG director and Niles Police Chief Clarence Emerickson, the concept of a police organization to combat drug abuse "has been in the works for about three years," but the federal grant was not approved until this summer. Emerickson said MEG's central headquarters is not located in one community but moves to various suburban municipalities.

'No Road Work, No Vehicle Sticker'

A Buffalo Grove man, annoyed by the village's failure to repair part of Arlington Heights Road, has refused to buy a 1972 village vehicle sticker.

J. Joseph Klodner wrote the village he would not buy the sticker until the road is repaired and said he hopes "other villages will also withhold payment."

In his letter to village president Gary Armstrong, Klodner complained the Cook County section of the road is "not only injurious to my automobile and to others that travel it, but more importantly, an extreme hazard."

The Cook County section of Arlington Heights Road is deeply rutted in western Buffalo Grove. The village has been unable to persuade the county to repair and village officials have said the village cannot afford to do the work itself.

However, Lake County repaired the section of the road in that county this fall.

"IT IS A SHAME," Klodner wrote, "that while our neighbors to the north have taken the bull by the horns and have had the northern half of Arlington Heights Road repaired, we cannot at the same time make the total length of Arlington Heights Road driveable."

Klodner was moved to make his protest after receiving a 1972 vehicle sticker application in the mail.

He pointed out a village letter accompanying the application said "pavement maintenance is also provided by your fee."

In his reply, Klodner, who lives at 14 Regent Ct., said, "Since I am one of hundreds in Buffalo Grove who use Arlington Heights Road daily, I can certainly attest to the fact that this particular pavement is not being maintained. The road is definitely in worse shape than it ever was, and, with the advent of the winter season, it obviously will continue to deteriorate."

Repair of the road was an issue in last spring's election and village officials concede that it has deteriorated badly. After Cook County refused to repair the road, village officials even talked of closing it to traffic.

Involved Death Of 16-Year-Old

Palatine Suit Is Dismissed

A $30,000 suit against the Village of Palatine stemming from the fatal shooting of a 16-year-old youth more than six years ago has been dismissed in Cook County Circuit Court.

Administrators of the estate of Bernard J. Azure charged the village and two Palatine policemen with "wrongful death" in the shooting of the Palatine youth Aug. 29, 1965.

A Cook County Circuit Court jury, meeting in the Chicago Civic Center issued a "not guilty" verdict Monday following about 30 minutes of deliberation. The trial lasted two days.

Part of the three-count suit earlier had been thrown out of court on a directed verdict by Judge Norman Barry.

Atty. Frederick O. Floberg represented the plaintiffs, and atty. Clark King of the law firm of Lord, Bissell and Brook, Chicago, represented the defendants. He was assisted by Palatine village attorneys.

Named in the suit, in addition to the village, were Police Lt. Raymond Radlein and Patrolman Frank Incaperno. Both are still on the Palatine force.

THE DEFENSE case was based on a section of the Illinois Revised Statutes that justifies the use of deadly force by police officers under certain circumstances.

In the Azure case, police said they had been notified that a youth with a pistol was in the vicinity of Slade and Bothwell streets.

The following account was given by Palatine police at the time of the incident:

A Fox River Grove couple reported to police at 10:08 p.m. the night of the shooting that they had dropped off a hitchhiker in the downtown area whom they said had a gun.

Minutes later, a patrolman heard glass breaking at the former Marsala's Finer Foods store, 21 Railroad Ave.

Palatine and Rolling Meadows policemen surrounded the area and ordered the person believed to have broken into the building to come out.

At that point, police said, Azure jumped from the broken window and ran down a nearby alley. Police fired warning shots, then another shot that struck the youth. A knife with a five-inch blade was found in his pocket.

He died the following day in Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights.

The couple who had notified police about the hitchhiker with the gun said Azure was not the same person they picked up.

A Cook County coroner's jury ruled the death was "justifiable homicide."

Police Chief Robert R. Centner said yesterday it was never determined who fired the fatal shot.

The victim was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence M. Azure, 508 E. Baldwin Rd.

New Fire Station Opens Saturday

The raising of the American flag at 8 a.m. Saturday will officially signal the opening of Elk Grove Village's third fire station — the Greenleaf Station at Busse Road.

There will be a brief ceremony prior to the flag raising with Village Pres. Charles Zettek and other village officials participating.

Grand opening ceremonies at the station will be held in February.

'Operation Snowball' Needs Help

The Christmas Eve deadline for Operation Snowball is less than two weeks away and items for 10,200 gift packages are still needed.

Operation Snowball, the annual holiday project conducted by the Mental Health Association of Greater Chicago, has a goal of remembering 17,500 mental patients in Chicago area state hospitals and aftercare facilities with a Christmas gift. To date, 7,300 gifts, each containing several items, have been assembled and wrapped by volunteers at the Snowball center.

Volunteers are scheduled to wrap 1,000 gifts daily for the next ten days in order to meet the deadline, but all activity is stalled until the public responds with gift contributions.

Community chairmen for the mental health association throughout Chicago and surrounding suburbs are appealing to residents of their towns to make their donations immediately. Items for adult male patients, such as socks, gloves, hosiery, toiletries and underwear, are most urgently needed.

All items must be at the Snowball center no later than the 17th if the gifts are to be assembled, wrapped and distributed on time.

Helping to avoid a breakdown in Operation Snowball progress at this crucial time are local Dodge Dealers who have volunteered their showrooms as official gift collection centers to make giving convenient for community residents.

Gifts are shuttled regularly from the showrooms to the wrapping center by Chicagoland Jaycees. Gifts can also be dropped off at the Operation Snowball center, 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago.

Despite the help of many groups and individuals to facilitate giving for Chicago area residents, there may still be some who are too busy with personal holiday plans to take advantage of the Snowball arrangements. Persons who wish may mail a cash contribution to Operation Snowball at the Dearborn Street center. All checks made out to Operation Snowball will be used specifically to purchase gifts for mental patients.

Give your family a cold wet nose for Christmas

This Christmas, let a puppy snuggle its way into your family's hearts. Puppy Palace will help you choose just the right Christmas puppy from 43 different breeds.

"We'll sell you the right puppy —or no puppy at all"

But we won't let you walk out of Puppy Palace with just any old breed. Because it doesn't make sense to match a big, active dog to a small apartment. Or a tiny, delicate puppy to a family with lots of young, hard-playing children. Or a puppy who sheds easily to a family with lots of dark, nubby upholstery.

So we'll ask some important questions. Questions about your home. And about your furniture. And about the ages of your children. Then we'll help you pick out the perfect Christmas puppy for you.

He'll live 10 years or we'll help pay

Every Puppy Palace puppy is a purchased. Every puppy has undergone an extensive health program. Every one has all his puppy shots. We're so confident of our puppies that we make this promise:

Your puppy will live at least 10 years—or we'll contribute to the price of a new one from Puppy Palace. (Naturally, we expect you to take reasonable care of your puppy. And you should check him with a veterinarian soon after purchase.)

Come in now

Come into Puppy Palace today. (The Christmas rush is on!) Didn't you always hope for a puppy under your Christmas tree?

"The Christmas shop for your dog"
Christmas shop for your dog at PUPPY PALACE. We have everything you need to care for him properly, and those special things you pamper him with, even his own "Monogrammed Christmas Stocking." Stop in today—you and your dog will be glad you did.

Foreign Goods Will Cost More

Devaluation Shows Confidence Lack

by LEA TONKIN

This week's announcement by President Nixon of a decision to devalue the American dollar reflects a long-standing lack of confidence in the currency, according to area bankers.

"This reflects a lack of confidence in the dollar, an attitude in existence for some time by foreign governments," said David Shaw, president of the Woodfield Bank in Schaumburg. "Combined with the 10 per cent surcharge on foreign-made goods the effect will be significant in the higher prices of foreign goods," he said.

Shaw said the devaluation move could be part of a trade-off package in which the U.S. discards the 10 per cent surcharge in return for the realignment of its currency standard, adding that "only time will tell."

The President's announcement late Monday followed a series of talks with French President Georges Pompidou in the Azores. In recent talks with trading partners the U.S. had sought an upward revaluation of foreign currencies rather than a devaluation of the dollar by raising the price of gold (in effect lowering wider fluctuation of currency rates the value of the dollar).

giving more play to the market forces of supply and demand was approved by both Nixon and Pompidou. Another major session is set for this weekend in Washington by the major non-Communist trading nations.

"The devaluation will benefit the entire economy," said Michael Reese, president of the Suburban National Bank of Elk Grove Village. "U.S. goods should be more competitive in world markets, helping our balance of trade picture which affects many segments of our economy. Instead of a deficit balance of trade we should be able to get a surplus."

"I CAN'T SEE any effect on the domestic market," said Harold Harvey, president of North Point State Bank in Arlington Heights. "It is primarily a means of equalizing the international currencies, acknowledging a situation that has gone on."

"This is probably a realization that productivity is a better means of measuring currency than metal," he said. "It is true in today's international money market that the strength or weakness of the dollar lies on the ability of the American free enterprise system to be productive."

Productivity, counteracting inflation, was one of the criteria of Phase II economic controls, according to Harvey. "This would mean that a worker who previously made 100 widgets a day would now produce 110. Obviously labor forces don't feel this way. They feel that the benefits of increased productivity relate to profits for the corporate structure when in fact it is an anti-inflation device," he said.

CONFIDENCE IN the dollar will rebound as the U.S. curbs inflation agreed Shaw. "Consumers stand to gain tremendously if this happens," he said. "The net gain would be in real purchasing power and the net gain in jobs, although there might be some smaller layoffs as government spending is cut."

The dwindling supply of gold, the President's action to set the dollar free from the gold standard and the decrease in the purchasing price of the dollar all led to the devaluation move, Shaw said. Phase II controls are aimed at solving one of these problems: inflation. Both Shaw and Reese agreed that the public is confused about the ability of Phase II controls to solve the nation's economic problems.

"There is an air of uncertainty in the total U.S. economic picture," said Shaw. "People are considerably more cautious about making long-term commitments — building new plants or buying new machinery for businesses."

"The single largest means of expansion is by borrowing money so the demand for loans is down," he said. "When the demand is down the competition factor brings down interest rates."

Noting that the Woodfield Bank has a relatively high proportion of commercial customers Shaw said he is waiting to see what the reaction of major Chicago banks will be to the recent cut in the prime interest rate by major East Coast banks. The prime rate is the interest a bank charges its most credit worthy customers, usually large corporations. It is currently 5 1/2 per cent on the Chicago area but was trimmed 1/2 per cent by several major New York banks this week.

CAUTIOUS CONSUMER attitudes are reflected in this year's unusually high savings rate, according to Shaw. He said the government is trying to bring consumers out into the market place by offering personal income tax breaks and the repeal of the 7 per cent excise tax on autos.

The continuous downward pressure on interest rates coupled with the increase in consumer savings results in a problem for bankers according to Shaw: They are stuck with high-paying savings accounts and a lot of money they'd like to put to work. Feeling the pinch, bankers in some other areas of the country have lowered interest paid on savings accounts from 4 1/2 per cent to 4 per cent. He said Chicago area bankers may have to do the same if the slack demand for loans keeps interest rates down.

Palatine Dems Will Not Endorse In March Primary

Palatine Democrats will endorse no candidates in the March primary election, according to Township Committeeman Richard Mugalian, a candidate for the state legislature.

Mugalian announced the decision at a meeting of the township Democratic organization Tuesday night.

"I see no point in choosing up sides in the primary," Mugalian told organization members, urging them to "get out and work for your own candidates."

Mugalian will be in a primary contest with at least two other Democrats for two nominations to the legislature from the 2nd Legislative District.

Besides Mugalian, two Elgin men, Atty. Neil Hebeisen and Edward F. Harley, have filed nominating petitions with the secretary of state. A Hanover Township resident and a woman from Barrington are also reported considering the race for the Democratic nomination.

The new 2nd District includes most of Palatine Township, all of Barrington and Hanover townships, the city of Elgin, Cuba Township in Lake County, and parts of three townships in DuPage County.

Southminster Day Of Music This Sunday

Sunday will be a musical day for the Southminster United Presbyterian Church in Arlington Heights beginning with "For Us A Child Is Born" accompanied by organist Mrs. C. F. Wright playing a harpsichord, and ending with an afternoon program that will include all the choirs, and a high school choir.

The Sanctuary Choir, a 45-voice adult choir, will sing Bach's Cantata "For Us A Child Is Born" at 9:30 and 11 a.m. Mrs. C. F. Wright, who has had limited experience playing the harpsichord, is diligently practicing for the performances.

The six Southminster choirs, plus the Forest View High School Concert Choir will present "A Christmas Sonnet" beginning at 4:30 p.m. Sunday. Fourteen musical numbers, all based on the theme of the Nativity, will be presented.

At the end of the program Jerry Swanson, director of the 80-voice concert choir, and Jan Impey, directing the church choirs, will direct the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's "Messiah."

The public is invited, without charge to the 9:30 and 11 a.m. services and the 4:30 concert.

Care Centers Needed Here

The controversy over last week's Presidential veto of a $2.1 billion legislation for day care centers underlined a growing public interest in such centers to provide relief for working parents.

As discussed by critics of the veto and by Herald staff writer Dorothy Oliver, who recently outlined the day care situation in the northwest suburbs, there is a need for more day care facilities.

Nationwide, there are licensed day care centers for only about 640,000 of the 4.5 million preschool children who could use them. For working parents who cannot afford day care or who are on waiting lists for it, the care of children must be placed in the hands of a non-professional.

Locally, full-time day care is available to less than 400 children in the northwest suburbs at 11 profit and non-profit centers. Each of the centers has a waiting list and only one — the Northwest Suburban Day Care Center in Des Plaines — has a sliding fee scale.

Cost is a critical problem for both parents and day care center operators. The parent who enrolls a child must generally expect to pay about $25 a week, with staffing being the largest single cost in the centers. So, for many lower-income parents the cost is prohibitive.

Even if a parent can afford a center, there may not be one located conveniently. Communities such as Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg, for example, lack full-time centers. As industry and middle-income working parents continue to move to the suburbs, the demand for centers here will rise.

Day care centers today are a popular topic — and government has begun to respond to the need for them. This January, Harper College in Palatine will open a center for the children of students and staff members. The cost will be minimal, and the center will be staffed by Harper students working with faculty members.

On a state level, Gov. Richard Ogilvie has directed attention towards the day care problem. On the federal level, however, President Nixon's veto must be interpreted as a retreat from the day care cause.

In his veto message, Nixon asserted the expenditure would establish "a new army of bureaucrats" and would throw a largely untested program at the public.

His key complaint, however, was that the program was a "communal" approach to child raising and thus a challenge to the structure of the American family. He failed to mention how a low or middle-income child can suffer when parents can't make enough money to make ends meet, or the number of children who must spend eight hours a day in the hands of persons unqualified to provide day care.

The rejection of the legislation, as important as that legislation was, does not destroy federal support for day care. There remains in Congress a bill which would provide tax exemptions for parents who use day care facilities. Such a proposal is another worthwhile approach to the problem.

There is an obvious need for day care — and a variety of different means of providing it. Labor unions have established successful centers for the children of employees. Harper's plan sounds positive. Legislative support for experimental programs will help, too.

President Nixon's day care veto, however, is a serious blow to the entire day care movement. Federal support will undergird the success of any full-scale day care effort.

Beyond money, however, day care centers must be staffed by persons who can deal with young children. All the money in the world will not make day care centers effective if the centers are merely sterile, badly staffed custodial centers. The centers can be eight-hour prisons or they can be creative and loving places for the children who attend them.

A New Source Of Power

"Magnetohydrodynamics" is not only hard to pronounce; it's hard to tame.

The name describes a system whereby a stream of hot electrically conducting gases is passed through a magnetic field to generate electricity without moving parts. (In conventional systems, heat from coal or gas fires turns water into steam, which spins turbines, which rotate generators, which create electricity.)

Not only is magnetohydrodynamics theoretically more efficient but it would virtually eliminate particle emissions — soot and smoke. It would also require much less water for cooling, thus eliminating the need to build power plants near large bodies of water.

The first problem, the pronunciation, can be solved simply by referring to magnetohydrodynamics as MHD. The second, making it work, is going to take at least $2.4 million for starters.

That's the size of a two-year contract recently signed between Office of Coal Research of the Department of the Interior and Avco Corp. of Greenwich, Conn., for a pilot program of generating electricity from coal by means of MHD.

Six to 10 years of effort, and more money, will be needed to solve all the problems, says Interior Secretary Rogers Morton. "However, when MHD becomes a reality, we can expect drastic reduction in air and thermal pollution and greater conservation of our energy resources."

MHD sounds A-OK.

Sorry, There's Not Enough

Muskie Dominates Democrat Field

by BRUCE BLOSSAT

The Democrats' stop-Muskie forces have much less time than they may realize to block his 1972 presidential bid. If he does well in the early going, the nomination battle could be largely over by next May — two months before the Miami convention.

Stopping Big Ed is really what most of his rivals are up to right now, since it is he and not they who occupy the commanding position.

A flock of quiet things have been happening meantime to make their blocking effort more difficult. Muskie's chances for big early gains in Illinois and Massachusetts seem to have been enlarged. A rising number of non-primary states plan to start their delegate selection process between late January and mid-April. They might aid his momentum. And, though endorsements by governors and U. S. senators don't make a nomination, his growing list of top backers suggests very wide support.

The Maine senator must do very well, of course, in the opening March 7 primary in his neighbor state of New Hampshire. He must also either win or come respectably close in the 81-vote Florida primary March 14.

If his skin is intact after that, things could really start to fall into place for him. His people are understandably reluctant to claim specific delegate numbers, but the word is that Muskie could run up a pretty sizable count in the Illinois primary — with 170 votes at stake.

Wisconsin's 67-vote primary on April 4 is supposed to be Sen. George McGovern's prime opportunity, but again the reports show Muskie with a strong lead. Sen. Hubert Humphrey, intentions undeclared, might be more of a problem there than McGovern.

Rhode Island's little publicized April 11 primary is very likely to give Muskie all of its 22 delegate votes.

Two weeks after, Massachusetts could provide him with the game-breaker. With Republican Gov. Francis Sargent having pocket-vetted a new primary proposal, the existing law governs. It states that the victor in Massachusetts' presidential preference primary gets the whole delegate bag on a winner-take-all basis. With Sen. Edward Kennedy unlikely to be in the preference test and Muskie high in state polls, it could be a smashing 102-vote pickup for Muskie on April 25.

Pennsylvania's 182-vote primary comes the same day. Depending on the final structure of that primary (unsettled at this writing), it could conceivably hand Muskie another enormous block of delegates.

If his opponents have not stopped this possible early build-up, then it is nearly certain that the momentum gained from accumulated victories will carry Muskie through the 15 state primaries from May 2 on. He won't win them all, but he won't have to. Touted late spring tests in Oregon, California and New York may diminish in significance.

While the spotlight is splashing on the early primaries, such nonprimary states as Arizona (25 votes), Hawaii (17), Iowa (46), Kansas (35), Minnesota (64), Mississippi (25), Nevada (11), South Carolina (32), and Washington (52) will be plunging into delegate selection efforts.

The whole process, up through state conventions, will be completed Feb. 12 in Arizona, Feb. 23 in Mississippi, March 29 in South Carolina. Important precinct caucuses, signaling candidate prospects, will come Jan. 24 in Iowa, Feb. 22 in Minnesota.

In some of these places, including South Carolina, Iowa, Kansas and Arizona, Muskie's drive could find significant reinforcement.

Obviously, the prospect set forth here is not foreordained. Any serious Muskie stumble could put him out of business quickly. But I suggest that if his rivals haven't tripped him up in the first 115 days of 1972, by the time of the April 25 Massachusetts primary, they probably can toss away their roadblocks and go home.

U.S. 'Hatred' In South Asia's War

by RAY CROMLEY

The India-Pakistan war demonstrates again the difficulty this or any country has in attempting to bring about peace, a cease-fire or even truce negotiations in the uneasy regions of the world.

The decline in U. S. influence in this instance, and the gains being achieved by Russia and mainland China in the subcontinent, quite terribly illustrate how effective it has become to "hate" the "right" country and back the "right" nation in order to win friends and gain power in South Asia, the Middle East and Africa.

If India triumphs, the consensus here is that it will become the dominant state in South Asia. The Soviet Union, as India's sponsor and friend, will come into new influence and prestige throughout the region. At the same time Peking, as Pakistan's patron, will gain a base for expanding its own activities.

Reports indicate the United States is losing the friendship of India because this country is not willing to vigorously "hate" Pakistan and back India in the war.

Instead, the United States shut off arms to India as well as Pakistan. To make matters worse, the United States brought the matter to the United Nations after New Delhi had warned bluntly against such unfriendliness.

The Soviet Union, by contrast, was willing to condemn Pakistan unmercifully. Moscow was willing to back India with arms and fight Delhi's case all-out in the United Nations.

Analysts say the United States is also losing the friendship, trust and respect of Pakistan because this country is not willing to "hate" India. Our chief sin was that in the India-Pakistan war of 1965-66 we also shut off arms shipments.

Peking stepped in six years ago, as it is doing now, with arms for use against the Indians.

As one prominent Pakistani told this reporter sometime back on a plane trip to Thailand, "Communist China helped us in our time of need. You deserted us."

They, not you, are our real friends."

This despite billions of dollars in U. S. aid to Pakistan and India over the years. Even now the United States is supplying considerable amounts of help for the refugees.

The India-Pakistan war is no isolated example.

Take the Nigerian civil war of the late 1960s. The United States stayed rigorously neutral militarily. We supplied no arms to either side. We offered relief to the victims, a course followed by many nations.

The Soviet Union followed a different course. It supplied the Nigerian government with weapons and a wide variety of assistance. Russian influence thereby gained tremendously in this African country. Western influence declined.

Consider the Middle East. In several Arab lands, the United States is anathema amongst considerable numbers of the influential because this nation does not "hate" Israel. In Israel, we are accused of being sympathetic to the Arabs.

The Russians, willing to "hate the enemy" and back up their "hate" with large supplies of arms, are gaining influence in the Arab world.

This is no argument for "hate," or for picking sides. The victories cited above may be short-term.

West Entrances To Tollway Sought

I am enclosing a copy of a letter which I have addressed to the Illinois State Toll Highway Authority which is self-explanatory. I have never noticed any comment in your publication concerning the lack of westward access to the Northwest Tollway at either Arlington Heights Road or Rte. 83, but I feel that with a little investigation that you would find out that this is indeed a pressing problem and will become more so in the near future.

Any publicity that you can give to this effort to obtain action from the Illinois State Toll Highway Authority would be most helpful and appreciated.

The letter follows:

Dear Mr. Robert Maher, Director:
I am writing about the subject which I mentioned when I met you earlier this week, and that is the lack of approaches

The FENCE POST Letters to the Editor

to the Northwest Tollway in the Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, and Arlington Heights area. In proceeding westward from the Kennedy Expressway, once you have passed through the first toll gate, there is no way to get on the Northwest Tollway until you reach Rte. 53.

Just a year or two ago this was no problem but just a quick visual survey of the high density population growth in what was once farm land south of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, and the industrial growth along the toll road, should be a most convincing argument for a westward approach on the tollway either at Rte. 83 or Arlington Heights Road. In effect what the Tollway Commission is doing is overloading the already crowded Rte. 62 and 58 for motorists who are trying to get on the tollway headed in the northwesterly direction.

I have learned from a good authority that within the next year there will be an increase in population in the amount of 10,000 people from new apartment complexes on Rte. 83 between Rte. 58 and Rte. 62 alone, so any preliminary survey action that could be started immediately to investigate the need for additional access to the toll road would be none too soon.

Any consideration that you can give to this request will be to everyone's benefit who lives in the area mentioned above. It would be very much appreciated if you could give me any kind of a report as to the possibility of this investigation going ahead in the near future.

Thanks Countryside YMCA Staff

On Monday evening, December 6, numerous persons were honored with a dinner, entertainment and recognition awards by the Staff of Countryside YMCA. It was the YMCA's 3rd annual award banquet which acknowledged the many volunteers, both youth and adults, who serve on the Board of Directors, volunteer office assistants, program assistants, camp counselors, YMCA Distaff, Y's Men's Club, and many others.

I would like to point out a group that went unheralded at the awards banquet. The group is the excellent staff of the Countryside YMCA, who measure their success by the number of happy faces they serve by their many educational and recreational programs, and in the leadership they develop. I am sure all Countryside YMCA members would like to publicly thank:

Herman Hertog, Executive Director;
Gary Meier, Program Director; Bobbie Turcotte, Program Director; Jean Valantine, Office Manager and Jackie Plathau, Secretary.

Business Today

by DEAN C. MILLER
UPI Business Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's time again to consider appropriate Christmas gifts for public officials who make our business and financial world spin. And here are some suggestions:

For President Nixon, who vowed never to impose wage and price controls, a memory course.

For Treasury Secretary John Connally, a bronze plaque bearing the legend, "Remember the Alamo; forget the dollar."

For Howard Hughes, if you can find him, another year's supply of vanishing cream.

For William McChesney Martin, former New York Stock Exchange and Federal Reserve boss who spent months on a study which recommended reforms in the NYSE, the job of putting them into effect. He's willing.

For William Casey, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission and a Wall Streeter at heart, the original manuscript of former NYSE Chairman Bunny Lasker's epic poem, "Be It Ever So Humble There's No Place Like the Floor of the New York Stock Exchange."

For ROBERT HAACK, soon to depart as president of the NYSE, an all-expense paid Greyhound tour back to the Midwest from whence he came with a side stop at the Potomac, Md., home he maintained throughout his years on the New York job.

For Paul Kolton, president of the American Stock Exchange and candidate for the NYSE job, a pitch pipe to guarantee he's on key with those love calls across the Trinity churchyard.

For George Meany, the AFL-CIO boss whose remarks following President Nixon's recent union convention appearance would have raised even John L. Lewis' eyebrows, a copy of Emily Post's latest book on etiquette.

For Richard Gerstenberg, incoming chairman and chief executive officer of General Motors, a Ralph Nader doll delivered in a new Volkswagen.

For Ralph Nader, one share of General Motors' stock and an autographed picture of outgoing GM Boss James Roche, the man who gave Ralphie his start.

For Hugh Hefner, whose Playboy empire went public Nov. 3 at an offering price of $23.50, now around $16, a rabbit's foot to get those bunny tails flying high again.

For Ross Perot, the Texas multimillionaire who likes his DuPont Glove Forgan employees to dress conservatively, a copy of the 1904 Sears Roebuck catalog.

FOR BAUSCH & LOMB, whose stock soared 600 per cent this year from the 1971 low of 27 1/8 because of its new soft contact lenses, rose colored glasses to get it through any dark moments in 1972.

For Aristotle Onassis, the Greek shipping tycoon, something practical like a South African gold mine.

For the Hilton and Loewes hotel chains which recently agreed to refund $5 million in illegal guest taxes, a $2 tax accounting manual.

For the New York telephone workers who voted to turn down a 33 per cent wage hike days before the freeze went into effect, a private screening of that classic, "Sorry, Wrong Number."

And for Mary and John Q. Public, who suffered through recession, unemployment, wars, freezes and other uncertainties in 1971, a better year in 1972.

NI Gas Approves $50 Million To Increase Supply

An initial commitment of more than $50 million for the production of supplemental natural gas (SNG) from liquid hydrocarbons was approved recently by Northern Illinois Gas Co.'s board of directors. The investment, which is subject to regulatory approval, was authorized part of a program to add to NI-Gas' natural gas supplies.

This major project is being undertaken to help alleviate the current gas shortage. C. J. Gauthier, NI-Gas' chairman and president, said the company proposes to begin construction next year of a gasification plant to convert liquid hydrocarbons to pipeline-quality gas. Initial capacity will be 150 million cubic feet of gas per day with provisions for expansion to 250 million cubic feet per day. "At full capacity, this amount could meet the annual energy requirements of more than 400,000 typical residential space heat customers," Gauthier said.

The liquid hydrocarbons would be obtained under contract from suppliers. A letter of intent with MAPCO, Inc., Tulsa, Oklahoma, has been signed for the feedstock.

"Our proposal for liquid hydrocarbon gasification to supplement our natural gas supplies was the result of extensive research into various processes which offer alternatives to natural gas. SNG from liquid hydrocarbon gasification could be distributed to our customers to help meet pressing demands for a clean-burning and efficient energy by early 1974," Gauthier said.

Randhurst Sales Decline

The figures for October are in and they show that sales at the Randhurst Shopping Center are down.

"On the basis of sales by the tenants we had last year, we were off 8 per cent," Harold J. Carlson, vice president and general manager of the Randhurst Corporation, said.

However, the center had added two new tenants, Charles A. Stevens and Mary Lester Fabrics, since last October and with them the decline in sales is only 5 1/2 per cent.

"This is a little better than I had guessed," Carlson said. At a November meeting with village board members, Carlson had estimated the figure would be as high as 15 per cent.

Carlson said he attributed most of the decline to "new competition which certainly extends beyond Woodfield." He called Woodfield the "high profile" competition, but also mentioned numerous smaller centers and shopping areas that have opened the past year.

"It has been a year when there's been as much new competition as in any other year I can remember," Carlson said.

Fuller Earnings Up

H. B. Fuller Co., manufacturer of adhesives and specialty chemicals, has reported increases in sales and earnings for the third quarter of 1971. A Fuller facility is in Palatine.

Sales for the quarter ended Aug. 31, 1971 were $15,378,000, up from sales of $12,627,000 in the 1970 quarter. Net earnings for the 1971 quarter were $756,000 or 38 cents per share, compared with $645,000 or 34 cents per share in the third quarter of 1970.

For the first nine months of 1971, sales were $41,430,000, up from $36,086,000 in the same period of 1970. Net earnings for the nine-month period of 1971 were $1,638,000 compared with 1970's $1,628,000, resulting in per-share earnings of 83 cents in 1971 and 96 cents in 1970. The 1970 figure, however, included a non-recurring gain of 3 cents per share from a currency revaluation realized by a foreign subsidiary.

Jr. High Aid Boost Asked

Members of the Northwest Education Cooperative (NEC) may propose legislation that would boost state aid for junior high school programs.

The NEC Legislative Action Committee discussed a revision in the state aid formula at a meeting Tuesday. The revision was proposed by Sharrie L. Hildebrandt, Dist. 59 board member.

Mrs. Hildebrandt has proposed that the junior high schools be granted a foundation level between the two existing rates. She contends the junior high school programs incur some of the same expenses the high schools now have.

BOTH THE HIGH schools and the junior high schools, for example, have divided the different curriculum areas into departments. The specialized approach to education costs more money, according to school officials.

Committee members will spend the next few weeks studying the proposal. William Henkel, education lobbyist hired by NEC and other suburban districts, will investigate the total cost to the state of such a revision. And local school officials will investigate a possible conflict of the proposal with other proposed state aid legislation.

The state aid formula is based on statistics such as a district's assessed valuation and a school's average daily attendance. The formula also includes a constant factor called the "foundation level." For grades kindergarten through eighth a foundation level of $520 is multiplied by the average daily attendance figure. The foundation level for the high school grades, $650, is higher because the cost of high school education is theoretically higher. As the foundation level rises, the amount of state aid rises.

AT THE MEETING, the committee members said they agree with Mrs. Hildebrandt's proposal, but want more information before they approve it.

A statewide group called "Dual Unit Equality" (DUE) is also proposing a state aid formula revision. The group contends unit districts, kindergarten through 12th grade, should not receive more state aid than dual districts, primary or secondary, combined. The present disparity is caused by another constant factor in the formula, the qualifying rate. DUE proposes lowering the dual districts' qualifying rate and so increase the districts' state aid. All of the districts in this area are dual districts.

The NEC members plan to discuss their proposal with the DUE group to see if the two proposals are compatible. According to Henkel, "they may be compatible if we are talking about a total package that comes in under $50 million. We have to find out how much the revision will cost statewide."

National Affairs Reporter Says:

Red China Drops Aggressive Role

by TOM WELLMAN

The Communist China which gained admission to the United Nations this fall is a much less aggressive and belligerent country than it has been in past years.

That was the argument of David Murray, Chicago Sun-Times national affairs reporter, who addressed 300 persons last week at the Old Orchard Country Club at a meeting of the Chicago Council on Foreign Affairs.

Murray reported that "all intelligence inputs" indicate there will be no more military adventures and little support for "wars of national liberation," a tactic which China used in the late 1950s and early 1960s.

China, following its 1960s cultural revolution, is going through a period of internal consolidation. However, "revolution is still the reality in China," Murray reported; the country remains more "idealistic" than the Soviet Union.

Murray does not see China as a "permanent disruptive force" in the United Nations, but he does see the country raising questions and arguments about the method of assessing countries for U.N. costs.

A lack of understanding of how the U.N. works was the primary reason why Taiwan lost its U.N. seat while Communist China gained its seat, Murray said.

The U.N. is "not like Congress or the Texas legislature," and nations which told the United States officials that they would support the admission of both countries did not have to stick to their word, Murray said.

A "BLITZKRIEG" campaign, coupled with attacks of "braggadocio and jingoism," in which the United States made a "huge prestige issue" of its efforts to seat both nations, was just the type of campaign which could not succeed, Murray reported.

"It didn't sit well with countries who do not want to be regarded as serfs," Murray said. Small nations want individual, low-pressure diplomacy, and their latent feelings of resentment towards the superpowers were turned on by the United States campaign.

When the admissions question came to the U.N. floor, the United States officials found themselves outmaneuvered, because they had placed too much emphasis on behind-the-scenes persuasion.

"U.N. Ambassador George Bush did not treat the small nations as diplomats," Murray said.

Murray agreed that President Richard Nixon and his adviser, Henry Kissinger, had come a long way from the "simplistic view" of "morals in one hand, missiles in the other" which persisted through the era of John Foster Dulles during the 1950s.

"It takes the leading exponent of a point of view to change that point of view," said Murray, who contended that Nixon was the only man who could have reversed this country's position on China.

During a question and answer session after his talk, Murray said that President Nixon's trip to China will have "good international overtones" and can help undo some of the harm created by the U.N. admissions battle.

He added the President "hopes to be reelected for his foreign policy achievements" and he reported the closeness of Nixon's China visit to the 1972 elections could be of great political benefit.

Marje Sues To Gain California Racing Board Seat

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Marjorie Lindheimer Everett, former owner of Arlington Park Race Track, has gone to court in an effort to gain her seat on Hollywood Turf Club's board of directors.

In a suit filed in Superior Court Tuesday, Mrs. Everett, 51, sought to enjoin Hollywood Park directors from enforcing an amendment requiring a license from the California Horse Racing Board before she is permitted to take her place on the 11-member board.

Judge Robert Wenke set a hearing for Dec. 27 to take up the suit but refused to issue a temporary order to the track's management to seat Mrs. Everett.

MRS. EVERETT, largest single stockholder of Hollywood Turf Club, was elected to its board at a stockholders' meeting Nov. 17.

HTC is a corporation which operates Hollywood Park, a thoroughbred and harness racing track in Inglewood.

A pivotal figure in a federal investigation of Illinois politicians who profited from secret racetrack stock deals, Mrs. Everett told the court that the 10 other board members had conspired to keep her from being seated.

The basis of her suit was an amendment passed by the HTC Oct. 14 requiring that every director be licensed by the California Horse Racing Board within 30 days of receiving notice of election.

MRS. EVERETT, a resident of Scottsdale, Ariz., said she was not told about the amendment until Nov. 17.

Neil Papiano, her attorney, said the amendment was illegal "and a transparent attempt to keep her off the board."

Mervyn Leroy, president of Hollywood Turf Club, and nine other board members were named defendants in the action.

Mrs. Everett holds 124,552 shares of HTC stock, valued at $2.6 million.

In an answering brief, Hollywood Park said:

"To seat Mrs. Everett would result in the possible seating of a director who is unqualified. To do so would expose HTC to severe and irreparable injury to its license to conduct racing meetings and specific meeting dates might be revoked."

North Suburban Bar Association Widens Service

The North Suburban Bar Association recently expanded its area of responsibility to include the entire North Shore suburbs. Formerly known as the Niles Township Bar Association, a constitutional revision recently voted upon changed the name, membership requirements and area to be encompassed.

Various associations of lawyers are chartered throughout Cook County. Aside from the ethnic associations, there is a South Chicago Bar Association, Southwest Suburban Bar Association, a West Suburban Bar Association, a Northwest Suburban Bar Association and now there is a North Suburban Bar Association.

The Niles Township Bar Association for the past several years was limited to a small area in relation to the entire north suburbs, and its membership, seeing the need for a larger North Shore area bar association, took the necessary action and changed its charter at a Nov. 4 meeting.

Service Board Hires Coordinator

by CINDY TEW

A $3,000-a-year job to be entitled "central coordinator" was created by the board of directors of the Volunteer Service Bureau of Northwest Cook County Wednesday, and offered to acting coordinator Esther Rabchuk who accepted the position.

The central coordinator is the only paid job in the Volunteer Service Bureau, and comes with the understanding that volunteer hours will be given when necessary. Mrs. Rabchuk has been working nearly a 40-hour week lately.

Mrs. Rabchuk, who would have liked to see a paid secretary in the office with her, said that the board is being realistic in view of the tight financial situation. Since she believes very strongly in the volunteer concept, she said she would do her best.

Volunteer Services Bureau treasurer Robert Kaczmarek sees a $10,000 per fiscal year budget. At the present time, however, Kaczmarek says that the bureau is financially secure for seven months. The financial statement through Dec. 15 shows a $5,338.63 balance.

"THIS IS A secondary, parasitic organization depending solely on the budgets of other organizations to survive," H. C. Kibbie said. "Since we have no firm budget, I don't see how we can commit ourselves to large standing expenses."

The financial road has been a rough one for the Volunteer Services Bureau since its inception in 1969. Besides churches, PTA groups and a few other charitable organizations, the sole contributors have been the area school districts and the United Fund.

"It's fortunate that the villages and governmental units in the areas which are served by the Volunteer Services Bureau do not, at this time, possess the vision to support the concept of people being involved with people in more than just words," Mrs. Rabchuk said.

Since June when a volunteer coordinator resigned, the duties of coordinating the Volunteer Service bureau have been split up among board members. Though the board called their work a tremendous experience in which they got to work closely with other board members, the work became an overbearing task which was taken over this fall by Mrs. Rabchuk on a temporary basis.

The job of central coordinator, which Mrs. Rabchuk says is too good to lose on the basis of the reality of finances, will be reviewed periodically with the possibility of modifying the pay and number of employees in the event of more or less liquidity.

In other board action, Mrs. Rabchuk submitted a statement to the effect that she was studying the matter of liability insurance for volunteers. At the present time, the Volunteer Service Bureau cannot be responsible for volunteer liability and a letter to that effect has been sent to bureau agencies.

The Bensenville Home Society, a not for profit home for the elderly, was granted its request to become a registered Volunteer Service Bureau agency, over some protest that the bureau was extending itself too far.

Catholic Schools Look To Innovation

by BETSY BROOKER

Rigid moral codes enforced with stringent discipline was once synonymous with parochial education.

Some Catholic adults still shudder at the memory of the cold authoritarian nun towering at the front of the classroom with a ruler in her hand ready to smack mischievous students.

But the children of these same adults are attending classrooms radically different from the strict schools of yesterday. Along with the external trappings of the church, the conformity of education is being booting out of Catholic schools.

Catholic school officials today are trying to make their classrooms models of education innovation.

And forerunner in the new movement is St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights.

A TRIO OF administrators is now mapping out a plan to "individualize" education at St. Viator. The plan will be launched next year with the arrival of two new members of the three-man team to the school.

The administrator team includes Rev. Patrick Rander, Rev. Thomas Langenfeld and Brother Donald Houde. Rev. Rander currently is acting principal of the high school. He will be moved next summer to the post of associate principal in charge of personnel. Rev. Langenfeld, currently principal of Bishop McNamara High School in Kankakee, will take over the principalship. And Brother Houde, currently principal of the Spalding Institute in Peoria, will be named associate principal in charge of curriculum.

The three clerics were brought together by a common goal: They believe educators must become "more concerned with the internal development of each individual student than with intellectual advancement."

"Just as the church has changed very much in the last 10 years, our schools must change," said Rev. Langenfeld. "External traditions and ceremonies in the church have been modified. We hope the schools can also refocus on internal principles."

TRADITION IS A barrier to the team's goal. They point to a statement in "Crisis in the Classroom" to illustrate what they are fighting against. In his book, Charles E. Silberman said, "It is not possible to spend any prolonged period visiting classrooms without being appalled by the mutilation visible everywhere — mutilation of spontaneity, of joy in learning, of pleasure in creating, of sense of self."

The Catholic educators condemn tradition that "allotted uniform time for each course because all academic areas were considered equally important for each student. The space given to accomplish this task was a room of comparable size to any other room, arranged much in the same fashion as any room. All teachers were considered to be able to present the same basic material the same way with the same effectiveness. All students were considered to have the same basic aptitude for learning at the same time under the same circumstances."

Education must not stifle individuality but encourage students to learn how to learn, according to the team. They quoted John Gardner, "students must be taught in such a way that they can learn for themselves the new things of tomorrow."

As the Catholic educators open the door to student freedom, they are not closing it to student discipline. "We have to teach students responsibility, the value of freedom, and the consequence of irresponsibility," said Rev. Rander.

"But discipline has to allow the student to retain a positive self image," said Brother Houde. "No discipline is valuable unless it involves self-discipline. We have an obligation to help the students discipline themselves."

THE CLERICS are excited about their project and are optimistic about its results. "We are on the same wave length. Our competencies complement each other," said Rev. Langenfeld. The three have known each other for more than 10 years. But not until the Oratorian Order relaxed its regulations last year were they able to work together. The order now allows its members to choose their

The team plans to divide the duties of school administrator three ways. To do this two associate principal positions have been added to the school's staff. Langenfeld will oversee the school operation while Houde will specialize in curriculum and Rander will specialize in student and faculty affairs. The team approach is a pilot project in Catholic education, according to the clerics.

The changes the team plans to implement will not be sudden nor readily visible. The clerics say they hope to encourage evolution, not revolution. The changes will be reflected in such things as a broader curriculum, more independent study, projects outside of the school, new learning centers and more flexible scheduling.

But none of the changes will undermine the philosophy at St. Viator — the philosophy that makes the school unique. "We consciously try to create a Christian community," said Brother Houde.

"Our education program would be incomplete if we did not bring the moral-spiritual level of a student to life, too. We educate the whole person," said Rev. Rander.

"Catholic schools have an opportunity to make a real contribution to the community because we have more freedom," said Rev. Langenfeld. "But we have not yet used this freedom to its fullest extent."

In 1965 some 15,000 persons were killed when a cyclone struck Pakistan.

Some New Toys May Be Dangerous

by LEA TONKIN

Toys that squeak and rattle, light up or scoot across the floor may delight a child at Christmas but any one of these could cause severe injury.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare is testing many toys for possible hazards. The agency warns that parents must still choose toys with care since not all toys banned by the FDA are removed from retailers' shelves and not all dangerous toys have been tested.

The agency publishes a list of toys found to be dangerous and banned from interstate commerce by its Bureau of Product Safety. Acting under the authority of the Toy Safety Amendments of 1969 the FDA has tested toys for thermal, electrical or mechanical hazards. These include toy rattles, toy caps, dolls or stuffed toys, lawn darts and similar toys which could lacerate, puncture, or be aspirated or swallowed.

Clacker balls, baby walkers, paint on toys, thermal and electrical toys and pacifiers are being tested by the agency. Since December of last year approximately 150 toys have been banned. Most have been redesigned or production has stopped. Flammability and chemical hazards are also tested by the agency.

AMONG THE TOYS found to be dangerous are: An electrical pencil kit for etching wood (the metal pencil tip heats up and could explode); a battery-powered riding toy which could short circuit and cause electrical shock and the battery sometimes leaks sulphuric acid; a perilous launching strip for toy automobiles which could easily inflict a sharp cut.

Toy stoves that can cause burns; rattles which can be easily pulled apart, leaving sharp edges; and balloons with whistles that can be removed and swallowed are also on the list of banned toys.

"THE LIST IS NOT as informative as we would like it to be," said Albert F.

Limberg, product safety consultant for the FDA in Region V. "Manufacturers have redesigned toys named on the list and have not changed the labeling of the product to enable buyers to detect the revised edition from the models examined by the FDA and banned under the law."

Limberg said a beneficial aspect of the banned toy list is that manufacturers may start to adequately identify the revamped models of the toys. He cautioned that not all dangerous toys have been examined by the agency.

The FDA offers guidelines in the selection of playthings for children:

Choose toys suited to the child's age, development, interests and ability. Choose a variety of toys to encourage the child's physical, emotional and mental development.

Check for "nontoxic" labels on toys.

LOOK FOR children's toys which can be washed or sterilized. Make sure the edges on toys are rolled or smooth and not easily breakable.

Determine if the toys are filled with flammable or hazardous substances. If you cannot do this it is best not to buy the toy. Report such toys to the FDA.

Look for the Underwriters Laboratories (UL) mark on electrical toys.

Buy only stable riding toys or larger play equipment.

Do not buy toys that are too heavy for the child to handle.

Get toys that cannot be swallowed or that have no small removable parts for infants and small children.

Select well-built quality toys from reputable manufacturers. Better toys will require less repair and are usually safer.

NOT ALL TOYS are bad, as this young lady can attest. But parents should be careful about the things they put into young hands.

Review Phase II Wage Agreement

by LEA TONKIN

The "me-too" clauses in construction industry labor contracts may cause some problems for Chicago area builders.

The Construction Industry Stabilization Committee (CISC) in operation since last spring, announced to all builder organizations that no economic adjustments provided to take effect after Aug. 15 of this year can be enacted without further notice from the committee. This applies to all increases whether or not they were settled before President Nixon's new economic program was launched Aug. 15.

Last week, the Pay Board tightened its control over the industry in an effort to bring the settlements in line with the 5.5 per cent guidelines set for Phase II wages. The Pay Board ordered CISC members to explain why wage agreements they approved have averaged twice this guideline. The board also asked why some settlements have included retroactive increases during the wage-price freeze despite a general ban.

The Pay Board and CISC agreed at last week's meeting in Washington to establish a six-man subcommittee "to work out specific procedures to assure conformity with the announced policies of the Pay Board." The construction committee was given blanket authority under Phase II economic controls but was ordered to stay within the 5.5 per cent guidelines rather than its original 6 per cent annual guidelines.

"WE ARE ONE of the many cases involved under the new contracts to go into effect since Aug. 15," said Ted Doufexis, executive director of the Residential Construction Employers Council, bargaining agent for many Chicago metropolitan area home builders. "The Local 150 of the Operating Engineers the contract expires next Jan. 31 and members of the union are scheduled to receive a $1.75 an hour increase," he said.

Under the ground rules set by the Pay Board this agreement cannot be effected until the CISC gives approval. "To compound the problem, the Ironworkers who traditionally have the highest wage scale, have a reopener clause in their contract, based on the operating engineers' settlement," said Doufexis. "It's a kind of 'me too,' clause and it's a sensitive issue because it affects all the trades in the same area, and the members of the same trade in adjoining areas."

Doufexis said this kind of nebulous bargaining policy makes it difficult to anticipate wage increases for various trades. He said it is even more uncertain in the case of the operating engineers-ironworkers relationship because the operating engineers' settlement is over the 5.5 per cent guideline set by the Pay Board.

The board let stand some 450 agreements approved by CISC that were negotiated before the wage-price freeze started Aug. 15 despite the fact that they averaged nearly 11 per cent and despite the retroactivity included in some contracts. The construction committee was set up in April by President Nixon to curb inflation in the industry and includes lic, union and contractor representatives.

Reed is Elected Branigar Chief

Harvey W. Branigar Jr., chairman of the Branigar Organization, Inc., announced the election of James M. Reed as president of the firm. He succeeds Maynard O. Hestrom who has retired but will continue to serve as a consultant to the Union Camp Corp. subsidiary.

Branigar is one of the nation's longest established firms engaged in residential, resort, and recreational land development. It is based in Medinah, Union Camp, with almost 1.7 million acres of woodlands in the southeast, acquired a 76 per cent stock ownership in the operation in 1969. Two large scale projects, involving the purchase and resale of Union Camp land by Branigar, are currently underway near Lake George, Fla., and on Skidaway Island, off the coast of Savannah, Ga. Branigar is also handling the commercial development of the first of five Union Camp properties bordering key interchanges along Interstate Highway 95 in Georgia. Other land development and resort management projects extend from the Florida Keys to the Midwest.

Reed, who joined the Branigar Organization in 1964 as vice president-finance, was elected executive vice president in 1970. He previously was with Arthur Andersen & Co., Chicago, Certified Public Accountants.

Display Contest Prizes Awarded

Winners of the Winston Knolls pumpkin display contest recently gathered at the Winston Knolls sales office to receive prizes for having the most creative pumpkin displays at Winston Knolls, Centex-Winston's community of single-family homes in the village of Hoffman Estates.

First prize, an automatic golf tee, was awarded to Mr. and Mrs. Keith Clark, both avid golfers, and their children, Laura and J. K. The Clarks won first prize for their display of a hand-carved and painted wooden witch with three pumpkins spelling out BOO which was built around the gas lamp on their front lawn.

Second prize, a cassette tape recorder, went to Robert and Carole Rausch and their children Elizabeth and Bobby.

A tie was declared for third place, and the two families who won were Richard and Myrna Hert and their children, Kevin, Laura and Christopher; and Dennis and Sandra Symal and their two children, Denine and Dennis.

The Winston Knolls pumpkin decorating contest was part of this year's Halloween celebrations sponsored by Centex-Winston Corp. More than 8 tons of pumpkins were delivered to Winston Knolls, and members of the community were invited to pick up a pumpkin and create a display using any props they chose.

Over 300 pumpkins were also delivered to Hunting Ridge, a community in Palatine. A pumpkin decorating contest held in conjunction with the Homeowners Association for children of kindergarten age through eighth grade.

Sharp Joins Sales Force

A new apartment was rented every day for the past two months at Mill Creek apartments in Buffalo Grove, reports the developer.

Herman J. Soifer, vice president of Miller Builders, Inc., said the company attributes its rental pace in the competitive suburban market to pricing and the amenities offered at Mill Creek.

"Our rentals are relatively low, running from $195 for one bedroom units and from $245 for the two bedroom apartments," he said.

"We secured an FHA loan, arranged by Dovenmuehle, Inc., a long experienced Chicago mortgage banking firm. It only took six months from our initial proposal to the FHA to our first tenant move-in. The combination of a low cost loan and large scale production capabilities enabled us to pass these savings on to the renter."

According to Soifer, the first two-story building of 24 units is completely rented. Miller is, offering apartments in the second building, and a third structure to be ready in January of 1972. Mrs. Betty Conley, rental manager at Mill Creek, reports some units already rented in the third building for January first occupancy.

There will be ultimately a total of 11 two-story buildings on 32½ acres of landscaped grounds with a swimming pool and recreational building. It will include 216 one and two-bedroom apartments. Kitchens are in either avocado or gold; early renters can have their choice. Appliances include a built-in oven and range with vented range hood, double-door refrigerators, dishwasher and disposal. The ceramic tile baths have one-piece, fiberglass tubs and showers.

Halls at Mill Creek feature fixtures at every door.

Mill Creek Apartments are located on the East side of Arlington Heights Road, just south of Dundee Rd. (Rt. 68) and one-half mile north of Rand Road (Rt. 12).

TWO-BEDROOM unit at Mill Creek Apartments in Buffalo Grove has been decorated by interior designer, Jayne Sorenson with an accent on

Hospital Elects 2 As Trustees

Bjorn D. Skaalerud of 102 S. Elmhurst Ave., Mount Prospect and Robert J. Wilson of Chicago, 3554 N. Harding Ave., have been elected to the Board of Trustees of Norwegian-American Hospital, it has been announced by Irving Highland, president of the board.

Skaalerud is midwest sales manager for Harvey Prober Associates, Inc. with headquarters in Chicago.

A native of Norway he became a U. S. citizen in 1954, and attended Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. He has been active in a number of civic, political, and youth groups including the Boy Scouts of America and the Sons of Norway.

Wilson is a sales representative for the Lutheran Brotherhood Life & Health Society. He attended Northwestern University and served for four years with the U. S. Navy during the time of the Korean War.

He was formerly an accountant with Sinclair Refining Corporation before entering the insurance business, and is now a member of the Chicago Life Underwriters Association.

Montgomery Ward Promotes Colvin

A. M. Colvin of Des Plaines, has been named national merchandise manager of the tire department at Montgomery Ward.

A. M. Colvin

A native of Indiana, Colvin is active in the Chicago Metropolitan YMCA, Crusade of Mercy, Illinois Children's Home and Aid Society, and United Settlement Appeal.

Deutsch Is Named To Sales Staff

Earnie Deutsch of Mount Prospect, has been appointed an account representative to the sales staff of Executive Auto Leasing, Lincolnwood, a subsidiary of Liberty Leasing Co., Inc., Chicago.

Deutsch has been with Executive for the past seven years as service manager and account executive. Before joining Executive, Deutsch held the post of service manager for various automobile agencies as well as mechanical and design engineer.

Buyers Should Ask Questions

Jackson W. Goss, president of Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., offers advice to potential home buyers. This is the first of a series of three articles on home ownership.

"First, even before you start to shop, realize that there is no such thing as a perfect home," said Goss. "Establish some priorities before you look for a house to buy. And, above all, keep your list flexible. Usually it is necessary to make some concessions before you find a home that suits your family, your needs and your budget."

It is a good idea to make a list of those features you consider important and essential in a home," he said. "In this way you are less likely to be swept off your feet by features that are eye-catching, but unimportant. They may have been put there for just that purpose."

"You might, however, list other things you would like to have, but do not consider absolutely necessary . . . a few frills. Then, if you are forced to make a choice, you will know whether or not to include these extras," Goss said.

One way to protect your investment is to pick a location that is desirable now and which will remain so in the future, said Goss. Find out as much as possible about different areas and neighborhoods.

"Above all, ask questions," said Goss. Listing the following:

Are the houses and lawns attractive, neat and well kept?
Do the streets fit the contour of the land? Are they adequately drained, curbed and surfaced?

Are the water mains and sewers in place?

Are there schools, churches, recreational areas and shopping centers within reasonable distance?

What is the commuting time from your place of work?

Is adequate police and fire protection provided?

Is the area zoned against commercial intrusion?

Is there anything nearby to produce excessive smoke, odor, fumes or other forms of pollution?

Are the incomes and interests of the families similar to yours?

"The importance placed on housing in your family's scheme of things will play a big part in the choice you make," said Goss. "For example, is space important to you; privacy; efficiency; easy maintenance? How much importance do you place on looks and design? Do you entertain often and want a separate dining room or recreation room? Do you need lots of storage space or do you keep possessions to a minimum? Do you want a large yard and patio for outdoor living? You will not only want to consider your family's needs and circumstances today, but what they will be in the years ahead."

Once you have decided to buy a house; determined your needs; have established a regular income to adequately meet the expenses of owning; have established a cash reserve for a down payment and emergencies, then you are ready to shop for and buy a house he concluded.

Money Saved Is Economy-Booster

The money you put in your savings account does as much for the economy as money spent directly for consumer goods and services according to Norman Strunk, executive Vice President of the United States Savings and Loan League.

It "works" just as hard in creating jobs and new business enterprises and it has the additional advantages of building your future purchasing power while contributing to financial stability and independence he said. With the help of an unprecedented savings surge that began more than a year ago, savings and loan associations have topped the $200 billion mark in assets.

This high savings rate is also reflected in savings balances at such other types of financial institutions as commercial banks, mutual savings banks and credit unions.

"Naturally, the pace of consumer spending is of great importance. But certainly spending can be expected to pick up as economic uncertainties fade, the unemployment rate declines and signs increase that inflation is now under control," he said. "This spending rise will be a healthy development welcomed by all segments of the business community."

"Meanwhile, there is no reason for anyone who saves to feel that savings funds might do more if they were spent instead. There is a great and constant need for savings, no matter what the economic conditions," said Strunk.

Most of the savings and loan money goes to finance a wide range of loans for housing purposes, including the purchase of existing homes and apartment buildings and the construction of new dwelling units, from single-family homes to the biggest multi-family developments.

"In recent months, housing has been one of the few truly bright spots in the economy. Construction is booming, spawning new businesses and more jobs," said Strunk. "This boom would not have been possible without the record sums savers have been depositing in savings and loan associations."

"Our institutions also lend to buyers of mobile homes and to owners of existing dwellings who want to remodel or improve their properties. And we are active in other areas of real estate lending, including loans for commercial and industrial developments, churches, shopping centers, urban renewal projects, industrial parks, mobile home parks, hotels, motels and recreational facilities," he said.

Money saved at mutual savings banks is used to finance housing and real estate developments and to buy corporate bonds. Proceeds from corporate bond purchases are used to build, expand and modernize industrial plants and equipment.

Money saved at commercial banks goes for a wide range of purposes, including the financing of businesses, business inventories and commercial enterprises, as well as for many large consumer purchases. Commercial bank savings also are used to buy municipal bonds and the proceeds of these purchases help finance a range of job-creating government projects, including road-building, school construction and other public works. Money placed in credit unions is earmarked for consumer loans for a variety of goods and services.

Bell Chorus Will Perform Dec. 23

On December 23, the Bell Chorus will perform their traditional Christmas caroling in the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. lobby, 225 W. Randolph St., from 11:45 until 12:15 and again at 12:30 until 1:00. For the performance the Chorus will sing: Do You Hear What I Hear, While Shepherds Watched, Carol of the Bells, Gesù Bambino, There Shall a Star Come Out of Jacob, I Hear a Voice A-Praying, Masters in This Hall, as well as many of the standard Christmas carols.

The Bell Chorus is now in its 51st season. A company sponsored employee activity group, the Chorus is made up of telephone men and women and their spouses from Chicago and suburban areas.

Participating from the Paddock area is William D. Liphardt of 127 S. Ashland Ave., Palatine.

Construction Financing Set

The Robino-Ladd Co., diversified builders, announced the completion of financing arrangements totaling $22.1 million on four major residential construction projects in three states.

According to Frank A. Robino Jr., president, these arrangements include commitments for permanent loans as well as funding for land development and construction. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. issued firm commitments totaling $8.9 million for permanent loans on two apartment projects. These are the first 348 units of the 555-unit Four Seasons project in Newark, Del. and for the complete 358-unit Regent's Walk development in Westchester, Pa.

Substantial agreement with Metropolitan Life has also been reached for a permanent loan commitment of $2.25 million for the first 163 units of Robino-Ladd's 2900-unit Pike Creek Valley apartment project near Wilmington, Del.

In the Florida area, American Century Mortgage Investors, a Massachusetts trust, has committed $3.5 million for land acquisition and development at Fountain of Palm Beach and another $3.45 million for construction of the 180-unit Trevi Court section of the company's 4000-unit condominium apartment and townhouse development. In addition, First Federal Savings & Loan of Lake Worth, Fla., has committed $4 million in permanent loan money to the Trevi Court project.

Pitera Is Career Seminar Chief

Edward Pitera, 1870 E. Huntington Blvd., Hoffman Estates, of the Quaker Oats Co., will serve as chairman of the orientation demonstration for the Chemistry Career Seminar sponsored by the Chemical Industries Council-Midwest, which will take place on Friday, Jan. 7, 1972 at the Pick-Congress Hotel.

The Seminar will feature person-to-person counseling by men and women from Chemical and Pharmaceutical companies in the Chicago area. The men will outline the requirements for a career in chemistry, or a career in allied fields where a chemical background would be helpful, and will cover all major career areas. Representatives from Chicago area colleges and universities will counsel students on educational requirements.

Over 600 students from Chicago area public, private and parochial schools are expected to attend the Seminar. Students may register from 11:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the Francis I Room of the hotel.

Post Transfers In Hanover Twp.

Forty property sales in Streamwood topped activity in the latest monthly Hanover township real estate transfer report from Cook County recorder Sidney R. Olsen.

There were three sales in Hanover Park, one in Elgin, two in Bartlett, and three in the rest of the township.

Olsen recorded the following property transfers for the township. The list shows the purchase price of equity and does not include the amount of a mortgage which the purchaser may have assumed. The price is indicated by the amount of state revenue stamps on the document ($1 in stamps for each $1,000 of market value).

The transfers are:

Potential Buyer Has Purse Power

Potential homeowners may not realize that they have something going for them... purse power. "In fact," said Jackson W. Goss, president of Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., Boston, "even in this age of instant communications, there are still some people who do not know that a $30,000 house can be bought with as little as a $1,500 down payment."

Investors Mortgage Insurance, a subsidiary of Continental Investment Corporation, also of Boston, is in the private mortgage insurance industry. The company works with lenders, such as savings and loan associations, mutual savings banks and commercial banks, by insuring the top 20 per cent of high-ratio conventional mortgage loans.

"The traditional barrier of a 20 to 30 per cent cash down payment for a conventional loan is a thing of the past. A lender can now grant a family a conventional mortgage with only five per cent cash down," Goss said. "Private mortgage insurance protects the lender by reducing the risk."

"The first actual breakthrough was the lowering of the cash requirement to 10 per cent... 90 per cent loans. Now, even less cash is required — five per cent with a 95 per cent loan," Goss said.

Under the new 95 per cent program, lenders must use private mortgage insurance. And, Goss notes, there is another limit: the maximum loan is $30,000, which automatically puts a $31,578 ceiling on the price of the house.

"The use of private mortgage insurance is becoming increasingly important with the tremendous growth in the number of young families looking for homes to buy," Goss said.

Hoffman Estates Sites Are Sold

Barrington Square Center for Industry in Hoffman Estates recently celebrated completion of three new streets with special ribbon cutting ceremonies. Three sites in the new industrial complex have been sold.

Participating in the ribbon-cutting were representatives of Hoffman Estates' municipal administration, Kaufman and Broad, the developers and Nardi and Co., exclusive agents for the Barrington Square Center for Industry. The new roads are New Hassell Road, Pembroke Avenue and Stongington Avenue.

The Barrington Square Center for Industry encompasses 75 acres in the southeast quadrant formed by the intersection of the Northwest Tollway and Barrington Road. The center will offer a full complex of facilities for major companies for administrative headquarters, research laboratories, sales and distribution centers, factories and warehouses. Structures will be custom-designed to meet individual needs on either a build-to-suit or lease basis. Land sites are also available for purchase.

Kaufman and Broad are also developers of the residential area of Barrington Square. This section lies within the municipality of Hoffman Estates.

Coronado Model Home Introduced

The Larwin Group's Illinois home-building region has added a third home model, the Coronado, to its single family home Trend Village, one of three communities in its 950-acre Greenbrook Country development in DuPage County.

California styling is emphasized in both the architecture and interior design of the Coronado. The extended gable roof integrates home and adjoining garage into a ranch-style exterior, said Wyn Pope, president of Larwin's Illinois region. Greenbrook is located off Lake Street (U.S. 20) east of Barrington Road.

Interior of the new home model, entirely on one level, includes four bedrooms, two baths, a garden view kitchen and adjoining family room with a sliding glass door opening to the back yard or optional patio, a large living room, and a utility room. The master bedroom has its own private bath.

This flexible plan offers several options for homebuyers. One of the bedrooms can be converted into a den library next to the master bedroom. A garage with an attached service porch is included in the price, according to Dean Dillman Jr., Larwin's Illinois marketing director.

For a total cost of $30,750, the house includes carpeting in the living room, dining room, hall, and master bedroom; and electric dishwasher, waste disposal, refrigerator, clothes washer and clothes dryer.

The kitchen features wood grain cabinets with laminated countertops, custom designs in decorator vinyl asbestos floor tile, a compartmented stainless steel sink and single-lever faucet mixing controls. Selected plans also include pass thru windows with patio bar. Custom designed lighting fixtures are included in all living areas.

The entrance to the Coronado has the sunken living room to one side with a hall leading to the coat and linen closets, with bedrooms and baths on the other side. The garden view family room and kitchen are straight ahead.

Trend Village, like Larwin's two other communities in Greenbrook Country, has a landscaped greenway park. The common ground provides a place for playgrounds and family sports. Cul-de-sac streets are featured.

GARDEN VIEW kitchen is featured in the Coronado, the third model home introduced at Trend Village in DuPage County. It is part of the Greenbrook Country development by Larwin-Illinois. Four bedrooms, two baths, family room, living room, utility room and garage are included in this house. Project is on a 950 acre site.

The Coronado model, like other Trend homes, features interior designs by Nanja Williams of California.

Residents also may call upon the Larwin Home Center at Greenbrook for the purchase of additional items for their home. The Home Center, under the direction of Bette Hosmer, offers a line of home furnishings and appliances as well as free professional decorating counsel.

The Larwin Group, Inc., of Beverly Hills, California, has built more than 27,000 homes in 50 separate communities since 1948. Larwin also has major divisions in multiple-family housing, financial services including mortgage banking and real estate investment trust management, recreational communities development, and commercial property development.

Larwin is a subsidiary of CNA Financial Corp., a Chicago-headquartered holding company with more than $3.6 billion in assets.

Joins Realty Co.

Barton Stull Realty, Inc., announced the addition of Cheryl Skaja to its Hoffman Estates sales staff.

Cheryl Skaja

Miss Skaja is a recent graduate of the Real Estate Education Corp. school in Chicago. She attended Northern Illinois University and Harper College.

A former business representative for the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. for two years, Miss Skaja is a resident of Hoffman Estates.

Abate Named Heart Fund Drive Chairman

Robert P. Abate, 368 Knollwood Ct., Palatine, has been named business division co-chairman for the 1972 Chicago area Heart Fund drive.

Robert P. Abate

Abate is group vice president in the marketing and financial services division of American National Bank and Trust Co. He also is active in the University of Chicago Cancer Research Foundations; Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan Chicago; National Foundation of Health, Welfare and Pension Plans; Chicago Association of Commerce and Industry and the Chicago Crime Commission.

The business division aims to raise $550,000 this year to support programs such as heart screening in local industries and schools, stroke rehabilitation, cardiovascular research, home care and public and professional education.

The total Heart Fund goal for Cook, Lake and DuPage Counties is $1.275 million.

Young Couples Seeking Advice

The so-called generation gap between today's young marrieds and their elders doesn't seem to exist when it comes to buying a home said Al Bercher, vice president of sales for Lancer Corp. in Schaumburg.

Bercher's firm built several hundred homes in Benwick and other Schaumburg projects. Young couples lean heavily on their parents and in-laws for housing advice, he said.

"Young people realize the purchase of a home is the most important step they take in establishing a financial structure."

"The experienced eye of elders who have been home owners themselves, usually spots areas of excellence or defect much more quickly. For that reason, elders can impart logic to what might be an important decision," Bercher said. That is why at Benwick, Bercher said, Lancer has concentrated on such features as natural-stain woodwork, ceramic tile baths (two-to-a-house) and a rear sitting porch.

Recreation rooms are paneled, 100 plus wiring installed and front yard and parkway sodded.

Using the $37,900 Bristol as an example, carpeting in a choice of colors is standard as well as oven and range. Face brick on four sides is complemented by either aluminum or cedar siding. Carriage lights and removable double-hung windows are featured.

Benwick models are on Roselle Road two miles south of Higgins Road (Rte. 72). The models can be seen daily except Thursday until 5 p.m. and Sunday until 8.

Phone Number Serves Consumers

by LEA TONKIN

Taking a swatch of material, drying it out putting it in a hot dryer and setting it afire may seem a little farfetched for a laboratory technician, but it's all part of the flammability testing for consumer protection by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

The Department of Commerce and other federal agencies have devised standards for the flammability of various materials. The FTC recently made an effort to make the information from its flammability tests more readily available to the public.

Consumers may call a new toll-free number for information on the results of commission action on the Flammable Fabrics Act. The Flammable Fabrics Information Center can be reached by calling 800-424-8399 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Information on retailers and customers of those firms manufacturing materials found to be flammable will be provided.

According to Blanche Stein, an attorney for the Chicago FTC office, there is a time lag between the time a material is tested and found to be flammable and its removal from retailers' shelves.

"For example, children's nightwear up to size 6X, if it is tested and found to be flammable, will have to be marked with a prominent label stating that it is flammable and that it does not meet the Department of Commerce Standards," she said. "This would apply to nightgowns, pajamas, robes or other items worn for sleeping."

She said the FTC office in Chicago and others around the country accept complaints on flammability from consumers.

"We send these on to Washington," she said. "We also have an agreement with burn centers throughout the country, through the Department of Commerce and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to detect this problem."

The FTC tests children's nightwear under standards established this year by the Department of Commerce. There are standards for other types of clothing.

RUGS and carpeting larger than four by six feet are also tested by the FTC for flammability. Standards were issued in April of this year for these items.

On Dec. 29 the commission will begin testing carpets and rugs smaller than the four by six-foot size.

"Under those standards carpeting will have to be permanently labeled if it does not meet the standards," said Miss Stein.

If a rug or carpet has a flame retardant surface it must be labeled as such when it is sold to the public. When it is received by the FTC for testing it is first tested in its original state, then dry-cleaned and tested again to determine if the dry cleaning process removed the flame retardant.

Local Man Receives Award For Sales

Hoffman Estates resident Benjamin L. Bonselaar, a sales manager for Combined Insurance Company of America, has received a top award in the international company for his outstanding sales and service to the public.

Bonselaar of 1905 N. Governors Lane, received the company's Grand Diamond Merit Award during an Illinois - Indiana Regional Meeting attended by 200 Combined sales executives and representatives.

The Grand Diamond Award is the highest sales award presented by the company's W. Clement Stone Sales and Management Achievement Club. The club is named after the company's founder, chairman, and the originator of the unique marketing system used by Combined's representatives.

Bonselaar, who was promoted to a management position during his first year with Combined, has been repeatedly recognized for his exceptional sales performance. In order to win the Grand Diamond Award, Bonselaar was required to sell more than 500 accident and health insurance policies in six consecutive weeks.

In order to achieve this objective, Bonselaar said, "I just applied the techniques I learned in Combined's sales training school when I joined the company in May, 1968."

Bonselaar, 31, originally from Holland, Mich., was an industrial engineer before he joined Combined.

The Best Daily Newspaper in Illinois

Paddock Publications was recently awarded First Place for General Excellence in the 1970 Illinois Press Association Newspaper Competition.

In achieving this recognition, Paddock Publications surpassed other daily newspapers in the state, including the four metropolitan dailies of Chicago (Tribune was No. 2).

Additional First Place awards were presented for Best Photography, Best News Story, Best Typography and Makeup and Best Sports Coverage.

We appreciate these awards and extend a hearty "thank you" to the Illinois Press Association, and to our many readers and advertisers who share these awards with us.

Jayson scoops the shirt story with a real headliner. Takes a dramatic, multi-hued print, features it against an ecru background. Puts it all together in a permanent press blend of 65% Dacron polyester - 35% cotton that stays wrinkle free whatever the forecast. The tailoring story reads like this morning's headline — current and to the point. Back darts for a leaner, slimmer profile, full, long point collar, deep, two-button cuffs.

Harper Wins 6th Straight Despite A 'Mental Lapse'

by PAUL LOGAN

Basketball teams are beset with many problems during a season. Such things as injuries, sickness and ineptibilities are not uncommon.

Harper College's high-powered quintet experienced another enemy from within Tuesday night, as one player afterwards explained: "I think it was a mental lapse."

The Hawks, playing at Wheeling High School for the first time, showed their strength in the first half against Kankakee College by racing out to a 50-34 lead. Then the Hawks, by one player's own admission, seemed to get overconfident and careless.

Back came the Cavaliers to close the gap with three and a half minutes remaining, 74-68. However, Kevin Barthule helped lead the Hawks out of danger with six of their last 11 points for an 85-76 victory.

"I think we got these leads in the first half and then we let up and think we've got it made," said a not too happy Dave Etienne, Harper's head coach. "We've played seven good first halves and we haven't put two good halves together all year."

Still, Harper rolled up its sixth straight victory against just one loss as Kankakee, its non-conference opponent, fell to 3-4.

There seemed to be no doubt about this win in the first half as the Hawks ran and pressed the Cavaliers to near exhaustion. Leading only 10-7, the Hawks forced six quick turnovers off their full court press and outscored the visitors a ton to take a 25-8 advantage with 12:28 remaining. They maintained this bulge until halftime.

"The first half we played pretty well but we missed a lot of scoring opportunities," said Etienne. "Our last break was good all night but we didn't take advantage of those three-on-ones enough."

Forward Jeff Algaier, lean and lightning-quick, and Barthule, the team's leading scorer, cashed in quite a few times on the break. Algaier poured in seven field goals and Barthule five. However, the latter might have had many more but had to sit out a good portion of the first half because of three fouls.

Harper, a 20 for 40 from the field performance in the first half, didn't get many shots (11 of 28) in the second because of 19 turnovers. The Hawks didn't get their first field goal until 15:25 on a driving layup by center Don Spry to make it 55-42.

Aiding the Kankakee comeback was Roger Schultz. Although not seeing action at all in the first half, Schultz tossed in 15 points including seven out of eight baskets at one stretch. His last put them six points back.

Then Terry Rohan hit a free throw, Barthule a driving layup and a pair of free throws, Algaier a basket, Jeff Boyer two free throws and Barthule the same. Barthule finished with 11 of 12 from the foul line after shooting only 60 per cent in earlier games.

"I've been shooting every way possible," said the highly touted 6-2 guard of his efforts to break out of his foul slump. "This is similar to my jump shot, I'm sticking with it the rest of the year."

Barthule led all scorers with 29 points followed by Algaier (22), Rohan and Scott Feige (12).

Spry pulled down 14 of the Hawks' 43 rebounds with Algaier and Rohan getting 10 and 9, respectively. Kankakee also had 43.

GENERAL JIM. Arlington guard Jim Hopkins comes down court against Forest View's Tom Mueller Friday night. Cardinal coach George Zigman praised Hopkins for giving the needed leadership for a 68-48 victory. Besides his steady defense and ball handling, Hopkins dished out several assists and scored eight point. Mueller had five.

Alex 'Sacks' 300 'Quarterbacks'

AS FAR AS luncheons are concerned, I never enjoyed one more than I did Monday.

The second Paddock Publications Pro Sports Club Luncheon was a most well spent hour and a half for everyone I talked to or overheard. The food was tasty. However, that didn't draw the capacity house at Old Orchard Country Club.

Responsible for packing the place was that jocular jock, that funny football fat-man, that waggish welder of witty words — Alex Karras.

Since the banquet room is small, it allows the audience to have a much more intimate association with the guest speaker. Still, this limiting factor is a drawback for only 300 people can be seated. Just as a month before when Chicago Bear quarterback Bobby Douglass was the celebrity, many people had to be turned away because of an early sellout.

For those who couldn't attend for one reason or another, some of the many things this cross between Don Rickles and Howard Cosell said will follow.

(Karras mentions "Father" in several excerpts while referring to Rev. Patrick Cahill, St. Viator's athletic director. The good-natured priest, invocation speaker at the banquet, weathered the wordy storm with typical class. Thanks, Father.)

• (On the Bears' home field) — "I think Soldier Field is a terrific place to watch a ball game . . . back in 1963."

• (On his joining the Washington Redskins) — "No, I don't want to play with old timers. They're not very exciting. After a ball game, those old guys go home and elevate their feet and that's it. I'm never going to get that old."

• (On draft money) — "When I came into the league in 1953, I was the No. 1 draft choice for the Detroit Lions. I signed for $8,000 — that was it. To give you an example of how it's come along, in the 1960s one No. 1 draft choice was paid for $500,000. And, incidentally, he was from Notre Dame, Father. You have a course down there entitled, 'How to screw your boss.'"

"The question always came up, 'Do you have any animosity because you signed for $8,000 and he signed for $500,000?' And I mean this in all sincerity. I never had any feelings for the guy who did that. Of course, I did have that feeling when I took him out to Lake Michigan. And when he walked for a mile and a half on the water . . . we didn't overpay him at all, Father."

• (On taking Jim Dooley's place) — "How would I like to coach the Bears? Father, do you have a cross over there?"

• (On calling the quarterback's plays) — "If I was a coach who had a 10-year veteran on my football team who had a reputation of being a pretty fair football player, I'd just let him call all of his plays. Although I may ask him to do certain things, I'd let him take control of the ball game. Of course, it's twofold there — first of all, I'd think he'd know more than I'd know about the situation because he was there and, secondly, if it is a bad call, I can always point my finger at him. I'm Greek, Sir, but I'm not dumb."

• (On artificial turf) — "Well, I don't like the artificial turf because I can't get dirty and I can't spit anymore. And that injures my play a little."

• (On Bear quarterback Bobby Douglass) — "He's never had any real experience in the National Football League. To say he's bad right now, truthfully, only time will tell. I'd tell you if he's a bum because I don't really care what people think. I always say what I want to — that's why I don't have a job, sir."

(On George Plimpton, author-athlete of "Paper Lion") — "The only problem with George Plimpton was we knew he really didn't know that much about athletes because the first time he went into the shower, he had a towel wrapped around him. Golly gee, George."

• (On Jim Brown, Cleveland fullback who ran over 1,000 yards in seven out of eight years, had both power and speed and never missed a game in his career) — "When you look at that (the statistics), you have to say nobody could touch him. He was beyond himself. Of course, the people in Chicago are always saying, 'Well, how about Gale Sayers?' I can honestly say, I don't know. I never tackled the (bleep)!"

• (On today's athletes) — "They're getting a much stronger foundation than I did in respect to the education they're getting. As far as athletics go, it's part of their curriculum. But I think they haven't emphasized the fact that if you play football, that's the only way to get ahead anymore. And that's the way I grew up. I had the idea that this was the only way I could get out of the industrial environment of the town I was in."

"These kids are much smarter than we were and I think it's because of the education they are receiving. I'm not knocking the athlete today because physically they are 100 per cent better than I was 10 years ago."

"You take Allen Paige (Minnesota Vikings) who's 12 years younger than I, and he's just an absolute sensation. And the reason he is is because of the great training he received as a boy — little league football, high school and college. The athletes today are much better than I was."

"And I hate the old men who come up and tell me, 'You should have been with us 20 years ago. We were really great.' Well, they were great in their time and certainly the ball players I played with were great in their time, but certainly they can't compare to the athletes of today. I love the kids today. I think they're great."

• (On Howard Cosell) — "I happen to like Howard Cosell. I'll tell you one thing about him, he at least tells you once in a while what's going on in the world. You may not like his opinions, but at least he's got guts enough to say what he thinks."

The same things he said about Cosell can be echoed about him. He has all the candor of Howard without the big words. Alex mixes his straight-from-the-shoulder pad monologues with just enough earthy expletives for effect.

The Paddock Publications Pro Sports Club promoters will really be challenged to match the previous two banquets.

Meadows Tops St. Viator JVs

by DON FRISKE

"Seventy-nine points has to be good, but it looks bad when you play wildly."

These were the words of Rolling Meadows head basketball coach Ken Arneson after his team had defeated the visiting Lions of St. Viator, 79-68, Tuesday night.

The last 3½ minutes of play were the wildest minutes of basketball anyone could ever witness. Both teams lost the ball many times on bad passes and players going out of bounds. As a result, only 10 points by both teams were scored in those final minutes.

The Mustangs have been getting balanced scoring. Four players scored in double figures. Mustang forward Len Link was high scorer for both teams with 26 points followed by center Gary Lesley who contributed 18. Forward Jack Lloyd and guard Pat Geegan each owned 12 points. Lesley also had 13 rebounds, 10 coming on defense.

High scorer for the Lions was Fred Hallahan with 17.

Mustang point totals have been increasing with every junior varsity game. In their first jayvee game they scored 54 points, in their second, 73, and now 79.

"We've proven we can score," said Arneson. "But we'll know more after this weekend when we play Elk Grove."

Elk Grove Hockey Teams Win One Against Dundee

The Elk Grove Village Amateur Hockey Association won one of four games against Dundee V.F.W. in Polar Dome action last week. In squirt action Elk Grove won their eighth straight by a 5-0 score to strengthen their first place lead. The Peeewees lost 3-1, the Bantams lost 7-0 and the Midgets lost 4-1.

In Sunday's action the Village Realty Juveniles tied the Chicago Royals 2-2 for their first point of the season.

Squirts
The Elk Grove Squirts put everything together and came up with a surprising 5-0 victory against the strong Dundee team. Coach Len Kasowski with assistants Jack Henrich and Ed Tucker expressed complete satisfaction with this team effort. Goals were scored by five different players — Jim Tucker, John Hayden, Steve Ruthowski, Dave Diepetto and Ed Kurpleski. Coach Kasowski also pointed out that fine work by the defensive unit plus fine goaltending by Andy Mitch provided the margin of victory. This by the way was Andy's third shut-out in goal since joining the Squirts.

Midgets
Elk Grove dropped a tough one to Dundee, 4-1. For twenty five minutes (the first period), neither team could score a goal. Both teams were digging hard, with excellent forechecking and backchecking. At the start of the second period Dundee scored their first goal.

Then they capitalized on a power play, when Larry Mitch went to the sinbin for spearing, making the score 2-0 Dundee. Elk Grove got on the scoreboard when Dundee got a penalty. Ron Ciolek took a pass from Jim Laing, moved in, and put the puck past Dundee's goalie. After that, Elk Grove ran out of gas, as Dundee was able to cross our Blue line three-on-two and three-on-one.

With this loss Elk Grove moved down to third place, one point out of second and three points out of first.

Wildcats Splash Past McHenry In 53-42 Meet

Sophomore speedster Bill Modica came from behind on the last leg of the last event on the card to assure Wheeling's swim team of a narrow 53-42 triumph over visiting McHenry Tuesday.

It was the fourth triumph in as many starts for Doug Cotner's redhot crew and the Wildcat sophs followed suit with a resounding 84-11 conquest of the Warriors to up their own slate to 3-0.

Modica had helped his team along earlier in the meet by ringing up a pair of firsts in individual events. He captured the 200 freestyle race at 2:09.4 and came back with a win in the 400 free at 4:37.1.

The hosts owned a 46-42 lead going into the final 400 freestyle relay event but were trailing in the race going down to Modica's stint. He turned in a 56.3 split while passing up his foe to hit the tape first.

The winning team time was 3:56.3, a new school record. Other members of the unit were John Wellbank, Fred Metz and Jim Wilbat.

Ken Bergman posted another new school mark while winning the 100 butterfly at 1:00.9 and added a second in the breaststroke with a 1:12.5 effort. The Wildcats also picked up solid pointage from Metz with a second in the 50 free (26.6), Wilbat with a second in the 100 free (1:01.2) and divers Jim Manago and Kurt Lau, who finished 1-2 respectively with 157.60 and 136.15 points.

Wheeling's medley relay team, consisting of Mike Stewart, Glen Lindquist, Bertman and Metz, also won by disqualification. Their time was 1:59.1.

On the frosh-soph plane the 'Cats toted off all the blue ribbons. Mike Pasdora won the 150 free, Brian Bell the individual medley, Mike Hyde the 50 free and butterfly, Bill Frenk netted diving honors, Mike Kennedy topped the 100 free, Randy Johnson the 300 free, Bob Bekkela the backstroke and Steve Paulus the breaststroke. Bekkela, Hyde, Paulus and Kennedy also teamed up to win the medley relay and Dan Woodruff, Ray Olson, Bob McDonald and Pasdora garnered freestyle relay honors.

Hersey's Swimmers Fall But Coach Is Encouraged

The return of Dave Colburn to the lineup propelled Hersey's swim team to their best effort of the season despite a losing result at East Leyden Tuesday.

The Eagles toppled the Huskies 59-35 but Hersey mentor Herb Parsons was well pleased with his team's showing. "We didn't expect to get many points at all over there but our kids made a real contest of it. With Colburn back among us, I think we're going to begin improving more rapidly from here on in."

Colburn, who has been sidelined by illness since the season began, helped a medley relay squad to victory in his initial outing and came on later to collect runnerup laurels in the 100 butterfly.

Colburn teamed with Garrit Ringenoldus, George Dodgen and Mike Richartz to post a 1:58.5 in the leadoff relay race and was clocked in at 1:13.3 in the butterfly.

Richartz turned in his usual top-notch effort, polling firsts in both the 50 free (23.9) and 100 free (53.7). Al Zasady added a blue ribbon showing in the diving competition with 170 points and Bob Bosley chipped in a first in the 200 free (2:04.1) and a third in the 100 (57.0).

The Hersey varsity tankers now own a 2-7 overall slate.

In the soph competition Tuesday, the Huskies continued to dominate the opposition, forging an impressive 78-17 conquest to up their record to 6-1-2.

Ken Henderson, Kevin Taylor and Craig Bruce headed up the victory with a pair of individual wins each along with some aid to a victorious relay teams.

The medley relay team won at 2:02.5 with Taylor and Bruce joining Jeff Siler and Bob Brede to do honors.

Hersey's winning 400 freestyle relay outfit consisted of Brede, Bob Butler, Bob Larue and Henderson and their time was 4:04.6.

Henderson dominated the 200 free (2:14.0) and 400 free (4:54.1), Taylor topped the field in the 200 freestyle

(2:34.0) and 100 butterfly (1:10.0) and Bruce bested all in the 50 free (25.1) and 100 breaststroke (1:15.0). Other firsts for the guests included Butler in the 100 free (58.8) and Silver in the 100 back (1:09.0) while Jeff Speakman took a second in diving and Larue lost out to Henderson by less than a second in the 200 free.

At Elk Grove Bowl

Marian Langlo, bowling in the Wednesday Night Ladies League at Elk Grove Bowl, proved that it doesn't matter what ball you're using when you get hot. Her own ball cracked in the fourth frame of her second game, but she continued bowling with a house ball and came up with a 550 series including a 213 game. . . Marion holds a 127 average.

Tartars Of Wayne

Wayne State University is the only college or university in the country with the nickname "Tartars." It was adopted by an all-school vote in 1927 and replaced such former tags as "Griffins" and "Munies."

Gabelich: A Daredevil Of Speed

by PHIL KURTH

Like Walter Mitty, Gary Gabelich has a lot of dreams.

Sometimes he sees himself floating toward the earth, the air rushing past in exhilarating freshness, conquering the atmosphere, diving through the sky.

Sometimes he sees himself as an astronaut, a test pilot being subjected to the dangers of space in a pressurized chamber.

Sometimes he's skimming along in a hydro boat at 300 miles an hour.

And sometimes he's roaring along the Bonneville Salt Flats, 600-650 miles an hour in a rocket propelled vehicle as the world salutes and crowns him king of speed.

Unlike Walter, Gary Gabelich is real and his deeds are real.

Gary Gabelich

A year ago the 30-year-old Californian streaked across the Salt Flats at 622.407 m.p.h. in The Blue Flame to shatter the old record of 600.681 set by Craig Breedlove in 1965.

In past years, Gary was a sky diver, a drag racer, a test astronaut in the Apollo program. In 1969 he set a record at Perris, Calif., for the fastest speed ever recorded by the National Drag Boat Association.

Last week he sat and talked about the challenge, the thrill, and the compelling lure of speed.

"Even when I was in junior high, I can remember drawing pictures of a missile and putting wheels on it. I was always fascinated by fast cars and I always wanted to race."

And now that he's the fastest man in the world on land, he's looking at new horizons in speed.

"I want to be the first man through the sound barrier, and I think the barrier could be broken within a year or so."

"Sometime next year there's a match race in the planning stage with Craig Breedlove. It'll be the first time rocket cars have raced, and we both feel we could break the sound barrier with the cars we're working on now. We could be hitting speeds up to 800-850 miles per hour."

"Craig is sort of the grand-daddy of the Salt Flats. He was the first man to go over 400, and 500, and 600, and I want to beat him in the match race. I feel my new design is better than his just as I'm sure he feels his is better than mine."

Breedlove and Gabelich have been approached for closed circuit TV rights to the race, the winner getting $400,000 and the loser $100,000.

But money doesn't stimulate Gary, not the way challenge and speed do. When he talks of goals and ambitions and setting new records, there isn't a trace of boast. Arrogance and immodesty belong to a world of men and words. For Gary, speed is the glory.

"It's the most natural, exhilarating, 'high' type of feeling there is. There's just no other way you could get that kind of a feeling."

"Your senses are at their absolute edge. Your thinking clears up, your reaction time is at its peak, and your sensitivity to what's going on around you becomes extraordinary."

He closed his eyes for a moment, thought back, and recounted the feeling as The Blue Flame flew across the Salt Flats, accelerating to 350 m.p.h. within nine seconds and to 650 within 22 seconds.

"As the car accelerates, you feel like you're one working thing. You're part of the car and the car is part of you. I had the sensation that the car was riding on a layer of air. It was just a tremendous, beautiful feeling."

"Then you get the first parachute out, and it slams you forward at about 7 to 10 g's. The car actually feels like it's standing on its nose. You're pushed forward so hard that you're locked in, and for a moment you're afraid you might 'red-out' because of the force of the negative g's. You can see red at the top of your eyelids."

"Then you release another toggle switch and the pressure balances and your head clears and you're back again."

The Blue Flame was built in two years at a cost of some $500,000. It measures 38 feet in length, 8 feet from the ground to the top of the tail fin. Its total weight, without fuel, is 6,500 pounds.

Sponsored by the natural gas industry, The Blue Flame was designed and constructed by the Institute of Gas Technology in Chicago by Reaction Dynamics, Inc., of Milwaukee. Its fuel is basically a very cold form of natural gas which is liquefied by reducing its temperature to minus 258 degrees Fahrenheit.

Gary is currently on a promotional junket for Northern Illinois Gas Co., visiting various high schools in the state during the first year anniversary of his record run.

And he has a personal message for thrill-seeking youth.

"There are so many natural highs to get involved in that it seems really tragic to get involved in drugs. I've seen a lot of good drivers do it, and really waste their lives. You can't be involved in heavy drugs and be involved in any type of sport or activity that requires good reaction time and coordination."

And Gary does his best to keep himself physically fit.

"I run every chance I get to keep the cardiovascular system sound. I try to play handball to keep my reaction time up. I try to eat good foods, and I like health foods so it isn't hard."

Even though the body is strong and healthy, instant death hovers over the men of speed. A slight mistake, a microscopic malfunction, and it's all over.

"My mom doesn't care for my racing. She fears for my life. But she realizes that I love to do it and that if I get killed doing it, I'd go out with a smile on my face."

"Oh, I have moments of fear, but that's usually long before a race. At the starting line all your fears and worries and thoughts of something going wrong disappear."

"You don't have time to think about being afraid. Your total concentration is on getting the job done and winning the race."

With each new speed, there's the danger and the mystery of the unknown and Gary admits that he had some disquieting moments before his record run at Bonneville.

"About four or five months before we ran I had a dream and I saw The Blue Flame crash and spin end over end. Then I had another dream and I saw myself in a coffin. It was a funny kind of feeling."

"But I spoke with Breedlove and (Art) Arfons about it and they told me the same kind of things had happened to them. So I just shook it off."

"Everything was all right then until I was actually strapped in The Blue Flame for the first time. You look out, and guys are running in different directions, and you get a strange kind of sensation."

"I didn't really know what was going to happen. I just took a couple of deep breaths and said, well, here we go, let's see what happens."

"The big thing is that no matter what happens, you have to keep it together. If you panic, you lose your life."

"Before we ran the car, I'd sit in the driver compartment hours at a time blindfolded and familiarize myself with every instrument so that I knew where everything was in case of an emergency."

A new dimension in speed will be reached when the sound barrier is broken on the ground and scientists and engineers are unsure what the physical result will be.

"Some feel that shock waves will go down and hit the ground and blow the car right off the ground. Others say that because of the shape of the car, cylindrical on the bottom rather than flat, the waves will come off the side and hit the ground and bounce away. I'd naturally rather believe them."

A daredevil of motion, Gabelich had one big disappointment the day of his record run.

"After it was all over, it was kind of a letdown. I wanted to go faster. And I still do."

"I have three big goals right now. I want to break the sound barrier, win the match race with Craig, and break the water record. I'd like to be the first man ever to hold the land and the water speed record at the same time, and live to tell about it."

"And I have a rocket poer boat design that will run close to 300-350 miles per hour safely. The record now is about 285."

Perhaps, Gary Gabelich was destined from the start to be the fastest man on land or water. It certainly looked like there was some divine direction at Bonneville.

"It was the last chance we were to have. The natural gas industry had notified us that day that if we didn't break the record, we'd have to go home and be content to know ourselves that we had the world's fastest car."

"But I really wanted that record."

"We had enough fuel left for six runs. The first one was 617 miles per hour. The crew worked very fast and turned the vehicle around and put it in position to run the other way."

The official speed at Bonneville is clocked between the fifth and sixth miles of the 10-mile track. After the vehicle goes through the clocked mile one way, it must turn around and go the other way, or the speed clocked during the first pass does not count. It must also take that second run within one hour after the first pass.

"By then we had eight minutes left for the second run. I remember it was a very cloudy, overcast day, and there was a kind of dreariness in the air."

"Then all of a sudden the sky kind of opened up and the sun shone on the measured mile. That really did something for me. I figured, well, if the Man is with us, how can we miss."

Snowmobiling Guide Ready

Snowmobiling, The Guide, by John W. Malo, of Glenview, just published by Collier Books, The Macmillan Company (Paperback $3.95; cloth $7.95), contains all you want to know about snowmobiling — different kinds of machines, manufacturers (with addresses), optional equipment and accessories, and driving instructions.

A complete list of state and province offices from which to get all information on trails and regulations governing snowmobiling in their areas, tips on towing or trailering the snowmobile to them, add to a sense knowing what it's all about.

How to dress, plan for and enjoy trips, cruises, safaris, camping trips, and ice fishing, are discussed in detail, and games and related activities such as skiing and para sailing are illustrated.

For those who enjoy club activities, information on getting in touch with club officers, literature and free-booking films for programs, how to lay out and maintain a trail and the advantages of affiliation with an association are aids to that end.

For those who enjoy spectator sports, as well as competition, there is a list of annual events, a list of stock machines accepted in sanctioned races, an explanation of the various types of races for men, college and high school students, and "Powder Puff." Pictures of some of the teams, company and independent, and information on insurance and a proposed union of drivers are included.

Eagle River Snow Races

The Eagle River, Wis., Lions Club, sponsors of the eighth annual World's Championship Snowmobile Derby, Jan. 21-22-23, have announced there will be a guaranteed cash total prize purse of $20,000.

Miller Brewing Company of Milwaukee is also presenting huge and impressive Champagne Bucket trophies to winners of the world's championship feature race and distinctively styled Miller trophies to winners of the class races on the twin Eagle River tracks. Other trophies committed to date include Milwaukee Sentinel trophies for the women's division. Trophies will also be awarded in the junior division and contingency cash awards are swelling the total cash purse.

Considered by drivers as the number one race in the world, the World Championships are again expected to provide spectators with the most exciting racing seen in the sport today. A fast one-third mile oval and sporty, challenging seven and a half mile speed/obstacle course provide the setting for the spectacular action. The events are sanctioned by the United States Snowmobile Association.

Driver information and entry blanks are available by writing Bud Rismon, Box 158, Eagle River, Wis. 54521. Hotel-motel accommodation information is available by writing the Municipal Information Bureau, Eagle River, Wis., 54521.

Hersey Frosh Tourney Set

Hersey will act as host and protector both at their fourth annual freshman basketball tournament, slated to open Tues., Dec. 21 at 7 p.m.

Seven other schools will join the Huskies for the three-day meet. Last year the home team went on to gain championship honors after Maine South had walked off with the first two trophies.

Tuesday's opener will see Mundelein tangle with Maine West while the hosts take on Barrington in an 8:30 tilt. Other entries, all slated for action the following evening are the Hawks, Schaumburg, Deerfield and Elk Grove.

The Grenadiers open against Deerfield at 8:30, Dec. 22.

The semi-finals will be conducted Thursday morning with the finals, consolation and championship, kicking off at 7 p.m. Dec. 3. Tickets each session are 50 cents for students and one dollar for adults.

Schaumburg Gymnasts In Tough Loss

Schaumburg's gymnastics squad climbed to another season high only to drop a heartbreaker to visiting Downers Grove North in non-conference dual action Tuesday.

The Saxons, with Steve Riggio in his first go at all around, tallied 75.20, more than ten points over their score of the previous weekend. It still came out a little more than a point shy of the Trojans at 76.45.

Riggio went on to post a 5.15 all-around average and dominate that event but is still not back up to pre-season form according to Schaumburg pilot Gary LaRocco. "He might have been jittery too, since this was actually his first full meet. I expect him to come on much stronger as the season progresses."

Riggio turned in a 5.5 in free exercise, good for second, tied for side horse honors at 4.4 and won the parallel bars and still rings events outright with scores of 5.8 and 6.85 respectively. Rich Minow added a second on the tramp and Craig Sallisburg and Mike Indovina contributed a 2-3 showing on the side horse.

The Saxon sophomores meanwhile, under the direction of Steve Scott, posted a 32-25 victory over Downers Grove. Keying the win were Asle Klemma, Gary Caprera and all around Steve Mazcko.

Fund-Raiser Planned For Schlickman

Backers of state Rep. Eugene F. Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, will sponsor a fund-raising event for his re-election campaign on Feb. 11 at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

Dwight F. Walton, chairman for the affair, said the event will combine a brief testimonial featuring political figures and "old-time auction."

State Rep.

Items to be auctioned include antiques, decorative items, political memorabilia and merchandise and personal services donated by Schlickman constituents.

Walton, an Arlington Heights village trustee, asked persons wishing to donate items for the auction to contact him at 392-9415.

Schlickman will seek re-election in the new 4th Legislative District, which includes the southeast portion of Wheeling Township, and parts of Maine and Niles townships. Also entered in the primary in that district are state Rep. Robert S. Juckett of Park Ridge, and Gerald M. Arubin of Skokie.

IN THE DINING ROOM Toni has a dark walnut trestle table. Area rug combined open-backed natural peccan chairs with rose velvet seats and wood floor.

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Perched crosswise atop a grassy knoll on a corner lot, the Rafael Garcia residence in Palatine appears as unusual and attractive as those who dwell inside.

A Delta Airlines stewardess for seven years, Toni Garcia was involved in one of the first plane hijackings to Cuba. Rafael, a mechanical and electrical engineer from Havana, is now manager for mobile telephones and telephone products, Latin American Division, of Motorola.

Introduced by friends in the United States, the couple has been married four years and are world travelers. "We've been all over Europe at least a dozen times," said Toni. They've also enjoyed jaunts to Mexico, to the Orient and this past year, a camera safari to Africa. When Rafael is away because of his job, Toni often flies to England for a three or four-day shopping trip.

ONCE SHE settles down to raise a family the Delta hostess knows she'll be happy and find plenty to do. She likes homemaking. She loves to cook and to entertain... the Garcias give many special parties. Fluent in Spanish (she majored in languages at the University of Florida in Gainesville and studied Spanish in Mexico), Toni often helps her husband entertain Spanish-speaking customers.

She also sews, does needlework, all her own decorating... and she has a penchant for art and design she hopes to pursue some day. An example of her artistic bent is the airy pattern Toni created for the wrought iron divider topping a half wall that separates the dining room from their el-shaped foyer and the wrought iron gates separating the other end of the el from kitchen and dining room.

Toni's favorite room is the family room where comfortable furnishings and accessories reflect her preference for eclectic decor and antiques... and the couple's interests and travels.

BRIGHT RED shag carpeting and ecru open weave drapes at patio doors provide the background for this relaxation and entertainment center. As a joint project, Toni and Rafael drew up plans for a wall of decorative shelves. Here they display books, TV, stereo, collections, objets d'art and stereo and photography accessories.

Toni pointed out a woodcarving brought back from Ecuador, a crystal decanter from England, her owl collection from Spain. Other travel mementoes include a hand-carved fisherman of rosewood from Taiwan, a pewter candlestick from Denmark, Hummel figurines fashioned in Germany, Celadon pottery from Bangkok and rhino bookends hand-carved in Kenya.

However, Toni treasures most the antiques she searched out both at home and abroad. A Pembroke table, circa 1785, is her favorite. Found in England along with a butler's tray from about 1880, this small drop-leaf table is of mahogany banded in rosewood. "I just love it!" exclaimed the happy quater.

THE ANTIQUES blend with such eclectic furnishings as a traditional three-cushion couch with spindle sides, Rafael's contemporary brown leather chair and ottoman and a velvety area rug of llama fur from Peru.

INDIVIDUALITY MARKS the brick ranch home of Rafael and Toni Garcia in Palatine... from its attractive entryway with blue and yellow Mexican tiles lining the door and the risers of the front steps to the Latin American decor of its interior. Toni designed this entry because she disliked "just a plain sidewalk." Lush English ivy, seasonal flowers and other plantings line the circular stepping stones surrounded by loose quartz.

UNUSUAL TIME teller is the Garcias' 17th century clock with only one hand. Stones serve as weights to turn the cog wheels that operate the hand.

FAVORITE ROOM of the Garcias is their family room where the couple display mementoes of their many travels along with the antiques that Toni has collected. They designed the shelf arrangement, and Rafael put the shelves together using carved table legs for supports. Dowel rods make for easy dismantling. Frequent entertainers, the Garcias take their guests to this room first for cocktails before dinner.

TONI'S PENCHANT FOR design is apparent in the airy pattern she created for these wrought iron divider doors leading from front foyer to the kitchen and family room.

Susanne Suckow Is Bride

It was while Susanne Suckow of Mount Prospect was attending Northwestern University that she met Donald Beard of Augusta, Ill. Susanne was earning her degree in dental hygiene and Donald was working on a master's in business administration. The couple, now graduated, were married Nov. 20 in St. Mark Lutheran Church, Mount Prospect, at 4:30 in the afternoon.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Earl E. Suckow, 617 Glendale Lane. She and the groom, son of the William L. Beards, exchanged vows and rings by candlelight before the Rev. Donald J. Quill.

Susanne chose her sister Donna as maid of honor. Among the six bridesmaids were her other sisters, Ruth and Dyanne Suckow and Mrs. Laura Nelson, Chicago. The other bridesmaids were the groom's sister, Dee Dee Beard, Schiller Park; a cousin of the bride, Nancy Lichte, Chicago; and Sue Runyon, Lake Bluff.

BEST MAN was the groom's brother, Bill Beard of Colorado Springs, and ushers included Barry Burron, Elgin; Rusty Nelson, the bride's brother-in-law; Bruce Ackermann, Niles; Phil Ralston, Colorado Springs; and Randy Shaf, Morton Grove.

Susanne wore her sister Laura's bridal headpiece, a cluster of fabric flowers etched in pearls and crystals, to hold her cathedral-length veil in place. Her gown was white sate peau with a high neckline, bishop sleeves and a panel down the front, all trimmed in Alencon lace. A row of tiny covered buttons ran down the center of the lace panel from neck to hemline. The gown ended in a chapel train.

The bride carried a cascade of stephanotis and ivy with two large white orchids in the center.

ALL OF HER attendants wore gold colored gowns with Empire bodices of crushed velvet and skirts of crystal sheer. The cuffs of the long sheer sleeves were also edged with gold velvet. The girls' bouquets were cascades of bronze daisy pompons with ivy foliage.

Mrs. Suckow was attired in a mint green silk worsted gown and Mrs. Beard in powder blue silk for the wedding festivities. Both mothers had a white orchid corsage.

The wedding reception was held at the Starlight Inn in Schiller Park for 180 guests. The couple then honeymooned in Jamaica for a week and are living in Oak Park.

Susanne was graduated from Forest View High School and attended North Park College, Chicago, for two years before transferring to Northwestern. She is working in a dental office in Chicago.

Her husband, a Knox College graduate, is employed by Martin, Johnson and Bolton, an accounting firm in Chicago.

New Wedding Deadlines

The Herald has come a long way since the days when the Paddock newspapers were weekly publications; yet over the years wedding story deadlines remained unchanged.

However, in an effort to report timely news, the Herald are now announcing a policy change in wedding story deadlines effective Jan. 1, 1972. Weddings taking place after Dec. 31, 1971, will be subject to the new deadlines as follows:

For detailed wedding story (including gown descriptions and a listing of attendants) wedding information is due in Herald office within three weeks following wedding date. Information received in Herald office after three weeks and up to five weeks following wedding date will be used for a brief story only or caption.

THE HERALD requests a 5 x 7 black and white glossy close-up photo (bouquet and up) of bridal pair or bride alone. At the discretion of the editors and the Herald photo department color photos may or may not be used, depending on color tones, contrast and clarity. Small snapshots are not acceptable.

We suggest the bride or some member of the family select a photo for the newspaper immediately upon receiving photographer's proofs. Any delay may mean missing the deadline.

If your photographer cannot comply with deadlines, write-up will be published without a photo providing information is in the Herald office before the deadline.

Wedding forms are available at the Herald offices. There is no charge for publishing wedding stories or photos.

It's Fashion

by United Press International

What do sheets and the story of Cinderella have in common? They both imply magical powers — the ability to turn one thing into another. For example, a vivid patterned sheet makes a bright, budget-minded bedcover or matching or coordinating curtains and pillow shams.

The one-piece ski outfit for women is back, but appears in the character of World War II bomber suit.

Ski sweaters are slimmer, some in short puffer forms to go with racer length parkas, others tunic length and cabled, with belts or lace front closures. All are designed to offer endless mix, match and layer combinations to the skier.

Braids no longer are restricted to the little girls' hair style. With new evening fashions, they look good but very chic when wrapped and tied to form loops and geometric designs.

Restrictions ease in the shirtwaist fashion silhouette for spring, report Celanese fashion coordinators. A feeling of controlled relaxation takes over. Shoulders go wider, collars go larger, necklines go higher. Sleeves frequently are puffed. Clean, tailored, orderly lines prevail but don't restrict.

Honeymoon At Disney World

A week at Disney World in Florida was the honeymoon for Mr. and Mrs. Larry L. Smith who were married Nov. 27 in Chattanooga, Tenn. The bride is the former Theresa Nancy Jacomino, daughter of the John Jacomino, 1215 Francis Drive, Arlington Heights, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Stanley E. Smith of Memphis and the late Mr. Smith.

Theresa attended high school in Chattanooga and earned a B.S. degree and medical technology degree from Memphis State University and the University of Tennessee Medical Unit. She is employed by the Pediatric Medical Research Center at the University of Tennessee. Her bridegroom studied in the architectural division of Memphis State University.

FOR HER WEDDING, which was held in First Lutheran Church, Theresa chose an Empire gown of white satin overlaid with Chantilly lace appliques trimmed in seed pearls. The train had a chapel train and a deep border of the lace trimmed the hemline of the gown. A cascade of white Sweetheart roses centered with a white orchid completed her ensemble.

A cousin from Seaford, N.Y., Lucille Conti, was maid of honor. Four bridesmaids, three bridesmaids, a flower girl and ring bearer also attended the bride. The girls were in petal rose chiffon gowns with white crocheted lace bodices, and they carried pink roses.

Mike Thomas of San Antonio, Texas, was best man. Ushers included the bride's brother, John Jacomino Jr., Arlington Heights.

The reception for 200 guests was held at the Chattanooga Golf and Country Club.

Sally Wolfe

Susan Heimerle

Diana King

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wolfe of Mount Prospect announce the engagement of their daughter Sally to Tom Gordon, son of Mrs. Mary Gordon, Penfield, Ill., and the late Mr. Gordon. The couple is planning a spring wedding.

Sally, a '65 graduate of Prospect High School, and her fiancé are both graduates of the University of Illinois. Sally received her B. A. in anthropology in '69, her M. S. in comparative education in 1971. She is on the faculty of Parkland Junior College in Champaign while doing graduate work at the University of Illinois.

Tom received his undergraduate degree in 1963, his J. D. degree from the law school in 1967. He is with the law firm of Franklin, Flynn and Palmer, Champaign.

The engagement of Susan Marie Heimerle to James T. Pokryfke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Pokryfke, 681 Lance Drive, Des Plaines, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Myron C. Heimerle, 18 Wildwood Drive S., Prospect Heights. The couple has set a July 15, 1972 wedding date.

Susan, a graduate of Sacred Heart of Mary High School, studied at Harper College and is employed by Wieboldt's, Inc. Her fiancé was with the Marines for three years and is now attending the University of Illinois Chicago Circle campus majoring in criminal justice.

A March 18, 1972 wedding is planned by Diana Lee King and Michael Andrew Damko, son of the Andrew G. Damkos, 115 S. Weller Lane, Mount Prospect. The couple's engagement and approaching marriage are announced by Diana's parents, the Elhs W. Kings, 1314 N. Highland, Arlington Heights.

Diana, a '67 graduate of Arlington High School, will graduate next June from the College of Nursing at the University of Illinois Medical Center. Michael, a graduate of Loyola and the University of Illinois, is studying at Northwestern Dental School and will graduate in June '73.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: We recently bought an omelet pan described as the type the French use — heavy, cold rolled steel with sloping sides. Instructions warned against the use of soap and water for cleaning; only a paper towel or soft cloth was to be used. Before re-use, we again wipe with a paper towel and the towel is invariably stained a dark rusty brown. It takes several brisk wipings with fresh towels to remove this stain. Are we doing something wrong?

—Granger Adams

Omelet fanciers say you must be brave to eat the fat too much. Midge St. Denis, a gourmet cook, says you must heat the pan slowly and check with a drop of water. If it dances across the pan, it's the moment to put in the butter or oil. When it looks hot and sizzling (not brown) pour in the eggs. Quickly done, the fat will not have a chance to get brown. Wiping out the pan with paper towels should then be free of stain annoyance.

Dear Dorothy: I keep ballpoint pens in various parts of the house to have one available whenever I need it. However, they dry up. Is there any way to start the ink flowing again?

—W.B. Drane St.

Keeping the caps on is the only way to keep these pens working. Heating the tips will sometimes work but then for only a brief period.

Dear Dorothy: Do you or your readers have trouble with permanent press fabrics pilling? Even though I always wash and dry these garments by themselves, after a few times the fuzzy balls appear.

—Mrs. A.M.

Depending on whether these materials rub against other fabrics will determine the appearance of these fuzzy balls. There's nothing much you can do except gently remove them with a little defuzzing gadget found at most notions centers. Most people must accept them as part of the advantage of the "convenience" fabrics.

Mrs. Ritz welcomes hints and questions. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope. Write to Mrs. Ritz in care of Suburban Living, Padlock Publications, Box 220, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

THE FINISHED PRODUCT. For the past few years, Arlington Heights Garden Club members have decorated the Memorial Library's Christmas tree. This year only white homemade ornaments were used. Plastic straws were used for garland and macaroni sprayed white mounted on cardboard made up other ornaments. The carousel on top of the tree is made out of yarn. Campfire girls and Cub Scouts helped make some of the decorations.

Safe Tree Lighting

NEW YORK (UPI) — Check sets of electric lights closely before putting them on the Christmas tree suggests the National Fire Protection Association. Look for worn insulation, broken plugs, loose bulb sockets. Repair the damaged parts or discard the set and use in its place a new one — provided inspection shows the replacement set in good working order. Use only sets with Underwriters' Laboratories (UL) or Canadian Standards Association (CSA).

TO SHOW OFF the medallion in the center of their Oriental living room rug, Toni selected a glass topped table. The Greek key design of the window valance is an original by Toni.

Latin American Style

"A really fun piece" purchased recently is a wingback chair-and-a-half upholstered in brown, black and cream plaid. "We wonder who will sit in it... two slender people or one heavy one?" Toni laughed.

The hospitable homemaker spends much time whipping up delicacies for friends in her 12 by 16 foot kitchen that adjoins the family room. The couple's first project shares attention with harvest gold appliances and dark brown cabinets trimmed in black hardware. Four farm chairs that Toni found in Long Grove circle the round knotty pine table with wrought iron base put together by the man of the house. Rafael took the chairs apart, stripped and sanded them, and then Toni antiques them orange-red. They want to install Mexican tiles in the kitchen work area as their next project, Toni said.

DINING AND living areas in the Garcia home further demonstrate their individuality. Toni dislikes matched sets so she put together natural pecan dining chairs and a dark walnut trestle table. They painted the walls gray-blue and coupled them with blue-on-blue traditional wallpaper in the living room and grass cloth in the dining room. Toni spotted the wallpaper for the foyer while walking down a small street in England. Dark oak floors in both rooms are accented with fringed champagne wool with pastel floral design rugs from India.

For the living room windows Toni chose matched antique satin draw draperies in champagne with sheer window curtains accented by a deep quilted valance in a Greek key design of her own creation. The sculptured garden visible outside the picture window was also designed by the mistress of the house. At night they spotlight it.

THOUGH TONI selected traditional chairs and loveseat for the living area, other decorating periods are represented. A contemporary parson's table holds a Mediterranean lamp. Swagged over their ebony grand piano hangs a leaded lamp. To show off the center medallion in the Oriental rug she chose a glass top cocktail table with antique gold wrought iron base. Here she also displays another favorite antique found in England, a two-tiered bedside steptable in faded mahogany.

Accessories the Garcias value most in their living room are a signed lithograph by Norman Rockwell and a carving of Don Quixote, holding outstretched sword. "We searched all over for him and finally found exactly what we wanted in Spain!"

Blending perfectly into this home of free expression are the couple's two cats, Chulo (wise guy), a lilac point Siamese, and Compinch or "Pinche" (buddy or companion), a golden-eyed Abyssinian.

The Potting Shed

by Mary B. Good

How tickled am I! I've just learned that Pollution and Environmental Problems (PEP) ecology group has created a continuing annual conservation award program.

I am deeply touched that the board of directors of PEP chose to call this award "The Mary B. Good Trillium Award." It will be presented each year to the person or group deemed to have performed unique services in the field of conservation.

A degradation award will also be presented annually. For this, they've got the "Mary B. Good Ragweed Award."

This honor makes me feel something akin to the John Hancock Building, Kosciuszko Park or the Pulaski Road bus.

I don't know that I did anything extra special to deserve such an honor — it's teamwork that gets jobs done — but I'll take it anyway!

Since I left the bosom of PEP, they've been up to lots of new developments.

For those who wonder if the Prairie Park Organic Gardening project will still "be" next year, I'm happy to report that Jane Murphy of Schaumburg is the new Prairie Farmer, to be assisted by John Rausch of Hoffman Estates. Prairie Park is located in Arlington Heights.

PEP and the village of Palatine have received a great deal of credit from the Clean Air Coordinating Committee for the stand they took concerning the spraying of insecticides into the atmosphere.

PEP allocated funds to the Student's Environmental Action Committee of Palatine High School to finance a model compost pile.

PEP is assisting Paddock School in Palatine with its beautification project.

PEP is cleaning creeks, setting up more recycling centers, getting active in community affairs and also may have a sister group forming in the Oak Park-River Forest area. Lake and DuPage Counties are on the horizon, and the action committee may possibly federate environmental groups eventually.

PEP OFFICIAL advisors comprise a prominent list of competent professional people including Dr. Bertram Carnow, spokesman for the TV Institute and University of Illinois College of Medicine professor; David Rosenbaum, chief investigator, Environmental Control Division of the Illinois Attorney General's office; David Regner, Illinois House of Representatives; Richard Kates, chairman, Clean Air Co-ordinating Committee; Robert Laver, vice president of engineering, Defenders of the Fox River, Inc.; Richard Dawson, director of environmental health, Village of Palatine; Bradley Glass, Illinois House of Representatives, Committee on Lake Michigan Pollution; and Joseph Karanganis, special assistant to the Illinois Attorney General's Office for Environmental Quality. The office is at 49 S. Greeley, Palatine.

If ever anyone questioned their capability to tackle anything as complex and overwhelming as pollution, PEP is a good example of what individuals can do.

DuBrow On TV

by Rick DuBrow

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — It's an old show business axiom that satire is what closes on Saturday night. There are exceptions, of course — especially in the hip new movies aimed at bright young audiences — but television is generally about as hip as the Fox Trot, and the old belief about satire applies as before. Just as James Garner.

Garner is on view this season in a new one-hour NBC-TV series called "Nichols," and he is back at his old stand as a very reluctant hero who really would prefer almost anything to getting involved in trouble, especially if violence is threatened. His show is a Western with a contemporary, tongue-in-cheek attitude toward frontier codes and escapades, and he plays the title role, a fellow literally forced against his will to become sheriff of a mangy little town.

WELL, THAT ALL sounds pretty funny, knowing Garner's aptitude for this kind of stuff — in movies, and also long ago in another tongue-in-cheek television Western, "Maverick," which co-starred Jack Kelly. And the fact is that, although Garner is doing the kind of part he had done often before, and could probably do in his sleep, he still is pretty funny and adept at it, and is an amusingly civilized fellow to have around. The chances are, though, he won't be around after this season.

FOR THE FACT is that he is getting killed in the ratings too much of the time for NBC-TV's corporate comfort. And unless he does a dramatic turnabout in the ratings — which this viewer would like to see — he surely would be a hard sell to the network for another season.

And that is a pity, for while it's true his show is no masterpiece, it is at least a low pressure, pleasant piece of work as opposed to much video violence.

Vanocur Tells Why He Quit

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former NBC anchorman Sander Vanocur said recently he quit the network after 15 years because he came to the conclusion that broadcast commentators are used as transmission belts for the views of established authority.

Writing in the current issue of Esquire magazine, Vanocur said he suffered irreconcilable conflicts of conscience after visiting Vietnam in 1965 and again after the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

"I knew that we would be mired for years in Vietnam," he wrote. "But in the name of objectivity, or more accurately stated, in the name of staying on the air, I could not scream 'liars.' Or could I? I think I should have tried."

He resolved early doubts by acting as "a simple transmission belt for the views of established authority" but incidents of violence in Chicago resulted in commentators being used "as transmission belts for the views of a dissenting large minority" for the first time, he said.

"Those of us who went through Chicago had been changed by that event," Vanocur said. "We had become radicalized, not in terms of ourselves but rather in the eyes of those who thought they knew who we were."

After that, Vanocur wrote, he was less able to acquiesce to restraints, however subtle.

"I had played the game, played it as I knew the rules demanded that I play it," he said. "On personal terms, I felt more and more I was losing. But on corporate terms, I was winning. I was playing by the rules. I continued to be programmed, not so much by NBC as by myself."

"It was primarily because I could no longer maintain a healthy integrated attitude toward what I was doing with myself that compelled me to decide to leave NBC."

The Hollywood Scene

by Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Woody Strode is some kind of man.

A magnificent athlete and actor, the king-size black man is also master of his destiny, a free spirit who joins no group, fights no one else's battles and who lives without hate.

"I'm probably a bigot myself," he said the other day in the Brown Derby during lunch. "I'm prejudiced against organizations."

"Most of my life people have been trying to get me to sign up with the various black groups, including militants. Not me."

Strode recently completed a starring role with William Holden in "The Reveners" following two years in Italy in which he headed the cast of five "spaghetti Westerns."

"I MAY BE THE only black Italian cowboy in the world," he said, flashing a grin. "They love me over there. And I love the Italians."

"I'm sick of talking about race in this country. I don't want anybody calling me 'brother' either. I live my own life. I go my own way and nobody tries to stop me."

"I never get paid less than a thousand dollars a week and I'm freer than all the white people in the acting business. I can work in London or Rome any time I want."

"You know why? Because I do my own fighting, roping and riding in movies. I don't need doubles. And every morning I do 500 push-ups. Working is a way of life with me."

Strode at 57 is nearly the physical specimen he was at UCLA where he starred in football and track. Later he went on to play professional football as an end in the NFL and in Canada.

HE SUFFERED the stings of bigotry before it was a cause celebre.

His marriage to a Hawaiian girl, Luukialuana Kalaaloa, in 1940 caused him endless trouble. But they remain happily married and are the parents of three sons and a daughter.

"I've lived alone and raised my family in the Mexican-American community of Los Angeles," he said. "The kids couldn't have been more happy or safe. Color means nothing to me, my children or neighbors."

Veterans' News

Veterans Administration co-sponsorship of GI Bill on-the-job training (OJT) with private, state, Federal and municipal employers has resulted in 8,000 new programs and 12,000 new "job slots."

VA officials reported the jobs were created through emphasis on OJT as part of a nationwide, coordinated effort to reduce unemployment among Vietnam veterans and to provide training opportunities for them.

Although finding jobs for veterans is not a primary responsibility of VA (that rests with Dept. of Labor), the agency assists in this area through numerous activities.

While engaging in these activities, the agency itself is a leader among Federal agencies in hiring Vietnam veterans under the Veterans Readjustment Appointment Authority. VA hired 1,000 veterans in May alone, and 5,000 since 1968.

Officials also noted that VA specialists in 72 Veterans Assistance Centers are spending more time on employment matters. They reported that in fiscal year 1971, nearly 15,000 veterans found jobs through assistance from these centers. Since 1968, about 45,000 jobs have been found for veterans via efforts of the Veterans Assistance Centers.

In addition to encouraging employers to establish job training programs, the agency will send representatives to plants and shops to help employers actually write up training jobs for veterans.

A veteran with no dependents receives a starting stipend of $108 monthly from VA, which supplements the salary or wages he gets from the employer during a six to 24 months training program. The veteran usually is assured a job after satisfactory completion of his training course.

Aside from on-the-job training programs, other VA job-assisting activities include job fairs, job banks, job counseling, cooperation with the President's National Committee on Jobs for Veterans and job interview classes.

These job interview classes are the latest in VA efforts to help Vietnam veterans obtain jobs. The agency has set up pilot projects in New York, Cleveland, San Francisco, Atlanta, and Washington, D.C. to coach veterans on how to make a favorable impression on prospective employers.

Social Security and You

Q — WHAT IS the minimum age at which a person can receive disability insurance payments on his own record?

A — There is no minimum age spelled out in the social security law. However, to get disability benefits a person must meet a work requirement.

Q — HOW ARE disability insurance payments arrived at?

A — They are figured exactly as if the disabled person had reached age 65 at the time he or she became disabled. For further information about this, contact any social security office.

Q — I WAS disabled a year ago in a very serious automobile accident. I will be disabled for about six months longer and then I expect to be able to return to work. What effect will the period of disability payments that I receive have on my retirement benefits when I reach age 65?

A — When we figure your retirement age benefits, we will drop out the period during which you were disabled. This will create a higher payment rate at age 65.

Q — MY HUSBAND died three years ago. We had no children and I am now 47 years old and I am disabled. I have never paid into social security. Can I qualify for any type of monthly payments at this time?

A — No, you cannot qualify for any type of social security payment at this time. It would appear that you would be eligible at age 50. About 3 months before you are age 50 you should contact your social security office to apply for payments as a disabled widow.

Jack Nicklaus uses an iron when others use a driver. Most experts use 20-point two no-trump openings although they claim to stick to 21.

Nicklaus can get enough distance with his iron, but sometimes an expert has trouble getting enough tricks with 20 points.

When South looked over dummy he wished he hadn't shaded his opening. Then he decided to make the best of it. He started by playing a low diamond from dummy.

East signalled with the eight and West was faced with a problem. Was his partner left with a singleton jack or a doubleton 10? West guessed wrong and continued a small diamond.

South gratefully took in the trick with his jack. Then he cashed his four top clubs while East discarded the three of spades and deuce of hearts and West got rid of the spade deuce.

South still had a lot of work ahead of him, but made the right play of the spade nine. East took the trick and made things easy for South by leading back a diamond. This let South in dummy to lead a spade and wind up with one heart, two diamonds, two spades, four clubs and the rubber.

It was possible to beat this contract after the lead of the low diamond at trick two. Don't write us and ask how unless you enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

The Lighter Side

'Dr. West' Explores A New Way To Reduce Hangovers

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It is always risky for a confused layman to write on medical matters so I can't certify the authenticity of anything you read here.

In other words, if you try it and it doesn't work, don't sue me for malpractice.

It appears, however, that a couple of medical researchers may have stumbled upon a new way to mitigate, or possibly ward off, the common hangover.

With the holiday drinking season now bearing down upon us, this could be significant. The principle, as best I can discern from a recent issue of the "Journal of Southwestern Medicine," works like this:

The intensity of a hangover may depend to some extent on the amount of impurities fusel oil, furfural, ethyl acetate, etc. in the booze.

Most of these impurities can be removed by filtering the hooch with activated charcoal. But that also may remove the flavor, aroma and color.

SEIZING UPON THESE findings, the Regua Manufacturing Co., which sponsored the research has come forth with a truly ingenious alternative:

Filter the impurities out of the whiskey after you drink it.

Regua figures this can be done if you swallow a few activated charcoal tablets or capsules along with whatever it is you are having too many of.

In theory, the charcoal will mingle with the liquor in your stomach and soak up the impurities before they have time to enter your bloodstream.

Also in theory, this will preclude the morning aftereffects. Or at least render them less excruciating.

"It wouldn't be a bad idea for bartenders to set out plates of charcoal capsules along with the peanuts and pretzels," a company official suggested.

OF IT YOU ARE having a cocktail party, you could serve charcoal tablets with the cheese dip.

I must say that through sad experience I have come to view any purported hangover preventive with deep distrust. And since Regua happens to be in the charcoal business, it could be that the company's interest in the research was not entirely altruistic.

Nevertheless, the concept of internal filtration may be the answer to some of our other problems. Water pollution, for example.

Many municipal water systems have charcoal purification, but this is wasteful. All of the water is made potable even though most of it may be used to moisten the hydrangeas.

How much more economical it would be if we simply consumed a charcoal tablet each time we drank a glass of water and filtered ourselves individually.

Dick West

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a married woman of 30. Last week, during sexual intercourse, I had a tension feeling in my chest. It scared me. Since that day I feel like there is a tension pressure in my chest and abdomen. I have indigestion and food particles come up and I belch a lot.

I should say I was and still am nervous and tense. Can tension cause a heart attack? I'm trying to just get it out of my system because I know it can cause ulcers and all kinds of trouble, but it's not easy. Then I think maybe you won't tell me the truth since you don't want me to get worked up since I am nervous. Can you advise me? Please answer soon!!

DEAR READER — Young women of childbearing age seldom have heart attacks. If they do it is usually because they have some other contributing medical problem, like kidney disease, high blood pressure or diabetes. I could be reasonably certain your problem is not a heart attack even without an examination.

Individuals with indigestion can have tightness in the chest and abdomen. The esophagus can go into spasm and cause pain in the chest. Gas trapped in the colon can cause referred pain even into the shoulder.

I can't cure your nervousness but to the extent it is caused by worry over a heart attack you can forget about that. You should, however, consider what is causing you to have indigestion. Nervousness contributes to that too. It is helpful if nervous people do not drink coffee, colas, tea or stimulants and also helpful, after the initial shock, if they don't smoke. Exercise helps relieve tension, so does developing a good healthy concern for someone else's problems.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have always looked askance at cosmetics containing hormones, as I thought applying them outside couldn't make any difference.

I have been using a prescribed hormone vaginal cream which really makes a difference. Now I am wondering if the face, too, can absorb hormones. I am in my late 50s, so naturally would welcome any help. I am not, however, eager to enrich a cosmetic manufacturer for psychological help.

DEAR READER—Yes, many of the things applied to the skin are actually absorbed by the body. A good example is a nitroglycerin ointment, when rubbed over the chest it will relieve angina pain.

Now that doesn't mean that you will get what you hope for from hormone creams for your face. It depends entirely on what you want. If it is wrinkles you wish to get rid of you will most likely be disappointed.

The cream that serves as a base for the hormones usually acts as a moisturizer — that is it helps prevent drying or loss of water from the deeper layers of the skin. This is sometimes helpful, usually in skin showing aging. This is not due to the hormones, however. If a person used a cream with enough hormone to cause a significant effect on the skin it could also cause problems by its total effect on the body.

The hormone cream you have been using actually relieves the shortage of female hormone and is useful for that purpose. This however is quite different than the usual aging of the skin which you are probably concerned about.

DEAR DR. LAMB — It is necessary for my children to take 50,000 units of vitamin A because of a severe lack of it in their systems since they were very young. However, during the winter months I have given them vitamin C to ward off colds. Now someone tells me that I am defeating my purpose because the one vitamin counteracts and voids the other. Is this true? If so, how can we benefit in both areas without nullifying one or the other.

DEAR READER — That is the least of your worries. There is absolutely no nullifying effect of either vitamin on the other. I must point out, however, that excess amounts of vitamin A can be harmful. Many doctors feel that continued doses in excess of 25,000 units daily are ill-advised and may cause vitamin A toxicity. The American Medical Assn.'s 1971 Drug Evaluation also states that there is no evidence from any additional benefits from doses in excess of 25,000 units daily. Other than short term treatment for vitamin A deficiency, the regular dose is 5,000 units daily or less.

Church Choir Will Present 'Messiah'

The 70-voice First United Methodist Church combined Chancel Choir will present the Christmas section of Handel's Messiah at 4 p.m. Sunday. The church is at 1903 E. Euclid, Arlington Heights.

Besides eight soloists, the production will include the accompaniment of a chamber orchestra which includes the violin teachers of the Arlington Heights Suzuki music program. Director of music, Robert Bowker, will conduct the orchestra and chorus.

Soprano soloists are: Sue Burbidge of Palatine, who will sing accompanied recitatives, Cheryl Haak of Wheeling, singing "Rejoice" and Karen Snodgrass of Arlington Heights, who will sing "Come, Unto Him."

Alto soloists Sharon Brown of Wheeling and Jan Nicholson of Mount Prospect will sing "Oh Thou" and "He Shall Feed His Flock" respectively. Guest soloist, Douglas Susumago, a tenor, will also sing two selections.

Arlington Heights bass soloists are Howard McElhose who will sing "For Behold" and "The People" and Larry Ulyatt singing "Thus Sayeth the Lord" and "But Who May Abide."

There is no admission charge for the program, and the public is invited.

Collecting Coins

Two things usually will cause a medal to become a highly desirable collector's item and increase its value. 1) a piece containing subject matter of a person or event of national interest, struck in an extremely limited edition or 2) any piece of a similar subject struck in an unlimited edition but allowed to drift into oblivion before it has been publicized.

In the case of the Trudeau Dinner Medal, illustrated above, the quantity was relatively low since the piece was intended only as a memento for guests paying $100 a plate to attend the Canadian prime minister's dinner.

The Lombardo Mint of Sherbrooke, Quebec, Canada, struck 3,000 copies of this piece in bronze before destroying the dies. Little thought was given to the possibility of it becoming a collector's item at any price. Consequently, no publicity was attached to its issue or the fact that it was being presented to such an exclusive gathering.

DURING THE summer of 1970 an offer of $50 was made for a single copy of the Trudeau medal and finally accepted by one guest. A little over a year later an offer of $110 for the same medal was refused. By the end of the American Numismatic Association convention in August, 1972, the price of this piece should be established at around $150.

It measures 1 1/4 inches in diameter and roughly 1/8-inch thick. The obverse shows a contemporary quarter profile of the prime minister facing left with his name, "PIERRE-ELLIOTT-TRUDEAU," arranged in a syllabicated manner to the right, thus — "PIERRE-ELLIOTT-TRUDEAU."

The reverse is pleasingly plain. Using a mistral type face, the designer placed Prime Minister's Dinner in two lines toward the top and March 5, 1969, Toronto, in three lines at about four o'clock. No other marks or symbols appear on either side other than the designer's name, Hunt, following the last letter U in Trudeau.

THE READER'S attention is being drawn to this series of "unheralded, little-known medals," for two reasons. The first, of course, points out the advantages and capabilities of the small private mint and, second, notes the possibility of anyone owning a copy without knowing there may be a collector's demand for it.

Quite often such pieces are given as gifts or tokens, or even found in an exchange of coins and medals. But unless someone takes the time to catalogue or research each medal, its true value may never be known. I doubt whether many of Trudeau's guests are aware that the medal they received at the $100-a-plate dinner in his honor, is in fact worth the price of admittance.

EISENHOWER DOLLAR

A memorandum from the 99 Company, 34190 Sepulveda, San Clemente, Calif., announces the mailing of orders received for the Eisenhower Certified Dollar Cover. Orders for an uncirculated 1971 Eisenhower dollar in a first day cover certifying it was one of the first of that coin struck, has swamped Birt Slater's office.

Slater acknowledges the receipt of the $1 coins and immediate processing into their stamped first-day covers. Readers who ordered these pieces should be receiving them shortly. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Do-It-Yourself

Basements tend to run to extremes. Either they are finished and paneled and good enough to live in, or they are left as they are. In the latter case they become drab, dirty and damp.

Even if expensive and elaborate finishing is not for you, it is possible to make your basement into a bright, attractive and comfortable place to work and play. All you need is some paint and a little time to apply it. Once you have cleared the basement for cleaning and painting, you may find that what junk you don't throw out could be better stored on shelves.

Cleaning up is the first step toward getting organized.

Paint will do more than improve the appearance. It will make a basement more dry. Slight moisture and seepage can be halted with heavy duty waterproofing. If you have major seepage, don't try to cure it from inside. Proper foundation waterproofing is done on the outside.

The only difference between painting a basement and any other room is to make certain that you are using a paint suitable for masonry surfaces. Most modern latex paints will work well on masonry but check the label to be certain.

Preparation consists in cleaning mainly. Major defects or even small cracks should be repaired before beginning. Vacuum all dust and dirt. A brush and clear water will take off quite a bit. Use a detergent if you find stubborn stains.

Present coatings that are peeling or flaking should be scraped off or the new paint will flake away with the old.

If the masonry is new, you have a powdery coating on it. This is known as efflorescence. You can coat the wall with special masonry conditioners to end the problem. You can remove it by scrubbing with one part of muriatic acid to five parts of water. Work with rubber gloves and don't splash any in your eyes. Rinse with water and add a little ammonia to get rid of the acid.

IF THERE IS mildew, scrub with household bleach and water. You may have to do this several times, rinsing with clear water in between and allowing to dry each time.

Any paint you use must be alkali-proof. It also must be permeable so that some moisture can breathe through it without making it peel.

Aside from latex paints the likeliest thing to use is a Portland cement paint. This is dry and must be mixed with water. Check instructions carefully. Such paints normally go on over unpainted masonry or over coatings of similar paint.

Mix in small amounts because once it is mixed it cannot be stored. Surfaces must be wet before painting.

The Portland cement paints are heavy and you will have to brush them on. Latex paints can be rolled on.

Neither of the mentioned paints is suitable for basement floors. Buy a floor paint which is a kind of paint especially made to withstand abrasion.

Often-Misunderstood Role

Just What Is An Executor?

One of the most misunderstood aspects of wills is the role of an executor. And this, says the Illinois State Bar Association, can be cleared up easily. Simply put, the ISBA says, an executor is the financial manager and decision-maker of the estate of the decedent.

One area of confusion lies in the difference between an administrator and an executor under a will. Their roles are virtually identical, the sole difference being the fact that an executor is named by the person making the will, while an administrator is named by the court when a person dies without having written a will, or without naming an executor, or the named executor cannot act.

Ordinarily an executor receives a fee for serving, although this can be waived. In some situations it may be beneficial to waive the fees when the executor is a beneficiary of the estate because the executor's fees are considered ordinary income and subject to federal income tax, while inheritance is not subject to federal income tax.

THE ATTORNEY ALSO MAY suggest at the time the will is being prepared waiving the requirement that the executor be bonded. Bonding is necessary in many cases, but generally not when the sole beneficiary is named as executor. In that case, says the ISBA, it's merely an additional expense.

The ISBA also recommends that contingent executors be named in the event that the first named executor should die or be unable to act before the estate is settled. This would provide an orderly transition without having to go into court to ask that an administrator be named.

Of course, a person named as executor is not obligated to serve in that capacity, so it is a good idea to be sure to have the permission of the proposed executor before adding his name to the will. Banks also serve as executors in some cases, although banks may not be desirable when there is a small estate.

Thus, knowing what the executor of a will is — and some of the finer points in naming a person to serve in that capacity — can smooth the transition period in settling an estate and it can save money in the long run.

Library Keeps U.S. Doctors Up-To-Date

by JOHN PAYNE

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A library crew at the University of Utah claims it "covers the nation" on behalf of medical men scattered over a sparsely populated 300,000 square miles in the West.

A professional staff, working in a building dedicated in October, does for physicians what librarians do best.

"We collect information," according to the medical librarian, "from books, treatises or magazines in the library or through a nationwide computer system."

"We pull it together for medical men who want to know the latest developments on a problem with which they or their patients are faced."

THE LIBRARY'S function is to get those in the health professions "in the know" in the shortest time. The Spencer Eccles Library relies on its own collection and an affiliation with a national system of medical libraries.

"Our job is service," according to Mrs. Priscilla Mayden, who acts as a chief helper for medical men in Utah and parts of five surrounding states.

It's part of one of the least-told stories about the nation's medical centers, according to Mrs. Mayden, the University of Utah's medical librarian.

The library serves half-forgotten gambling towns of Nevada, Indian villages in Utah and sugar beet and cattle country in parts of Idaho, Wyoming, Montana and Colorado as well as the metropolitan Salt Lake Area.

"IT IS OUR BUSINESS to get the tremendous flow of today's medical information to doctors, nurses, hospitals and pharmacists when they request it," Mrs. Mayden said.

"The greatest problem in planning the library," Mrs. Mayden said, "came with the uncertainty about the direction in which the technology of information is going to take."

So the library, with 18 full-time staff members, has hedged all bets on the future. There are electronic cable outlets, carousels for individual slide projection, and taped lecture cassettes.

WANT-AD WONDERS

WANT AD LEADS TO OWNERSHIP OF CHINCHILLA RANCH

In 1966, after retirement from the Air Force, Mr. Robert Muir was searching for a job which would include animals or outside work. He answered an ad for real estate services for a Chinchilla Ranch. He was hired, and today is President of his own corporation, National Chinchilla Ranch, which is one of the largest Chinchilla organizations today.

Whether your decor features plexiglas and polychrome, wonderful wicker and cheery chintz, or 'creative crates' and bumptious boxes from a recent move, traditional holiday home-baking seems to fit right in. Homemade treats welcome apartment-callers, make thoughtful gifts for neighbors in the ranch-style house next door, or brighten any holiday table. And, they fill your own home with that wonderful fragrance of baking which is such a delightful part of this happy, nostalgic, gracious season.

Bring out a happy apple cake, glistening beneath hot buttered rum sauce. Nuts provide appealing crunch while real butter makes for melting tenderness. And what's Christmas without a pudding? Try the steamed apple kind, with pecans, topped with that same savory rum sauce. Cookies are a delicious "must"; make them buttery and crisp on the outside, oozing a sweet apple-date filling. For giving or serving, stir up an apple fruitcake, rich with nuts, raisins and candied fruit.

The cheering bowl to accompany these offerings combines egg-nog and cider, spiced with nutmeg, cinnamon and cloves. Serve hot or very cold. Wassail!

A Taste of Christmas Past

Eggnog Wassail Bowl

- 3 quarts dairy eggnog
- 1½ quarts cider
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- 4 whole cloves
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel

In a heavy saucepot combine eggnog, cider, nutmeg, cinnamon, cloves and lemon peel; heat slowly, stirring occasionally.

Note: Eggnog Wassail may also be chilled and served very cold. If desired, more cider may be added for a thinner consistency.

Makes 4½ quarts:

Steamed Apple Pudding

- ½ cup (1 stick) butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2¼ cups sifted regular all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- ¼ teaspoon ground cloves
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup milk
- 1 or 2 golden delicious apples, pared, cored and chopped to measure 1½ cups
- ½ cup chopped pecans

In a large mixing bowl cream butter; gradually add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Sift together flour, baking powder, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves and salt; add to creamed mixture alternately with milk. Stir in apples and nuts. Turn into well-buttered 10-cup mold. If mold has its own lid, butter inside of lid and cover mold; or use foil to cover, pressing tightly around edges and securing with rubber band or string. Place mold on a rack in a pan with a tight-fitting cover. Pour enough water into pan to come half-way up on mold. Bring water to boil; cover and reduce heat to simmer. Steam 3 hours or until done. Let stand 10 minutes; unmold and serve with double recipe of Hot Buttered Rum Sauce. Pudding may be refrigerated several days or cooled, wrapped and frozen for several months. To heat: Thaw in refrigerator; wrap in foil and reheat at 325 degrees about 45 minutes. Makes 12-16 servings.

Apple Fruitcake

- ½ cup (1 stick) butter
- 1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1¾ cups regular all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup milk
- 1 or 2 golden delicious apples, pared, cored and finely chopped to measure 1½ cups
- 1 cup raisins or chopped dates
- 1 cup mixed candied fruit
- 1 cup chopped nuts

Line 9x5x3-inch loaf pan with waxed paper. In a mixing bowl cream butter; gradually add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Beat in egg and vanilla. Sift together flour, baking powder, soda, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt; add to creamed mixture alternately with milk beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Fold in apples, raisins, mixed fruit and nuts. Spread evenly in pan. Bake 2½ to 3 hours in preheated 275-degree oven. Cool in pan. Remove paper. Wrap and store in cool place. Yield: 1 cake.

Fresh Apple Cake with Hot Buttered Rum Sauce

- ½ cup (1 stick) butter
- 2 cups sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups sifted regular all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- 3 Washington Golden Delicious apples, pared, cored and chopped to measure 3 cups
- 1½ cups chopped nuts

In a mixing bowl cream butter; gradually add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Sift together flour, baking powder, soda, salt, nutmeg and cinnamon; gradually add to egg mixture. Stir in apples and nuts. Turn into buttered 13x9x2-inch pan. Bake 40-50 minutes at 325 degrees. Serve with Hot Buttered Rum Sauce. Makes 12 servings.

Apple-Date Cookies

- DOUGH:
- ¾ cup (1½ sticks) butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 3½ cups regular all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup milk
- ¼ teaspoon vanilla

- FILLING:
- 1 cup sugar
- ¼ cup regular all-purpose flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup water
- 2 or 3 golden delicious apples, pared, cored, and chopped to measure 2½ cups
- 1 cup chopped dates

To prepare Dough: In a large mixing bowl cream butter; gradually add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt; add alternately with milk and vanilla, mixing well after each addition. Chill for ease in handling. To prepare Filling: Combine sugar, flour and salt; gradually stir in water and mix well. Stir in apples and dates. Cook over medium heat, stirring frequently, until consistency of marmalade. Remove from heat; chill thoroughly. On lightly floured surface roll out dough to ¼-inch thickness. Cut out 2½-inch rounds. Leave one half whole; in second half cut out center with a small round or star-shaped cutter. Place whole rounds on baking sheet; top each with rounded teaspoon of Filling. Cover with cut-out round; press together with tires of fork or fingers. Bake 10-12 minutes in preheated 400-degree oven. Remove to wire rack to cool. Store cookies in lightly covered container. Yield: Approx. 5 dozen.

Hot Buttered Rum Sauce

- 1 cup sugar
- ½ cup (1 stick) butter
- ½ cup light cream or half and half
- 1 teaspoon rum extract

In a saucepan combine sugar, butter and cream; heat over low heat, stirring occasionally, until hot. Stir in extract. Yield: approx. 1¼ cups.

Microbiologist Urges Precautions Against Botulism Food Poisoning

Calling the microorganism causing botulism "the most deadly food poisoning known," an Illinois Institute of Technology microbiologist recently urged consumers to follow several precautions to avoid the often fatal outcome of botulinogenic spoilage of foods.

Dr. Nicholas Grecz, an associate professor in the Biology Department of IIT's College of Liberal Arts and a recognized international authority on botulism, suggests that consumers take these steps to protect themselves against botulism poisoning.

1. Never eat or taste foods which are known or suspected of being spoiled. Although it is impossible to verify as fact the claim that enough toxin to cause death might be ingested from a single spoiled green bean, it is true that spoiled foods may be highly toxic.

Do not throw away swollen cans or spoiled foods which may be retrieved and consumed. Cans which emit a strange odor, bulge or squirt the food out under pressure when opened should be reported to store managers and turned over to public health officials for examination.

If in doubt, heat the suspected food to the boiling point. Heating will destroy any toxin which may have developed, although it will not kill the botulinum spores.

Always refrigerate leftover foods.

If you do home canning, never attempt to can without a pressure cooker. Heating should be at 250 degrees F for 20 minutes.

"Improper home canning is the greatest contributing factor to deaths from botulism," Dr. Grecz says.

"Normally, modern professional food processing techniques produce safe industrially canned foods. However, accidents, although rare, are an everpresent danger. Can-closing machines occasionally fail and cause recontamination of foods after processing, some cans may be accidentally missed during processing, or canning methods may be altered without the realization that the new process increases the danger of botulism."

Dr. Grecz warns that changes in industrial food processing technology may actually increase the danger of botulism. "For example, salted and smoked fish packed in air-tight plastic containers, may be made a better-tasting product with less salting and a shorter period of smoking, but this change in preparation creates a much greater danger of botulism poisoning."

He suggests that the food processor "should accept responsibility for periodically educating its employees about the dangers of botulism, resulting from incorrect processing steps. The processor should also develop additives which increase the smell caused by botulinogenic spoilage in foods, as a danger signal to the consumer."

Dr. Grecz cites as particularly susceptible to botulism foods which produce little smell when spoiled, and which are normally eaten from the can without heating. Such foods include string beans, corn, beets, asparagus, and smoked fish.

The small rod-shaped germs causing botulism are named Clostridium botulinum, and produce seed-like spores which are tremendously resistant to normal food processing treatments including heat, drying, freezing, chemical germicides, curing, smoking and salting.

The botulism organism has been found by tests to resist a dose of radiation 2,000 times the dosage fatal to humans, according to Dr. Grecz.

"This highly resistant organism grows and produces toxin in almost any food which is not extremely acid such as tomatoes and pickles and where oxygen is virtually absent, as in sealed cans or air-tight casings.

Botulism poison survives the digestive juices, is absorbed by the bloodstream, then travels to areas where nerves join with muscle, to cause a relaxed paralysis. The life-sustaining muscle functions involved in breathing are blocked and death usually follows from respiratory failure.

According to Dr. Grecz, botulism organisms are found in soil, in decaying plant and animal matter, on potato peelings, in rivers and lakes. "In dry soil or dust, they will survive almost indefinitely. Around the midwest area, the bottom mud of Green Bay is particularly rich in the organism — over 90 per cent of mud samples taken from the bottom contain live botulinum germs."

"Thus, it follows that a high percentage of fish in the lake carry live germs and that foods can be readily contaminated with this organism, even under seemingly perfect sanitary conditions."

"Fortunately, while deadly, botulism poisoning is quite rare. In fact, it is so infrequent that doctors themselves often do not diagnose it correctly at the onset, and there is the danger that the stricken person may develop paralysis and even die before treatment is administered," according to Dr. Grecz.

Dr. Grecz points out that another danger of botulism is that it often strikes when least expected, at weddings, picnics and large get-togethers, at communal kitchens, or as the result of eating foods distributed by national chains over vast geographic areas.

He urged the medical profession "to take steps to emphasize the typical symptoms of botulism periodically to physicians and to the public, to facilitate prompt recognition, reporting and treatment."

IF YOU WORRY ABOUT YOUR TURKEY BEING DRY... READ THIS!

An A&P Self-Basting Turkey puts an end to any worry about the turkey being dry.

Here's why:

- Pure golden corn oil is put deep inside the young tender Grade A turkey.
- As it roasts the golden oil mingles with the natural juices and bubbles through the skin to self-baste the outside of the bird.
- The result...a turkey that is golden-brown outside... tender and juicy inside.

How sure are we that an A&P Self-Basting Turkey will be all we say it is?

We'll give you DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK* if it isn't.

Maybe we should worry...but we won't. Neither of us need worry again.

*Price label or register tape necessary, of course.

Chocolate Double Delights

1 1/2 cups packed brown sugar
 3/4 cup butter
 2 tablespoons water
 1 package (2 cups) semi-sweet chocolate morsels
 2 eggs
 3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
 1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
 1 teaspoon salt
Peppermint Cream Filling
 Combine sugar and butter in saucepan; place over moderate heat, stirring constantly until butter is melted. Remove from heat. Stir in water. Add semi-sweet chocolate morsels and stir until melted. Beat in eggs. Sift together remaining ingredients and gradually add to chocolate mixture, stirring after each addition. Drop by heaping teaspoons onto greased cookie sheet. Bake in 350-degree oven, 8 to 10 minutes. Cool. Sandwich each pair of cookies together with 1 rounded teaspoonful of Peppermint Cream Filling. Makes about 4 dozen filled cookies.

Peppermint Cream Filling
 3 cups sifted confectioners' sugar, divided
 1/3 cup soft butter
 1/8 teaspoon salt
 1/8 teaspoon peppermint extract
 1/4 cup milk or light cream
 Combine 1 cup of the sugar, butter, salt and peppermint extract; beat until light and fluffy. Blend in remaining sugar alternately with milk. Makes enough for 4 dozen filled cookies.

Molasses Taffy

1½ cups Grandma's Old-Fashioned molasses
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 teaspoon lemon or rum flavoring

Combine molasses, sugar, butter and vinegar in a 3-quart saucepan. Place over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to boil. Boil until temperature on candy thermometer reaches 200 degrees, or when small amount of syrup dropped in cold water forms a hard ball. Remove from heat; stir in flavoring. Pour into greased 15x10-inch baking pan. When mixture is cool enough to handle, pull until light in color. Roll into long rope ½-inch thick. Cut into 1-inch pieces. Wrap pieces in waxed paper or transparent plastic wrap. Makes 1 pound.

Fragrant, festive breads are as traditional as the Christmas tree. And, you'll probably agree, about as time-consuming.

Short Cuts With Ready-To-Use Dough

Simplify A Holiday Baking Spree

Here are three yuletide breads in tune with today. Each features a built in short cut to simplify your baking spree.

Holiday Candy Cane Bread, for example, starts with refrigerated crescent roll dough. This ready-to-use dough is first shaped into a large rectangle then topped with a sugar and spice mixture of candied fruits and nuts.

The dough is then cut in strips and overlapped atop the filling to give a braided look. For the finishing touch we brush the pastry with beaten egg and top with cherries — the results are golden!

Cranberry Orange Twists are easy-to flaky pastries that will make any coffee event memorable. There's no measuring, no mixing, no kneading involved in making this dough. The short cut — refrigerated orange Danish rolls.

The rolls are unwound into long strips, twisted and coiled. Then, top with a sprinkling of sugar and cranberry orange relish and bake. Before serving drizzle with the packaged icing.

You'll find Choco-Nut Crescent Ring is one of the best breads you've ever tasted. Once again, preparation is shortened by starting with refrigerated crescent rolls to form the flaky sunburst pastry. And, you're guaranteed to like the surprise tucked inside — rich, melted chocolate sparked with almonds, sugar and spice. For the final look, top with perky chocolate curls and sliced almonds.

HOLIDAY CANDY CANE BREAD

1/3 cup chopped candied fruit
¼ cup chopped pecans
¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 can (8 oz.) refrigerated quick crescent dinner rolls
1 egg, slightly beaten

Maraschino cherries or whole pecans
In small mixing bowl, combine fruit, pecans, brown sugar and cinnamon; set aside. On cookie sheet, separate crescent dough into 2 large rectangles. Overlap long sides; firmly pressing edges and perforations to seal. Pat or roll out to form a 7x14-inch rectangle. Spoon fruit mixture down center third of rectangle. On each side of rectangle, make cuts 1-inch apart to edge of filling. Fold opposite strips of dough over filling to form a braided appearance. Press edges of strips under to seal; seal ends. Shape braid into a candy cane shape. Brush with egg and decorate with cherries or pecans. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes until golden brown. Drizzle with powdered sugar glaze, if desired. Makes 1 coffee cake.

CRANBERRY ORANGE TWISTS

1 can (11 oz.) refrigerated quick orange danish rolls with icing
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup cranberry-orange relish
Separate dough into 8 rolls. Unwind each; coat with sugar. Twist and form into a coil on ungreased cookie sheet. Spoon 1½ teaspoons cranberry-orange relish on each roll. Bake at 400 degrees for 8 to 12 minutes until golden brown. Drizzle with orange icing which has been thinned with about 1 teaspoon warm water. Serve warm. Makes 8 rolls.

CHOCO-NUT CRESCENT RING

¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 can (8 oz.) refrigerated quick crescent dinner rolls
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
1/3 cup sliced almonds
2 milk chocolate candy bars (1 3/8 oz. ea.), broken into 12 squares each
1 egg white, slightly beaten

Combine sugar and cinnamon; set aside. Separate crescent dough into 8 triangles. Brush with melted butter; sprinkle about 3 tablespoons sugar mixture and half of the almonds over dough. Stack three squares of chocolate on shortest side of triangle. Roll up; starting at shortest side of triangle and roll to opposite point; curve to crescent shape; press ends to seal. In center of ungreased cookie sheet, shape one crescent into a circle. Place remaining crescents around circle to form a sunburst. Brush with egg white; sprinkle with remaining sugar mixture and almonds. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes until golden brown. If desired, drizzle with a powdered sugar glaze and top with chocolate curls. Serve warm. Makes 1 coffee cake.

Would You Believe!

Gold Eagle is Unchallenged — Our Competition Admits: Gold Eagle is the Suburbs' Most Complete Liquor Store. We challenged our competition who falsely advertise "Suburbs' Most Complete Liquor Store." We offered free space to those with more brands in any category. We gave them a few hints, like 120 American Whiskeys, or 144 brands of Imported Cordials from around the world. If they could prove more, we would relinquish our claim. WE DID NOT TELL THEM WE HAD 63 BRANDS OF Brandy & Cognac, or 114 different Imported and Domestic Champagnes because we thought we would scare them off. Even so, Gold Eagle has no challengers... we didn't think we would.

Mrs. Alan Miller

Her Butter Tarts Are A Holiday Delicacy

by LOIS SEILER

A recipe that has been in Mrs. Alan R. Miller's family longer than she can remember is for Butter Tarts, an elegant Christmas delicacy.

A Canadian by birth, Joan Miller of Rolling Meadows assumes that the recipe originally came from England because of her mother's English ancestry.

"We serve the tarts as a holiday dessert, and also include them in our cookie assortments," Joan explained.

They consist of individual pastry shells filled with a butterscotch mixture dotted with currants and chopped nuts. Baked until browned, the tarts are very rich and taste somewhat similar to a pecan pie. They can be made ahead and will freeze well.

Joan classifies cooking as her favorite hobby; she loves to try new recipes and collect cook books. So extra time spent in the kitchen never bothers her; on the contrary, she enjoys making such goodies as a Danish Christmas Twist that requires quite a bit of preparation.

"Although a lot of work, the twist is fun to make and the results are well worth the effort," Joan said.

She both kneads and rolls the dough several times for it to achieve a light and flaky texture. After the dough has been well-worked, it is rolled up with a filling of confectioners' sugar and butter, raisins and chopped almonds. Twisted to resemble a coil and sprinkle with sugar and sliced almonds, the cakes are left to rise and then baked until golden.

"The light texture of the cakes resemble that of a French pastry," Joan remarked.

She serves the twists for brunches or mid-morning coffee when friends and neighbors drop in, and also gives them as Christmas gifts. They, too, can be frozen successfully and re-heated in the oven before serving.

In addition to cooking, this capable homemaker likes to sew, paint and do craft work.

The mother of three children, Joy, 16, Laurie, 15, and Merri, 8, Joan also works part time as a nurse at the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged. Long active in Campfire work, she is sponsor of a Campfire group and also belongs to a circle at the First Presbyterian Church in Arlington Heights.

BUTTER TARTS

Make enough pastry as you would for a 9-inch double pie crust. Roll about 1/8-inch thick. Cut dough in circles 2 1/4 to 2 1/2 inches in diameter with a cookie cutter. Place in muffin cups. Makes about one dozen tart shells.

Prepare the following filling:

- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 1/4 cup light corn syrup
- 3 tablespoons butter, softened
- 1 beaten egg
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla

- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon vinegar
- 1/4 cup currants or raisins
- 1/4 cup chopped nuts

Fill pastry shells 2/3's full. Bake at 425 degrees for five minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake 15 to 20 minutes more until browned. Yield: one dozen butter tarts.

DANISH CHRISTMAS TWIST

- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 1/3 cup all-purpose flour
- 1/3 cup warm water
- 1 package active dry yeast
- 2/3 cup lukewarm milk
- 1 egg
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3 to 3 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine

- 3/4 cup sifted confectioners' sugar
- 1/4 cup chopped blanched almonds
- 1/4 cup seedless raisins
- 1 egg yolk
- 2 tablespoons water
- Few sliced almonds
- Granulated sugar

Cream one cup butter or margarine and 1/3 cup flour. Shape into a rectangle 6 inches by 12 inches on waxed paper. Place in refrigerator to chill.

In the meantime, measure warm water into bowl. Add yeast and stir until dissolved. Add milk, egg, sugar, salt and enough flour to make a soft dough. Knead dough until soft and pliable, about ten minutes. Roll out on floured board to a 15-inch square.

Place chilled butter mixture on half of the dough. Fold other half over and press edges together. Turn dough 1/4 turn. Roll out 1/2-inch thick. Fold into thirds. Turn open end to front and repeat rolling, folding and turning twice more. Chill 30 minutes. Roll, turn and fold dough as above two more times. Roll out to a 12 by 15-inch rectangle and cut in half lengthwise.

Blend 3 tablespoons butter and con-fectioners' sugar. Spread half of the mixture on each strip. Sprinkle with nuts and raisins. Roll each strip jelly-roll fashion, starting with long side. Press to seal at ends and along seam. Twist each to resemble a coil and form into a circle on greased baking sheets.

Blend egg yolk and water. Brush tops of twists. Sprinkle with sliced, blanched almonds and granulated sugar. Let rise in a warm place, about 85 degrees, for 40 minutes or until doubled.

Bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes until golden. Yield: 2 twists. To store, wrap in foil.

JUST ONE? Merri Miller is not about to pass up one of her mother's English Butter Tarts. Mrs. Alan Miller of Rolling Meadows fills individual pastry shells with a butterscotch mixture that tastes similar to pecan pie.

Trader Vic's Service Pacific Dining On United

by FRAN HECKART

Just after Trader Vic brushed his eyebrows and commented something about it was an awful place to have dandruff, the man in charge of United Air Lines flight kitchen handed him a roll.

After pinching, tearing, sniffing the bread, the trader announced that it was, in so many mutters, "rotten."

Grabbing my arm, he said, "When I was your age, honey, I would have had to taste that roll. But after you've been in the food business as many years as I have and eaten as many different foods as I have, you can tell what it tastes like just by smelling. And I know quality."

Victor Jules "Trader Vic" Bergeron has been tasting food now for about 68 years. Bergeron is the founder of the multi-million-dollar family conglomerate which includes 18 Trader Vic's, a food processing plant, a restaurant supply company and several cook books.

AUGMENTING the far-flung empire (San Francisco to Boston, Vancouver, B.C., London and Munich) are two Senior Pico restaurants in California, which are doing for Mexican cookery what Trader Vic's have done for Pacific gastronomy.

Trader Vic himself was in Chicago last week to do some last minute checking on United's new in-flight dining service (bearing the Trader Vic name) which starts today on daily flights to Los Angeles and Honolulu.

The nationally renowned restaurateur was recently hired by United as food and beverage consultant. According to Trader Vic, he will be able to give United the gastronomic edge in the keen competition between the jumbo jets.

The airline will be using the same mock-South Pacific dining experience on the special flights that has made Trader Vic restaurants so well known and world famous.

The blustery, out-spoken Trader Vic has been familiarizing United's chefs and cabin supervisors in the preparation and presentation of the new menu items and tropical drinks.

And the trader is in absolute control. He has to be with his reputation on the line.

Nothing escaped his close scrutiny as we were served a ground presentation of United's new in-flight lunch offerings.

The potato chip dip needed another speck of cayenne. And when he discovered that his second Danish pastry crescent tasted just like the first one, I had the feeling he would have reacted to a dose of ground glass in the same manner.

Trader Vic refuses to compromise on quality and offers the average diner what he wants, something new. Trader feels that the American public is inclined to change, experiment and try new things but is not given the opportunity.

But that opportunity will be available the next time you hop aboard the daily 10 a.m. Friend Ship to Los Angeles or the one leaving 10 minutes later to Honolulu.

Cheese blings (egg crepe with Swiss cheese stuffing), ophi (Hawaiian abalone), lomi lomi (Hawaiian salmon) and coco shrimp (Spanish shrimp dipped in Chinese rice noodles and deep fried Hawaiian style) will be among the first-class appetizer offerings.

Salads will vary from butter lettuce with Dunderess crab through a variety of aspic creations with Pacific-type dressings. Dessert selections will include Hawaiian Fruit Wisp, Macadamia Wisp, Hawaiian Mango Pie, Haupia (light coconut pudding) with chopped pineapple and selected fresh tropical fruits and cheeses.

Entrees include Tenderloin Steak Malagasy, Indonesian lamb roast with chutney peach, mahi mahi with Macadamia nut sauce and Breast of Chicken Doli Dall.

Even the bar has gone tropical. Passengers can choose from Trader Vic's original mai tai, Menetune Juice (a rum-based tropical drink named after the charming little Hawaiian "leprechaun," a mythical figure that has become a symbol of the Trader Vic's system), and Drunken Pineapple for cocktails.

Duo Of Intriguing Snacks For This 'Nibble' Season

Along with gifts and greetings, this is the nibble season. Of course lots of hearty eating goes on too. But for all the informal holiday entertaining, what's needed is an assortment of interesting and tasty snacks. And the best kind are those you can pull out of the refrigerator or whip up in minutes when guests drop in.

Cheery Cheese Ball is a zesty mixture of cheddar and cream cheese seasoned with prepared yellow mustard and horseradish — an unusual and intriguing combination. And in addition to being delicious with a variety of crackers, the ball will keep for weeks wrapped in foil and refrigerated.

A tray of fresh vegetables, shrimp and chips served with a tangy dip is both welcome and popular. And Happy Holiday Dip is especially noteworthy because it can be prepared with items you're apt to have on hand. Made with an envelope of sour cream sauce mix, mayonnaise and chopped dill pickle, it's smooth and savory.

CHEERY CHEESE BALL

- 1/2 pound shredded cheddar cheese
- 1 package (8-oz.) cream cheese
- 1/4 cup prepared yellow mustard
- 1 tablespoon catchup
- 2 tablespoons drained horseradish
- Parsley flakes

Mix together cheddar cheese, cream cheese, mustard, catchup, and horseradish. Chill several hours. Form into a ball; roll in parsley flakes. Serve with crackers.

HAPPY HOLIDAY DIP

- 1/4 cup milk
- 1/4 cup pickle juice
- 1 envelope (1 1/4-oz.) sour cream sauce mix
- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper
- 1/4 cup chopped dill pickle
- 1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- Cooked shrimp
- Cauliflower "flowerets"
- Carrot sticks
- Cherry tomatoes
- Crackers

Blend milk and pickle juice into sauce mix; let stand 10 minutes. Add mayonnaise, green pepper, pickle, and cayenne pepper; mix thoroughly. Chill. Serve with cooked shrimp, cauliflower, carrot sticks, cherry tomatoes, and crackers. Makes about 1 1/4 cups dip.

Can you tell a good quality fresh grapefruit? And how can you tell quality fresh broccoli? It should have compact bud clusters which have not opened to show the yellow flowers. As for the grapefruit, it should feel heavy in the hand for its size to indicate finest quality.

Invaluable money saving facts like these for all major fresh fruits and vegetables in the supermarkets can be found in a newly-available booklet called "Selection and Care of Fresh Fruits and Vegetables — A Consumers Guide."

The booklet is published by the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association.

From anise to watercress, the guide provides information covering 86 different commodities, arranged alphabetically for easy reference. The booklet also includes notes on the marketing season of each commodity and provides some general principles of selection and care as an introduction.

Freshness, color, shape, size, maturity, tops, grades, judgment, storage, temperature, humidity, prepackage and price are all included.

Readers may obtain copies by sending

$1 to United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association, 777 14th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005. Ask for the Consumer's Guide.

If you're puzzled about an appropriate hostess gift, gift wrap a variety of canned meat products.

Just look over the shelves containing canned meats for inspiration. A selection suitable for use as appetizers or snacks will be appreciated, especially during this season of informal entertaining and drop-in guests.

Tiny meat balls to serve on picks, deviled ham and other meat spreads for quick-to-prepare canapés and dips, luncheon meat to cube and serve on picks with small pickles or olives are only a few suggestions.

If you find yourself pressed for time, don't forget the prepackaged cheese and sausage assortments from the specialty shops. Many are available in decorated boxes so there's no reason to fuss over the wrapping.

For extra special hostess, you might want to present her with a fruit and cheese assortment along with a bottle of champagne.

Mostly For Men

Whether you're serving turkey, chicken or any other fowl for holiday dinners, a sweet potato soufflé is a colorful and flavorful accompaniment.

This recipe which combines the tanginess of fresh lemons and orange with the potatoes is easy to prepare. Boil 2 to 2 1/2 pounds of sweet potatoes (4-6, depending on size) until tender, then peel and put through a ricer.

A short cut would be to use canned sweet potatoes but personally I find them lacking in flavor. To the rice potatoes, add 1/2 cup dark brown sugar, grated rind of 1 lemon and juice of the whole orange, and 6 tablespoons melted butter.

Beat the mixture until light. Place in a buttered baking dish. Bake 30 minutes at 375 degrees. Serves 6.

OYSTERS ALSO HAVE a place in the holiday menu, usually scalloped and served with the main meal. However, if you'd like a light luncheon dish, or something to hold off hungry people until a late dinner is ready, try this recipe for oysters fricasse or simply creamed oysters.

To serve 4 (recipe doubles readily), drain 1 pint oysters, reserving liquid, and cook in a sauce pan until the oysters plump and the edges begin to curl. Keep warm.

To the reserved liquid add cream enough to make 1 cup. In a second sauce pan make a roux by melting 2 tablespoons butter, adding 2 tablespoons flour and stirring until smooth. Now add liquid and cream gradually and stir constantly until thickened.

Season with 1/4 teaspoon salt and a dash of cayenne or a few drops of red hot sauce, and 1 teaspoon of finely chopped parsley. Add the oysters and 1 lightly beaten egg. Cook 1 minute, no more, and serve immediately on toast points or hot baked patty shells.

If you want a dish which is less rich, use half and half or milk instead of the heavy cream.

Do you have a recipe for oysters, or a questions about food? Write Chuck Flynn, care of Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. For personal reply, please enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Mrs. Al Tantillo

Cookies For Sharing

by FRAN HECKART

Every year about this time Mrs. Al Tantillo of Arlington Heights is up to her elbows in cookie dough.

An expert baker, Emily Tantillo can whip up five batches of cookies before noon. She begins her annual cookie production just after Thanksgiving. And by the time Christmas rolls around, she's baked 35 to 45 different kinds, or "literally thousands of cookies," in her own words.

"Of course, my husband and I could never eat all those cookies," said Emily. "So about 90 per cent of them are given away."

Emily fills boxes, to which she has added her artistic Christmas touch, with fudge balls, anise drops, lemon bonbons, Danish ginger birds, thimble cookies and walnut shortbread, just to mention a few.

Emily has several recipes that she makes every year but also bakes new ones that she's collected from newspapers, magazines and friends.

About 13 years ago she developed her recipe for Confetti Cookies in honor of her granddaughter.

"At first I called them Terri's cookies," she said. "Now my granddaughter prefers to be called Theresa, so I changed the name but that's all."

Emily also makes Strawberry Cookies. This recipe came from a friend several years ago, and the cookies are made to look like big strawberries. A few of the "strawberries" add a festive touch to a gift box of cookies.

Amid the baking, Emily finds time for decorating hard boiled eggs, growing African violets, painting and almost every imaginable handcraft project.

Emily's natural talent for arts and crafts projects is evident in her cookies. She has made several of her own cookie cutters, including a large Santa Claus shape. And all of her cookies end up looking like professional bakery products.

Does her enthusiasm ever diminish? "I try to rest on Christmas Eve," laughed Emily. "After about five weeks of cookies, I get a little weary," she added. Still, there's no doubt that about next Thanksgiving Emily will be organizing her cookie recipes for 1972.

STRAWBERRY COOKIES

5 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, beaten
1½ cups chopped dates
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups Rice Krispies
Pinch of salt
1 cup walnuts, coarsely chopped
Melt butter over low heat in electric skillet. Beat eggs and sugar together, then add to melted butter. Stir to blend. Add chopped dates and increase heat to 360 degrees, mixing until mixture melts, about 10 minutes. Turn off heat and add salt and vanilla. Add Rice Krispies and nuts as mixture cools. When the mixture is cool enough to handle, shape into strawberries. Roll the strawberry shapes in red sugar decoration. Use ½ round toothpick, which has been dipped in green food coloring and dried, for the stems. Cut hulls from green construction paper.

Note: The toothpick stems and hulls can be made ahead of time so the picks are thoroughly dried.

SPIRIT OF GIVING. Each year Mrs. Al Tantillo of Arlington Heights adds the personal touch to her Christmas gifts, she bakes them. Strawberry cookies, confetti cookies and anise drops are a few of her favorite cookies.

CONFETTI COOKIES

1 cup margarine
½ cup sugar
1 egg
1½ teaspoons strawberry extract
1 package rainbow mix cookie topping (Jimmy type)
2½ cups flour
Cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add whole egg and flavoring. Mix well. Add flour, blend; then mix in ¾ cup of the rainbow mix. Set aside remainder of the rainbow mix. On wax paper, make rolls of the dough about 1½ inches in diameter. Roll up in the wax paper and chill. When the dough has chilled (at least an hour), spread more rainbow mix on wax paper and roll the rolls of dough in the mix, coating all sides. Slice ¼ inch thick and place on ungreased cookie tins. Bake in a 375-degree oven until lightly browned, about 8 to 10 minutes.

ALMOND BUTTER BALLS

1¾ cups sifted flour
1 cup butter or margarine
½ cup powdered sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon almond extract
½ cup chopped almonds
Cream butter and sugar until fluffy. Add flavorings and blend. Add almonds and flour. Chill at least 1 hour in the refrigerator. Shape dough into small balls and bake at 350 degrees 19 to 20 minutes. While the cookies are still warm, roll in powdered sugar. Cool, then roll in powdered sugar again.

ANISE DROPS

Sift together and set aside:
1½ cups sifted flour
¼ teaspoon baking powder
Put into measuring cup:
2 eggs and enough water to measure ½ cup
Put eggs into a mixing bowl with 1 cup sugar and ¼ teaspoon anise flavoring.

Beat until very thick and sifted softly. Fold in dry ingredients, sifting in about ¼ at a time. Drop dough by teaspoonsful onto a greased cookie sheet about 2 inches apart. Set cookies in a cool place (not the refrigerator) 8 to 10 hours, or overnight. Do not cover and do not disturb. Bake at 350 degrees 5 to 6 minutes. Remove to cooling rack and finish cooling. Cookies form a cake-like layer on the bottom with a crisp "frosting" on top.

Note: When first dropping cookies on cookie sheet, moisten end of finger slightly then press in multicolored candy sprinkles and lightly touch top of each cookie. Sprinkles will stick to the top.

Oat Flakes And Apples For A Distinctive Bread

There's good cheer and good eating in store for those who try this flavorful Apple Oat Flake Bread. The bread is rich and moist, a distinctive taste and texture combination of fortified oat flakes, nuts, and apples. The flavors mellow with storing and the bread freezes well, making it a comforting thing to have on hand for expected guests and for days when your menu cries for a touch of something more.

APPLE OAT FLAKE BREAD

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1 teaspoon salt

¾ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1/8 teaspoon allspice
2/3 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1½ cups fortified oat flakes
1 cup finely chopped peeled cooking apples
¼ cup chopped walnuts
2 eggs, well beaten
2/3 cup milk
2 tablespoons unsulphured molasses
¼ cup shortening, melted and slightly cooled

Sift flour with baking powder, salt, and spices. Add sugar, cereal, apples, and nuts. Combine eggs, milk, molasses, and shortening; add to flour mixture, stirring just until all flour is moistened. Pour into a well-greased 8x4-inch loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 60 to 65 minutes. Cool in pan 10 minutes; then remove from pan and finish cooling on rack.

Note: For easier slicing and mellowing of flavors, store bread overnight wrapped in wax paper, plastic wrap, or aluminum foil.

Apple Oat Flake Bread

Pumpkin Relish

Preserved pumpkin, a relish to serve with cold meats, was adapted from an old New England recipe by Chef Eddie Andrews of The Publick House, Sturbridge, Mass.

Cut a 5 to 6 pound pumpkin into large chunks. Peel them and scrape out seeds and strings with silver spoon. Weigh. You should have 4 pounds. Cut pumpkin in thin, even slices. Soak overnight in mixture of 1 pint of wine vinegar and 1 quart of water in crock, or glass, plastic or ceramic bowl.

Drain, dry pumpkin on clean dish towel. In large saucepan or preserving kettle, mix 4 pounds of sugar with 1 pint of wine vinegar, juice and coarsely grated rind of 1 lemon and 1 ounce of peeled fresh ginger or canned drained ginger coarsely grated. Add pumpkin, heat and stir until sugar has dissolved and boil, stirring occasionally, until pumpkin looks glassy. Remove pumpkin to hot, sterilized canning jars and keep them warm in 200-degree oven while rapidly boiling the syrup until it thickens.

Cover pumpkin with syrup and seal jars as manufacturer directs. Makes 4 to 8 8-ounce jars, depending on how watery the pumpkin is.

Make It A Safe Holiday

Avoid Unnecessary Kitchen Risks

by JEANNE LESEM

UPI — Last minute cooking, like last minute shopping, takes some of the joy out of Christmas.

Among other things, it can cause accidents that spoil the holiday.

But advance cooking also can present problems, such as an overstuffed refrigerator whose cooling efficiency is impaired.

Here, from the Greater New York Safety Council and the New York City Health and Hospitals Corp., are tips to help you avoid these and other risks.

Mrs. Marjorie May, director of the safety council, suggests you do as much cooking as possible ahead of time so you won't be tired and rushed at the last minute.

Keep children out of the kitchen, especially when you use electrical appliances such as mixers.

Use good potholders for handling hot foods. The mitten type is recommended because it covers the back of the hand and doesn't droop. Never substitute a damp towel. It can break a hot glass container and steam caused by dampness can burn you hands.

Mrs. May said towels of terrycloth and other napped fabrics are especially hazardous because repeated washings loosen their fibers and makes them more vulnerable than usual to fire.

Dress sensibly in a housedress with pockets and opening that aren't liable to catch on knobs, potholders and doors. Avoid clothing with bows and long sleeves. Wear sensible shoes with heels that are straight, in good condition and likely to stay on the feet.

Mrs. May said poorly fitted or worn shoes are very fatiguing — a hidden but big cause of accidents.

Take a coffee break at midmorning and midafternoon, with or without the coffee. Sit down and put your feet up for at least five minutes.

Even as simple a task as lighting the oven can be dangerous if you must use a match instead of a pilot light. Stand to one side, not directly in front of the oven. Open the door a couple of inches for a couple of minutes to let any accumulated gas escape. Light the match before you turn on the gas.

With an oven pilot light, reverse the procedure. Don't open the oven door until you hear flames hissing. If's gas accumulating in the oven that triggers the pilot light.

FOR CHOPPING or cutting food, use a cutting board, not a plate or the porcelain sink cover. Your knife can slip on a hard, shiny surface and cause a painful or dangerous cut.

Both Mrs. May and Charlotte Scotti, director of dietetics for the city health and hospitals agency, cautioned against overloading refrigerators with too many hot foods at one time.

This raises the interior temperature of the appliance and increases the risk of food spoilage.

Food wrapped in heavy paper should be rewrapped in lighter material because the heavy kind insulates food against refrigeration.

Mrs. Scotti said cooked food should remain at room temperature only until steam stops rising from it. Then it should be covered and refrigerated, but with enough space around it for cold air to circulate and bring the freshly cooked food well below 50 degrees Fahrenheit in a hurry.

She said frozen foods that need defrosting before cooking — such as unstuffed turkeys — should be defrosted in the refrigerator, not at room temperature or in warm water.

Refrigerate raw meat, poultry, eggs,

dairy products and other highly perishable food promptly.

The same advice applies to bought or home-baked cream or custard pies.

"They're far more vulnerable to bacterial infection than most people think," said Mrs. Scotti.

Even bagged prepared vegetables such as celery and salad greens should be washed carefully and well in several changes of water.

Keep your hands clean, too. Wash them often, particularly between handling different food items and after you've done other household chores. If you've any open sores or cuts on your hands, wear gloves when you handle food. Disposable, lightweight plastic ones are sold at some fancy housewares stores.

Mrs. Scotti's agency advises baking most of the turkey stuffing separately or stuffing the bird just before cooking it, even if you pre-chill the stuffing to lessen the chance of spoilage.

And leftovers should be removed from the cavity to a covered storage container for the same reason.

Rolling out the news... 55,200 miles a year!

Keeping the people of the Northwest suburbs informed puts a lot of mileage on our presses. Throughout the year they will roll out 55,200 miles of news and advertising. Page to page, this would form a newsprint ribbon reaching twice around the world!

But more important than length is the depth of coverage our reporters strive to give the happenings of your dynamic suburbs ... a depth found in each of the ten daily Herald newspapers.

This is a boast you can share ... for it is your demand as a concerned, involved citizen for daily local news that keeps the Herald presses rolling.

Federal Funding Application OK'd

Schaumburg-Roselle Pact May Be Awarded By Spring

Contracts for installation of traffic signal lights at Schaumburg and Roselle roads could be awarded as early as next spring as a result of action by the Schaumburg Village Board Tuesday night.

The board approved an application for federal funding for improvements at that intersection and three others—Schaumburg and Springinguth roads, Wise and Roselle roads and Wise and Irving Park roads.

If the funding is approved, and engineering plans and cost estimates are approved without significant delays, it is possible the village could let contracts on the Schaumburg-Roselle work by next spring, said Mayor Robert O. Atcher.

ZGONINA yesterday said all the work could be completed by the end of June. Since there will be no construction work at Schaumburg and Roselle roads, said Zgonina, contracting firms can start the reconstruction at Wise and Roselle roads while waiting for suppliers to ship street and signal lights for all the intersections. When the lights arrive, they will be installed in priority of Schaumburg and Roselle, Wise and Roselle and Schaumburg and Springinguth.

Zgonina also estimated total cost of each intersection project. Approximate costs for each intersection are Schaumburg-Roselle, $45,000; Schaumburg-Springinguth, $35,000; Roselle-Wise, $110,000, and Wise-Irving Park, $50,000.

The application is for 50 per cent federal funding, and is being filed with the state. The four listed intersections were selected on the basis of a state-contracted study of the Chicago area that set priorities on intersections needing improvements.

TRUSTEE Gordon Mullins questioned the proposal application, presented by Village Engineer Joe Zgonina, asking why the Wise-Springinguth roads intersection was not included. That intersection is more hazardous, as proved by accident statistics, than is the corner of Wise and Roselle roads, said Mullins.

Zgonina, supported by Atcher, said the village has no control over which intersections qualify for the federal funded improvements. The study, conducted by Barton and Ashman, narrowed down the hazardous intersections investigated to only about 200, said Zgonina. Of those, four are in Schaumburg. Barton and Ashman determined that Wise and Roselle has a higher priority than Wise and Springinguth, said Zgonina.

The Wise and Irving Park intersection will not be done in the immediate future, Zgonina told the board, since it is partially in Hanover Park. The other three intersections are completely within Schaumburg, and Zgonina will design the improvements. The state or county will be responsible for designing improvements at Wise and Irving Park roads.

Atcher said yesterday the Schaumburg and Roselle roads would have first priority. The village tried more than two years ago to get state or county aid for improvements there, he said, but aid was delayed until publication of the Barton and Ashman report.

ZGONINA TOLD the board the village would also seek state or county funds for the remaining 50 per cent of the improvements cost. The village share of the cost could be as low as 20 per cent, he suggested. "We'll try to get as much money from outside sources as we possibly can," he said.

However, Atcher yesterday said he thought it unlikely the state or county would contribute any money for the work. Schaumburg has asked them to help fund the improvements before, and while they agreed the improvements are needed they said they had no available funds, he added. Atcher expects the village will have to pay a full 50 per cent.

Concerning the Wise-Springinguth intersection, Atcher said he will direct Police Chief Martin Conroy to ask Cook County to make it a four-way stop. Currently stop signs are only on Springinguth Road.

At Schaumburg and Roselle roads, signal lights and street lights are to be installed, and pavement markings are planned. At Schaumburg and Springinguth, signal lights are proposed and widening of approach lanes is slated. At Wise and Roselle roads, said Zgonina, major improvements will be a complete widening of the Wise road approach to Roselle, and installation of signal lights. Major reconstruction is planned for Wise and Irving Park roads.

Jones Road Hit Hardest By Flooding

The hardest hit area in Schaumburg Township appeared to be a section of Jones Road near the Knightsbridge subdivision after heavy rains Tuesday.

Village workers blocked off a section of Jones Road between Evergreen Lane and Hillcrest Road because of the flooding. Water from Jones Road ran down Highland Boulevard almost to Highland Park. More than 2½ inches of rain fell in the area.

A resident on Heather Lane in Hoffman Estates reported a flooded back yard due to the Knightsbridge floodings.

The lake in Highland Park, behind MacArthur School overflowed its banks and spread across most of the level land in the area.

An official at the Schaumburg Airport reported that the airport's wind sock had blown down making it difficult to estimate the velocity of the wind. DuPage Airport reported winds of more than 55 m.p.h.

Some wind and rain damage was observed in both communities. Downed television antennas, flapping roof tile, and soggy Christmas decorations were visible throughout.

The sign at the Citgo gasoline station, Higgins and Roselle Roads had been blown out.

Several utility poles in front of the Children's Bargain Town on Golf Road were leaning heavily. Several poles in that area were replaced recently after a truck snagged a power line and snapped the poles.

A lamp post at the Town Square Apartments leaned down following the storm and the Twinkbrook Y's Men's Club Christmas tree lot in front of the Town Square Shopping Center suffered heavy wind damage. Both are on Roselle Road in Schaumburg.

Police in both communities reported that no injuries were reported due to the storm.

Civil Defense Unit Seeking New Members

The Schaumburg Civil Defense group is looking for new volunteer members, according to Bob Ciner, director of the program.

Ciner said anyone interested in becoming a member of Civil Defense should contact him at 529-3537 for more information. He added that experience or training is not necessary.

Ciner said the group is planning a comprehensive training schedule, including first aid and rescue work, which will begin early next year.

Township Democrats Will Pick Leaders

Officers for 1972 for Schaumburg Township Democrats will be elected Saturday at a 6 p.m. meeting in the Living Room Restaurant, Roselle Road, Schaumburg.

A cocktail party honoring the new officers will open at 7 p.m., in the same location. The party will be free admission to members, and $10 admission per couple for guests.

Village Seeks Appeal In Heidt Case

An appeal has been requested by Schaumburg officials in the case of William Heidt, a former Schaumburg police officer accused of stealing $1,100 worth of merchandise last summer while working as a security guard at Sears, Roebuck and Co.'s Woodfield store.

In a trial, ended Nov. 30, Judge Marvin Peters ruled to suppress evidence in the case on grounds it was obtained without a search warrant.

Schaumburg police obtained the merchandise on June 29, from a rented trailer parked in front of Heidt's home reportedly after receiving permission from his wife.

But, Peters ruled prosecution in the case failed to prove permission was given without duress following testimony that Mrs. Heidt cried.

"WE'RE NOT through with this thing yet," Police Chief Martin Conroy said yesterday.

Village Atty. Jack Siegel has sent a letter to State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan requesting a review of Judge Peters decision and asking the state make an appeal in the case, he added.

Peters said he was reluctant to rule as he did but under the law he had no alternative, Conroy said.

"I'm sure if you really get into the law you'll find cases that are for it," he added, about laws that will support an appeal.

"It's a matter of vital concern to the village," the letter from the village stated about the police reputation.

Dogs Love Merwyn The Mailman

by NANCY COWGER

Merwyn Pye has cast a magic spell on the dogs of Hoffman Estates.

Instead of playing a magic flute, Pye uses dog biscuits to "soothe the savage beasts," and has woven a spell of love and friendship with 145 dogs in the Highlands area.

Pye is a mailman, and he's learned both the truth and the falsehood of an axiom of the trade—dogs hate mailmen. He agrees they do, but he also has found a way to change that hate to such strong affection the dogs whine when he doesn't make his rounds.

Forking over $8 to $10 each week, Pye gives a daily handout of dog biscuits to hounds along his route. At last count there were 145, but the figure changes as people move in and out or as they acquire new pets. Some of the animals are ferocious. But even these are among Pye's friends, as long as he sticks with the ground rules, staying out of their yards and letting them come to him.

EACH DAY as Pye walks his route he gives each dog along the way a treat. Some get the giant biscuits, others get the tiny ones. But nearly all have come to depend on his visit with timed precision.

There is only one exception to the handout routine—the owners of a dog who asked Pye not to leave treats because they feared it would spoil him as a watchdog. Occasionally other owners request a temporary embargo for dogs on diets.

While feeding the dogs is partially a defense mechanism, to discourage them from biting him, Pye considers the friendship angle more important. Being a mailman can be tedious, dull work, he said. But it isn't for him.

Each time he goes on his rounds, he has 145 friends waiting to see him. They are glad when he comes around, and their welcome makes every day a social occasion.

Tippy is one of his favorites, although they are all special to him. Tippy sees him through the front window, or the fence when he is in the yard, and begins crying when Pye is on the other side of the street. The dog doesn't stop until Pye is there with the dog biscuit and a friendly word.

WHISKERS IS different. He and Pye have their own understanding. Whiskers won't let Pye come too close, but will follow Pye anywhere for that dog biscuit. He proved it once when he got loose from his yard and followed Pye and the biscuits home. Police had tried to catch Whiskers and couldn't, so they called on Pye for help.

Another dog, a large German shepherd, has a reputation for ferocity although his owners say he is friendly. They leave the garage door open just a crack, and when Pye comes around the

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference said it will not accept the resignation of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of SCLC's Operation Breadbasket. Jackson offered his resignation earlier this week after he had been suspended while SCLC officials investigated corporations he allegedly set up without their knowledge, including "Black Expo."

Congress began eliminating the final barriers to adjournment of the first session of the 92nd Congress. Only mass absenteeism and the fading threat of a filibuster against foreign aid appeared to stand in the way.

A Miami-based ship line said one of its cargo vessels was being attacked by a Cuban gunboat. A spokesman for the Coast Guard said it was powerless to take any action other than sending medical aid because the ship was in international waters and was of Panamanian registry.

Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton was freed of charges in the 1967 killing of an Oakland policeman when the district attorney decided a fourth trial would be fruitless. The dismissal ended a four-year effort involving three trials to convict Newton for the slaying of Policeman John Frey in a predawn street battle.

The State

Federal Appeals Court Judge Otto Kerner, former Illinois governor, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of bribery, mail fraud, tax evasion, perjury and conspiracy in a race track stock scandal. Kerner asked for, and was immediately relieved of participation in any activity of the court pending final disposition of the charges against him.

A Republican ward committeeman and two driver testing examiners were indicted on charges of bribery and official misconduct for allegedly allowing unqualified applicants to pass driving tests. The employees included Eddie Mack Jones, a 17th Ward committeeman.

The World

Pakistan walked out of the Security Council after denouncing the United Nations as a "fraud and farce" that delayed action in the India-Pakistan war until India could capture Dacca. The Council was considering a heavily pro-Indian resolution offered by Poland to stop the war.

Pakistani commanders in East Pakistan asked India for a cease-fire as Indian troops and tanks drove to nearly a mile from the besieged eastern capital of Dacca. A dispatch from Dacca reported India and Pakistan did not seem to be too far apart on terms for stopping the fighting in East Pakistan.

The War

The United States put off the next Vietnam peace talk session for another week, and the Communists responded by charging the move was aimed at killing the conference. In Cambodia, Communist forces firing massive mortar and rocket barrages cut off an estimated three brigades of Cambodian troops 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh. Thousands of civilian refugees were reported fleeing southward.

The Market

An early mid-morning calm on Wall Street was shattered by aggressive buying of stocks after midday. The Dow Jones industrial average finished with a net gain of 8.62 at 863.76. The average price of a New York Stock Exchange Common share rose 33 cents. Advances outscored declines, 906 to 521 among the 1,726 issues on the tape. Turnover was 16,890,000 shares. Prices advanced in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Christmas Lighting Is Dangerous

by JERRY THOMAS

Danger of electrocution or fire is always present during the year, but especially so during this year's jolly but wet, holiday season, according to electrical inspectors in Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

Wednesday's heavy rains, puddled in front yards decorated with electrical Christmas displays have prompted the following warnings.

Frank Gourley, Schaumburg electrical inspector, and Dan Murphy, Hoffman Estates Building Commissioner, said the most important warnings are "if you're worried pull out the inside plug and don't improvise."

Murphy said in many instances where there is no outside electrical receptacle residents use tested and approved light strings, waterproof spotlights, and then plug them into indoor extension cords. Usually the cord is clipped in a closed window.

THE ONLY way to describe a rig like that is "extremely dangerous," Gourley added. New homes in Schaumburg have outdoor receptacles that are weather-proof, but even then residents are warned not to use indoor extensions to carry the current to displays far from the receptacles.

Gourley said snow is just as wet and as good a conductor of electricity as water, but residents don't seem to worry about it as much, "Do so this year," he urged.

Murphy and Gourley recommend all electrical equipment carry a U.L. testing seal or an independently tested lab seal. Murphy said spotlights can be purchased that seal themselves and are safe for underwater use. Gourley warned that spotlights, Christmas bulb lines, or extensions purchases should not be "bar-gains" but of quality merchandise.

Another common danger is overloading of lines. It is extremely dangerous to remove an outside door or yard light and using an adapter plug convert it into a power source for several lines of lights.

SHUT OFF OUTDOOR light displays when no one is home, suggested Gourley. He added most people do shut off inside lights, but neglect the outdoor lights.

Both men stressed that fresh trees used indoors should be kept in water and disposed of the moment they dry. Aluminum trees conduct electricity and should never be used with electrical lights.

Hoffman Estates Fire Chief Ed Kalasa, said only one incidence of fire resulting from faulty electrical wiring has been reported this year in a Hoffman Estates home. The fire was extinguished by the homeowners. A Christmas tree light line being tested on a kitchen floor burned. It did carry an U.L. seal said Kalasa, proving even this is not always proof that an accident cannot happen. It takes 16 seconds for a live tree to burn up completely, if that line were on a tree it could have been a different ending, he said.

Kalasa said the last Christmas tree fire in the village was eight years ago and attributed the decline in holiday fires to increased use of flame resistant synthetic trees. "People are also more aware of the dangers a live tree can bring and are being careful, he added

Police Apprehend Five Immigrants

Hoffman Estates police arrested five Mexican citizens Wednesday morning for illegally entering the country. Their car was stopped at 10:30 a.m. just east of Audubon Road on Ill. Rte. 72. Police said it was a routine traffic violation.

When asked for an identification passport, the driver of the vehicle couldn't produce any. Police said they were taken to the police station where it was learned the other four didn't have proper identification either.

The five were turned over to U.S. immigration officials.

How About Irish Pub In German Tavern Here?

Germany and Ireland may not have much in common, but they are gaining a common social establishment in Schaumburg.

Timothy Clifford, who plans to move to Schaumburg soon, described the future of an Irish pub in an old German tavern, for the village board Tuesday night.

Clifford is negotiating the purchase of Leng's Tavern, on the east side of Roselle Road just south of Schaumburg Road, and asked the board to grant him a liquor license. He plans to convert the German stein house to a home for Irish nostalgia, beer, liquor and food.

Financing for the pub will come from a corporation of commercial pilots who have invested in Clifford, the board was told. He will operate the establishment under his own management, Clifford said, adding he is a commercial pilot himself although he has worked in the restaurant and tavern field since he was 15 years old.

Clifford plans to open Nellie's Best Irish Pub Jan. 1. He will offer sandwiches, seven draft beers and mixed drinks.

The board granted Clifford's request, pending his approval after police department screening. Also granted were a request for a New Year's Eve liquor license for St. Marcelline Church, and a change in the classification of the liquor license for International Cafe at Woodfield. The upgraded classification will allow the cafe to serve mixed drinks.

In other action, the board approved a permit for Twinbrook YMCA Y'smen's Club to sell Christmas trees at Town Square Shopping Center, Schaumburg and Roselle roads. Mayor Robert O. Atcher said he had already approved the permit, pending board action.

Schaumburg Plans To Hire Administrative Assistant

Schaumburg likely will add an administrative assistant to the village payroll next month, Mayor Robert O. Atcher said yesterday.

The village board Tuesday night authorized the mayor to investigate prospective applicants. The position has been provided for in the village appropriations ordinance for several years, but funds have never been budgeted for a salary, and until now, no steps have been taken to fill the job.

Mayor Atcher said he already has begun interviewing applicants, and at least one of them looks very promising. However, he said, he wants to investigate other persons before selecting one.

The salary for the position has not been determined, Atcher said. The board now is developing its 1972 budget, but still has not learned definitely how much revenue it will have for the year. The salary will depend on how much money is available, although Atcher commented the position will be well-paid.

WHILE THE village does not have a specific list of qualifications for the job, Atcher will look for someone with a background in municipal administration. He also will expect the employee to be a member in the Illinois City Management Association, he said.

"Pairing or matching of philosophies is important," the mayor said in suggesting he will seek someone who can work comfortably within current village policies.

Exact responsibilities also are not yet clearly defined, according to the mayor. But, the person hired "is going to have more authority than the normal administrative assistant," he added. The authority will not likely extend to hiring and firing of department heads, said the mayor, commenting he thought it doubtful the village board would consent to it. One of the criteria set by the state management association in defining a city manager's job is hiring and firing authority over department heads. Persons without that power, but meeting other criteria, generally are classified as administrative assistants.

HIRING OF an administrative assistant does not imply the mayor's role will be less active, said Atcher. Rather, it indicates he will have more free time to devote to duties he considers most im-

Bomb Threat In Adoption Battle

by MARGE FERROLI

Arlington Heights police are investigating a bomb threat made late Tuesday to Mrs. Paula Marshall, an Arlington Heights mother who earlier Tuesday was granted custody of her daughter, Amy, after a two-year court battle.

Police spokesmen said Mrs. Marshall reported the caller was a male and sounded as though in his 40s. He reportedly used abusive language and threatened her house would be bombed after saying he had adopted children of his own.

Police advised the telephone company of the call and are taking "the usual precautions."

Mrs. Marshall, who lives at 2234 Goebert Rd. with her 7 year old daughter, was awarded custody of the 2½ year old child when Cook County Circuit Court Judge Helen McGillicuddy upheld an Illinois Appellate Court ruling ordering a Colorado Springs, Colo. couple to return Amy to her natural mother.

Mrs. Marshall said yesterday she received only one threatening phone call, "but it was enough to scare me."

"You hear about things like this all the time, but when someone threatens your own life, it's another story," she said. "There are just some sick people in this world."

The court ordered that Mrs. Marshall receive immediate custody of the child, but Mrs. Sylvia Decker, one of her attorneys, said she has not yet been advised when Amy will be returned to her natural mother. But she said she expects notification shortly.

AMY IS NOW IN the custody of her adoptive parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Huebert. The Hueberts adopted the baby in June, 1969.

However, the court ruled Mrs. Marshall, in giving up her child had been defrauded and had been under strain and duress.

"She never consented to give the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker said. "She was told at the time by the lawyer for the adoptive parents there would be a six-month waiting period during which she could reclaim custody of the child."

This waiting period, however, was nonexistent, Mrs. Decker said, which led her to unknowingly hand the child over to the Hueberts.

Mrs. Marshall's husband, Timothy, from whom she was then and is currently separated, was responsible for handing the child to the Cook County Dept. of Public Aid, which handled the adoptive proceedings, Mrs. Decker said. She explained Marshall gave the child to a Julie Brown, who in turn presented Amy to the public aid department.

"She (Miss Brown) had a financial interest in putting the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker claimed, explaining the adoption would have eliminated child support payments for Amy by Marshall.

Miss Brown was a mutual friend of the Marshalls, Mrs. Decker said. Mrs. Marshall was unaware of her husband's relationship with her at the time of the adoption and "completely trusted her," she said.

MRS. DECKER placed the blame for the confusion over the adoption in three places:

—on the Hueberts' attorney who had claimed there would be a six-month waiting period;

—on the Public Aid department for not fully explaining the adoption proceedings to Mrs. Marshall; —and on Miss Brown for "misleading" Mrs. Marshall and giving her advice to turn the child over to the public aid department.

Mrs. Decker said Mrs. Marshall was under strain shortly after Amy's birth because she had just separated from her husband. She also did not have a job and worried about supporting her two children.

"A child cannot be taken away from its natural mother unless the mother consents to it or is proven unfit," Mrs. Decker said. "The court has no right to investigate the qualifications of a natural mother, except in an extreme case of child abuse."

She said Mrs. Marshall went to the public aid department for advice on how best to handle her situation shortly after Amy's birth.

"They told her in 15 minutes all her rights, which is a complete farce," Mrs. Decker said. "The public aid department must fully explain adoption procedures and assistance or they might as well just kidnap a child."

THE PUBLIC AID department, although dealing primarily with welfare payments, does act as an adoption service, but is not a state recognized adoption agency, Mrs. Decker said. The regular investigation proceedings of the adoptive and natural parents made by a recognized adoption agency are not conducted by the county office.

The public aid office handles its adoptions through "direct placement," Mrs. Decker said, which does not allow "full protection" to adoptive parents that they will always maintain custody of a child.

"It's tragic this has taken over two years," Mrs. Decker said. Mrs. Marshall asked the Hueberts to return Amy to her five days after she was handed over to the public aid department, but they refused and court proceedings further delayed the case, she said.

Retail Groups Feel Woodfield 'Pinch'

by DOUG RAY

Retail organizations from at least three Northwest suburban communities are taking steps to loosen the economic pinch of Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg during this Christmas shopping season.

Merchants in Arlington Heights, Palatine and Rolling Meadows are pouring more dollars into promotion this year than ever before, and some are providing free parking in an effort to revitalize local stores, some which have lost as much as 15 per cent of the business compared to last year.

Earl Johnson, executive manager of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce, said village merchants "have definitely been affected" by the Woodfield shopping center, which is considered the largest indoor shopping plaza in the world. "Any new regional shopping center would affect us," he said.

Johnson indicated a 15 per cent drop in business at some stores, and said women's apparel and shoe stores have been hit the hardest by Woodfield. "Every other store is for women," Johnson said of Woodfield.

But he said the "drop in business is not across the board in Arlington." He said hobby and specialty stores are doing more business than ever.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Chamber of Commerce with approval from the village board has provided free parking on Saturdays in the commuter and other metered lots in the central business district. The free parking began Nov. 27 and will end this weekend. Johnson also said Arlington Heights businessmen are "trying to promote different programs to keep people in Arlington Heights."

Palatine officials and the chamber of commerce will also offer free parking from Dec. 20 - 24 in two downtown parking lots and offstreet parking stalls. David Shoemaker, Palatine Chamber of Commerce executive, said "the Palatine merchants are doing a lot of advertising" to offset Woodfield. "We are trying to provide hometown service," he added. Shoemaker said he "has heard of no drastic business reduction" in Palatine since Woodfield's grand opening in September.

Rolling Meadows businessmen have provided more sale days and bolstered the advertising this year, according to Bill Jenkins, Rolling Meadows chamber president. "We have spent more money on Christmas decorations," he said. The chamber plans to increase Christmas ornaments in the downtown area next year. "The big test of whether Woodfield has really hurt our business will come at the end of the Christmas rush," Jenkins said when sales volume figures are available.

JOHNSON SAID "next year we will have to constantly remind people that Arlington Heights can provide the goods. If we could put a roof on downtown Arlington Heights, we would have the same thing as Woodfield."

Johnson said merchants must use competitive merchandising techniques such as pricing, service and advertising and also work to make shopping accessible with improved traffic control and available parking.

Auto Shop Students Get 'Take-Apart' Gift

Auto workshop students at James B. Conant High School in Hoffman Estates plan this week to take apart a gift from Ed Murphy Buick-Opel Inc.

Murphy Buick knew the Opel auto they donated to the school would be used as a study model and approved of the idea. Len Dudas, general manager of the dealership at 1000 E. Golf Rd., Schaumburg, said students can practice body and engine work on the car.

Duda also is planning to start Friday evening "clinics" at the dealership. Speakers would come from local police departments and the sports world. Topics would range from how to drive, safety and fun aspects of driving.

Charge Man With Hit-And-Run

A Chicago man was charged with hit-and-run and two other offenses after a two-car accident Tuesday at the intersection of Higgins and Meacham roads in Schaumburg.

Rodney Tuller, 2730 N. Springfield, was arrested late Tuesday after he was involved in a collision at the intersection with a car driven by Robert Grabowski, 109 E. Blackhawk in Roselle.

Tuller was charged with leaving the scene of an accident, failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident, and failure to have a valid drivers license.

He was released on $500 bond and his court date is Jan. 12 in Schaumburg.

According to police, Tuller was east-bound on Higgins Road when he struck Grabowski trying to turn left.

Police said Tuller then tried to leave the scene of the accident. He was pursued by Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates policemen.

Both Tuller and Grabowski were taken to Northwest Community Hospital following the accident. Tuller had lacerations, and Grabowski complained of pains. Both were treated and released.

Jack-In-The-Box Pops Out With Water Retention System

An underground water retention system for the proposed Jack-In-The-Box restaurant on Roselle Road between Golf and Higgins roads in Hoffman Estates was tacitly approved by the village board Monday night. Trustees authorized Mayor Frederick Downey to sign an application for a Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) permit.

The board also approved signing an application for an MSD permit for Thomas Engineering, which is erecting facilities near the Northwest Tollroad.

The Jack-In-The-Box approval has been pending for several months. This fall the board denied a request for the MSD permit signature because developers proposed retaining storm water within the parking lot. Plans showed curbing around the lot to allow accumulation of water to a four-inch depth. Developers now have agreed to install storm sewers sufficient to handle water runoff from a storm of severity occurring with 10-year frequency. There is no longer any intention to retain water in the parking lot, the board was told.

The Thomas Engineering permit signature was approved after the board learned the firm has agreed to bond itself sufficiently to guarantee payment for any damage caused in excavating utility trenches to the site. The potential damage is to homes on either side of the trench, and the bonding would insure payment for any repairs needed due to the excavation.

Thomas Engineering must trench under the Tollroad and then west to its site, on the north side of the Tollroad. The board also approved signing an application for permission from the Tollroad authority to bore under the highway.

ALSO APPROVED was the apparent low bid for a 3/4-ton pick-up truck for use by public works crews in clearing snow from cul-de-sacs. Trustee Virginia Hayter said larger trucks the village already owns cannot maneuver properly in small cul-de-sac areas. The contract, for $3,866, was awarded to Grand Spalding Dodge.

The board also approved increasing the fee paid to village prosecutors, proposed by Mayor Downey. The Cook County Circuit Court calendar has been revised, allowing the village 50 per cent more time to prosecute cases. The two prosecutors now split a $100 per month salary for handling violations of village ordinances and traffic arrests. Since court will be held three times per month rather than twice a month, for Hoffman Estates cases, Downey said the payment should be increased proportionately. The time change, and salary increase, are effective Jan. 1.

The board also approved attendance at the Jan. 20 Northwest Municipal Conference dinner at Arlington Towers by all village board members, the mayor, plan and zoning commission members, department chairmen, youth commission members and the village clerk. In the past, only the mayor, clerk and trustees have attended. The village will pay for village representatives, while the representatives will pay for their husbands or wives.

Schaumburg Senior Citizens To Organize

Schaumburg's senior citizens are to officially organize next month.

Forming under the guidance of the Schaumburg Park District, the unnamed new organization will basically be a social grouping, said Mrs. Harlo Sartorius, co-director of the park district's senior citizens program.

The organization will be quite informal and non-restrictive as to participation, she added. Though sponsored by the Schaumburg Park District, the program will be open to any senior citizen who wants to participate and has transportation to the meetings and social functions.

About 31 residents have been participating in selected social activities held recently by the park district, Mrs. Sartorius said. It is expected, she added, that this group will form the nucleus of the new organization.

January's meeting will include an election of 1972 officers and a discussion of social activities to be pursued during the year.

MRS. SARTORIUS said the park district has been using its bus to transport senior citizens to meetings. She added that the program has been getting attendance from oldsters living in the villages of Hoffman Estates, Streamwood and Hanover Park, which basically lie outside the Schaumburg Park District.

As the year progresses, the new organization will pursue a number of social activities such as bus tours to various spots of interest outside of the immediate Northwest suburban area, card and bingo parties, travel movies and book reviews, she added.

However, she emphasized, the planning and coordination of these social activities will be up to the participating senior citizens. The district will only provide general guidance and funds when and where needed, she said.

"We do not want dues," she explained. She said the expense to the park district should be minimal.

ALSO, she added, when the program gets rolling it is expected that local service clubs, scout organizations, etc. will contribute both in a monetary and a social way.

Participating senior citizens, Mrs. Sartorius and her co-director, Mrs. Keith Paul, are exploring various ideas on what to name the new organization.

"We want to get away from the connotation of senior citizen," Mrs. Sartorius said. One idea is evolving a name around the phrase "young at heart."

The time and day of the January organizational meeting will be announced later, Mrs. Sartorius said.

Winston Knolls Hitting More Snags

Approval of engineering plans for the fourth phase of Winston Knolls, the Centex-Winston development in Hoffman Estates, met another roadblock Monday night when it finally reached the village board.

The firm first applied for engineering plan approval in July. Since then the matter has been pending before the village plan commission. Among reasons for the delay were changes in the locations of donated park and fire hall sites; disputes between Centex-Winston and a neighboring development, Windemere in South Barrington, and recommendations from Village Engineer George Holt for adjustments in sewer and sidewalk plans. Approval from the plan commission was granted last week.

The delay with the village board stemmed from a plan to have the Hoffman Estates Park District responsible for maintenance of a section of road outside village limits in South Barrington.

THE FOURTH PHASE includes 16 lots for homes and two lots for public use, one a park site and the other a fire district station site. The park and fire station sites are west of Lexington Drive, and are outside village limits. They also are outside the boundaries of the two districts, although the park district is negotiating for disannexation from South Barrington's park district and annexation to the Hoffman Estates district.

Only a small segment, roughly one-fifth the length, of Lexington Drive in phase four, is within Hoffman Estates village lines. The rest is in South Barrington.

Trustee Diane Jensen asked Richard Regan, plan commission chairman, what provisions were made for maintenance of Lexington outside Hoffman Estates. Regan said the street would not be dedicated to either village, but instead would be given to the park district, which would have maintenance responsibility.

Village Atty. Edward Hofert objected.

"Could the park district close the road if it wanted to," he asked, adding, "I can't guarantee you'll ever have access down that street. You'll have a continuing problem in the future. You'll have a fouled up situation if you have cross jurisdiction here," he said.

HOFERT URGED the board to open negotiations with South Barrington for disannexation of the entire road, including the park and fire station sites, from that village, with the object of annexing them to Hoffman Estates. Then, he suggested, the road can be dedicated to Hoffman Estates, with jurisdiction over the complete street in one village and under one governing body.

If South Barrington and the Hoffman Estates Park District agree, said Hofert, the village then can consider approving the Centex-Winston engineering plans.

On Hofert's advice, the board also declined to take action on a request by the Hoffman Estates Jaycees for a sign variance permit, allowing them to erect a community calendar sign at the southeast corner of Voegel Park, Golf and Higgins roads.

Hofert said the park district is not restricted by village zoning ordinances and can erect any type sign it chooses.

Wives Ask CCPA Coercion Charge Investigation

In a stormy exchange with Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer at Tuesday's City Council meeting, the wives of six city policemen demanded that an impartial investigation be opened into charges that Police Chief Lewis Case coerced four patrolmen to resign from the Combined Counties Police Association (CCPA) last week.

The women asked that an independent three-member committee be appointed to study the charges and report their findings. They want one member to be appointed by the City Council, one by patrolmen and a third to be appointed by the other two.

Meyer said he would appoint a panel to study the charges if and when the four patrolmen bring him written statements of their grievances against Case. Meyer said he would appoint a study group according to his own guidelines.

Mrs. Bruce Murphy was first to call for an independent, public investigation. She told the council she doesn't think an investigation by the mayor, "can be honest because he appointed Chief Case."

The six women were Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Brian O'Malley, Mrs. Mary Hamann, Mrs. Harvey Greenway, Mrs. Dennis Van Jacobs and Mrs. Jim Cosgrove. Their husbands are all Rolling Meadows patrolmen and members of the CCPA.

The men were not at the council meeting. Sgt. John Flood, a Cook County policeman and president of the entire CCPA organization, was also at the meeting and charged that statements made by Meyer and Case that the resignations were voluntary "are lies."

But the debate was primarily between Meyer and the women. The women said they believe the patrolmen were intimidated, and criticized the council for not starting an investigation.

MEYER SAID the women were basing their charges on second-hand information and did not have all the facts.

Mrs. Van Jacobs said the wives are concerned because "the futures of our families are at stake."

She added, "I don't think the people of Rolling Meadows want a police force that is appointed politically on the basis that this man will shut up and this man will do what he's told."

She told the aldermen, "In order to check the power of the mayor and the chief we have to have the aldermen take a stand and ask for an investigation. Maybe this is a dictatorship where Roland Meyer is king and you are puppets."

Mrs. Van Jacobs criticized the lack of a responsive grievance procedure within the department and said the CCPA "would give the men a voice and allow them to get up here with dignity and talk."

Mrs. O'Malley said "the policemen have tried to deal with the city before and come up against a blank wall."

Meyer responded saying, "Since the inception of the police department in 1955 this department has had rules and regulations and a grievance procedure to guard rights."

"The patrolmen have bargaining power within the department. But if they won't sit down and bargain by themselves, we won't recognize anyone's right to bargain for them."

Meyer told Mrs. O'Malley that if the men "will make charges in this council in writing and sign them, the council will conduct an investigation. I will appoint an outside committee — outside of the police department — to investigate."

MRS. MURPHY said, "We would like to see a three-man committee set up to investigate the charges brought against the chief by the patrolmen. We request that the mayor and city council appoint one citizen, the patrolmen appoint one citizen and these two citizens choose a third citizen to act as chairman. We would like these three men to conduct an investigation of the chief and have them report all their findings to the public."

During a lull in the exchange, Flood rose to address the council and said, "Mr. mayor, I agree with you on one thing. You've said that you shouldn't believe everything in the newspapers. You're right, because the statements (denying the charges of coercion) that you and the chief made are lies."

Meyer banged the gavel, ruled Flood out of order and ordered him to sit down or leave. Flood tried to keep talking and the mayor called for a recess.

After the recess, Mrs. Greenway tried to speak, and Ald. William Ahrens objected, saying the discussion was closed. Ald. Fred Jacobson said the council should consider continuing the discussion.

The council voted 7-3 to end the discussion, with Jacobson, James Huddleston and Steve Eberhard voting to continue the discussion.

Mrs. Greenway said, "The mayor has refused to answer any direct questions. He's talking in circles. We want direct answers, not the circus we've been subjected to."

Crane Lashes New Economy: 'No Vision'

Lashing out at President Nixon's economic recovery plan, U. S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-18th, said in a speech yesterday, "The wage-price controls attack the symptoms, not the cause of inflation."

Crane spoke yesterday to the members of the Elk Grove Vilk Association of Industry and Commerce during their annual meeting held at the Holiday Inn, Elk Grove Village.

Crane told the businessmen the "tragedy" of all the current government economic measures "is their failure to recognize the true cause of inflation." The cause, he said, was the government's "deficit financing and expansion of the currency supply."

Crane termed the current "inflation (890) to carry the emergency closing announcements.

Parents are urged to listen after 6:30 a.m. when threatening conditions exist.

Parents are also urged to make arrangements for their children's care in the event schools are dismissed early. If a severe storm develops it is possible for students to be sent home early.

The decision to close or open will be made each day and parents are asked to listen every morning when storm conditions exist.

3 Firemen First

To Be Promoted

The Schaumburg Fire Department recently announced the first promotions in its two-year history.

Promoted to the rank of lieutenant were Raleigh Kick, Patrick Murray and Frank Musil.

The three men, who are original members of the department, received the promotions after scoring the highest on written and verbal examinations given by the Schaumburg Police and Fire Commission.

The promotion will mean a salary increase of from $1,000 to $1,200 annually.

Both Kick and Musil live in Schaumburg. Murray is a resident of Morton Grove.

Elk Grove Village.

Crane said the businessmen the "tragedy" of all the current government economic measures "is their failure to recognize the true cause of inflation." The cause, he said, was the government's "deficit financing and expansion of the currency supply."

Crane termed the current "inflation psychology" in which wage earners expect periodic raises just to maintain the current earning power a "sorry problem." But, he added, "the public's attention has been diverted from the source of that problem with the wage-price controls."

Borrowing an analogy from economist Milton Friedman, Crane likened the wage-price controls to "putting a brick on a pressure cooker when Congress is controlling the heat." Doing this, he said, would only result in the need "for more bricks."

Most of his letters from businessmen have indicated support for wage-price controls, Crane said. But he warned, "When the teeth begin to apply, the businessman will find he is working with more constraints than labor or the consumer."

INDICATING his support for fewer government controls on the economy, Crane said that "the alternative to a free economy is coercion." He said "history shows the sorry results when government increases that control."

Crane predicted that as government enlarges its economic controls the first victims could well be small businessmen. "With more constraints, the profit margins will get thinner and thinner. I can anticipate the end of small entrepreneurs."

Though Crane feels the situation is worsening, he also said it was not hopeless. "I urge you not to adopt a defeatist attitude."

Instead, he told businessmen to become more active in the governmental progress. "You should monitor legislation as an association. Even the big business associations don't do this as well as the unions." He urged businessmen to take public stands on economic issues, and he said, "Know when, where and how to fight."

Offices To Close

The Schaumburg Township offices at 105 Roselle Road in Schaumburg will be closed Dec. 24, Dec. 27 and Dec. 31 in observance of legal holidays.

Dogs Love Merwyn The Mailcarrier

dog barks until he slides the bone under the door.

There are about 30 mail carriers working out of the Hoffman Estates branch post office, but only three of them feed the dogs along their routes. Pye, Walter Zarro and Doug Wilder find it expensive but worth every penny. Pye and Wilder each have been bitten by dogs. Zarro was never bitten by a dog, but once was nipped by a 5-year-old boy.

Zarro carries more than mail and dog biscuits on his route. He carries candy too, and gives it to children along the way. The day Zarro was bitten he had run short on lollipops. The youngster was disappointed, and took a nip from Zarro's ankle while the mail carrier talked with his mother.

ALL THREE MEN give the same reason for their daily gratuities, which they started on their own initiative and pay for from their own pockets. "It makes the job more interesting when you've got someone waiting for you," Zarro wrote it. "This is what makes the day for us," he adds.

The men love their work, and the dogs are a big part of the reason. Pye says he doesn't call his work work — he has a vacation every day, delivering mail as he visits his friends.

No doubt the dogs love it. Even the watch dogs, which never fail to sound a warning for their masters when the mailmen arrive, stop barking and show pleasure when they realize who has come to call.

And the people who own the dogs? They love it too. Pye was off for three weeks once when he injured his knee in a fall while working. Some of the families called to say they hoped he'd be back on the route soon.

Mrs. James A. Botts, 507 Oakmont Rd., calls Pye "just unbelievable. This is such a nice thing for him to do."

And Pye returns the admiration. He is not just a fan of dogs. "I've got the best people in the world. They're friendly. They talk to you. They're just a friendly group." They are so nice, said Pye, he doesn't even mind the extra load of mail for Christmas that adds to his work.

Animal Ordinance To Include Cats Being Drawn Up

Wheeling officials are drawing up a draft of a new animal ordinance that would require inoculations and village licenses for all animals kept by village residents.

The proposed new law would extend village control of animals from the current law, which applies only to dogs.

The proposed changes would, if taken literally, apply to all animals — everything from hamsters and turtles to cows or horses.

But village Administrative Assistant Roger Stricker explains the ordinance would primarily be enforced against dogs and cats.

Also included would be other animals kept as pets. Stricker said, such as raccoons or monkeys.

THE PROGRAM would not apply to fish or reptiles or rodents, he said. And farm animals are covered by a separate program.

A different village ordinance bans dangerous or vicious animals and says that poultry, cattle, swine, sheep, goats or horses are not allowed in the village except on farms larger than 10 acres.

The village board has directed Village Atty. Paul Hamer to prepare a rough draft of the new ordinance. Stricker said the proposed law would be reviewed by village employees and the village board before it is actually passed into law.

The new law is being prepared in conjunction with the hiring of an animal control warden for the village. Village officials have said there are a large number of unlicensed dogs in the village. The new warden will also remove the burden of handling animal complaints from the village policemen.

Under the new law an annual license will be required and inoculations against rabies also would be required.

STRICKER said the tougher laws and increased enforcement will hopefully keep area children from having to undergo the painful series of anti-rabies shots if they are bitten by an animal.

The new law would increase annual licensing fees to $3, require all animals to be leashed in public areas and ban all animals from public halls or places where food is sold.

All animals would also be banned from school grounds, public playgrounds and parks whether or not they are leashed.

The law will make owner responsible for damage to property done by their animal and will require that dogs in heat be kept confined or on a leash at all times.

Any animal which attacks or threatens to attack to any person will be subject to immediate destruction by the village animal control warden or by local police, the proposed law says.

Procedures for people bitten or scratched by an animal and rabies procedures in the local ordinance would be updated to conform to state statutes and to procedures of the village police department.

DESPITE THE LOSS OF his sight, Chick Johnston continues to teach music. Taking a lesson from Johnston is Dan Novak, 9, of Prospect Heights. In addition to giving lessons, Johnston plays at a restaurant in Gurnee.

Sears Plans New Catalog Store Here

Sears, Roebuck and Co. is planning to begin building a new and larger catalog surplus store in Wheeling in early spring and have the store open for business by next fall.

In a letter to the Wheeling Village Board this week, a Sears representative said that negotiations for a site for the store, just east of Jack London Junior High School and the School Dist. 21 administrative center, are "progressing satisfactorily."

The letter told the Wheeling officials that the negotiations for use of the site next to the Dunhurst Shopping Center could be completed within 60 days.

"Subject to finalizing these negotiations, we anticipate a groundbreaking in early spring with a fall 1972 opening," the letter said.

Sears currently leases a former supermarket building in the Dunhurst Shopping Center for its catalog surplus store.

WHEELING OFFICIALS have been holding up rezoning for the new Sears store property as a club against the Dunhurst Realty Corp., which now owns the property, to require improvements to the Dunhurst Shopping Center.

The village had been unsuccessful in the past in getting the firm to repair its parking lot, provide landscaping and generally clean up the appearance of the shopping center.

But now, with the village holding zoning power over the land proposed for the Sears store, many of those things are getting done.

In the letter to the village, Sears officials did say that they must continue to park truck trailers adjacent to the current catalog outlet to store merchandise. They said the trailers are necessitated by the lack of space in the small rented store.

The catalog outlet store's success has apparently surprised even Sears officials, with crowds in the thousands lining up in the parking lot for special "midnight sales" held by the store.

The catalog surplus store is used to sell excess merchandise from regular Sears stores or from the firm's catalog sales division. Many of the items are sold at greatly discounted prices.

The store also has a department for customers to place regular Sears catalog orders.

Park Board Field To Two

The Prospect Heights Park District Board has narrowed its choice for a commissioner to fill a vacancy on the board to Wendell Sampson, of 502 W. Willow and Keith Vernon of 111 W. Willow.

The vacancy was created with the resignation of Lewis Wolthausen in November.

Sampson, a general contractor, has lived in Prospect Heights for 11 years. He is a member of the Lions Club and served on the board of directors for four years.

With park district plans for a community center and expansion of facilities in the future, he said his knowledge of construction may be what the park board is interested in.

Sampson said, "I do think my abilities in the building field would be of some value to the park district, and I am interested in recreation programs."

Vernon, physical education teacher at Jack London and James Fenimore Cooper Junior High Schools in Dist. 21, has lived in the area for 17 years including 10 years in Prospect Heights.

Vernon served as supervisor for the Wheeling Park District for four years and was associated with the recreation program for about 10 years.

'Losing My Sight Made Me Better Teacher': Musician

by PATRICK JOYCE

Being blind isn't really so bad, Chick Johnston tells you with a grin.

"I'm fortunate that I've been in music all my life," Johnston says. "Losing my sight has made me a better teacher."

Johnston gives guitar, banjo and bass lessons at his home in Northbrook and, three days a week, at The Music Shoppe in Wheeling.

It wasn't always that way. For decades, Chick Johnston traveled the country.

"I've been to 46 states — never made it to Oregon or Washington, or Hawaii either," he says. "I played with different bands, had my own group. I played solo, all kinds of guitar, classic, popular and jazz. I played the Hilton hotels. I played in Palm Springs. I was even in the same show with Shirley Temple."

Sitting in a cramped practice room in Wheeling, Chick smiles nostalgically as he recalls his days touring the country.

He relishes the show life and, though blind for six years, he still plays on weekends at a Shakey's restaurant in Gurnee.

CHICK JOHNSTON — his full name is Charles J. Johnston but only his young students call him anything other than Chick — even looks like a showman: thin red hair curling up over his collar, a black string tie and red vest under his sport jacket.

Even the smoked glass seem to fit the picture of a seasoned professional musician.

Chick, a native of Chicago, started playing while in high school. When he finished school, he became a professional and soon was playing around the country, in radio studio bands, in theatres and nightclubs.

Fifteen years ago, after he married for the second time, he settled down and began giving lessons in his Northbrook home and playing occasional engagements.

Then came the news: He had glaucoma. "They didn't catch it in time," Chick says casually. "I had three operations. Each time my eyes were supposed to get better but they got worse."

So, six years ago, Chick became blind. He tells you that blindness came gradually and that it wasn't hard to accept. Ordinarily that would be hard to believe but coming from the cheerful musician, you accept it.

The biggest problem was driving. Chick's wife — she used to say she's never learn — learned to drive. Friends volunteered to take him places.

CHICK DIDN'T even bother to tell prospective music students that he was blind.

"When they come for their first lesson I tell them I've had a little trouble with my eyes," Chick says. "They gradually get the idea, and I made light of it. They all seem to forget about it — even the youngsters."

Now, with his sight gone, Chick thinks he's a better teacher. "I'm more conscientious, I can concentrate better," he says. "As I listen I call the notes off, and tell the kids where to mark them on the sheet."

Chick has memorized "thousands of tunes" and he picks up new ones listening to the radio and records.

For the first student of the day, nine-year-old Dan Novak from Prospect Heights, Chick doesn't have to strain his memory. Student and teacher pick up their guitars and begin "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer."

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference said it will not accept the resignation of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of SCLC's Operation Breadbasket. Jackson offered his resignation earlier this week after he had been suspended while SCLC officials investigated corporations he allegedly set up without their knowledge, including "Black Expo."

Congress began eliminating the final barriers to adjournment of the first session of the 92nd Congress. Only mass absenteeism and the fading threat of a filibuster against foreign aid appeared to stand in the way.

A Miami-based ship line said one of its cargo vessels was being attacked by a Cuban gunboat. A spokesman for the Coast Guard said it was powerless to take any action other than sending medical aid because the ship was in international waters and was of Panamanian registry.

Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton was freed of charges in the 1967 killing of an Oakland policeman when the district attorney decided a fourth trial would be fruitless. The dismissal ended a four-year effort involving three trials to convict Newton for the slaying of Police-man John Frey in a pre-dawn street battle.

The State

Federal Appeals Court Judge Otto Kerner, former Illinois governor, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of bribery, mail fraud, tax evasion, perjury and conspiracy in a race track stock scandal. Kerner asked for, and was immediately relieved of participation in any activity of the court pending final disposition of the charges against him.

A Republican ward committeeman and two driver testing examiners were indicted on charges of bribery and official misconduct for allegedly allowing unqualified applicants to pass driving tests. The employees included Eddie Mack Jones, a 17th Ward committeeman.

The World

Pakistan walked out of the Security Council after denouncing the United Nations as a "fraud and farce" that delayed action in the India-Pakistan war until India could capture Dacca. The Council was considering a heavily pro-Indian resolution offered by Poland to stop the war.

Pakistani commanders in East Pakistan asked India for a cease-fire as Indian troops and tanks drove to nearly a mile from the besieged eastern capital of Dacca. A dispatch from Dacca reported India and Pakistan did not seem to be too far apart on terms for stopping the fighting in East Pakistan.

The War

The United States put off the next Vietnam peace talk session for another week, and the Communists responded by charging the move was aimed at killing the conference. In Cambodia, Communist forces firing massive mortar and rocket barrages cut off an estimated three brigades of Cambodian troops 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh. Thousands of civilian refugees were reported fleeing southward.

An early mid-morning calm on Wall Street was shattered by aggressive buying of stocks after midday. The Dow Jones industrial average, finished with a net gain of 8.62 at $63.76. The average price of a New York Stock Exchange Common share rose 33 cents. Advances outscored declines, 906 to 521 among the 1,726 issues on the tape. Turnover was 16,890,000 shares. Prices advanced in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

District Seeking $27,610

Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Elementary School Dist 21 is seeking $27,610 in federal funds to help pay for a program to identify the district's goals and objectives.

A proposal seeking the federal funds as a project under Title III of the Federal Elementary and Secondary Education Act was filed yesterday. It received school board approval last week.

The funds would pay teachers next summer to compile information on the goals, and methods of reaching those goals, that Dist. 21 teachers have suggested in a survey underway this year and last year.

Marjorie Beu, district curriculum director, said the district will use its own funds to pay for the work on the project during the school year, but needs federal help to pay the salaries for the summer work.

"School districts have operated too long without concretely stated educational objectives, without a system of accountability which would measure the attainment of school district goals and objectives," the proposal states.

Once the district compiles the details on its goals and objectives this summer, the program will be implemented in the curriculum next school year, Miss Beu said.

THE DISTRICT will then seek additional federal funds to evaluate the success of the program in the summer of 1973, she said.

The portion of the work financed by the district so far has included developing lists of goals in various subject area committees including language

$15,700 For Library Items

Federal funds will provide $15,700 worth of library materials for public and parochial schools within the boundaries of School Dist. 21.

The school Dist. 21 board Thursday approved applications for the books, slides, filmstrips and records for its 15 schools, for the district resource center and St. Joseph the Worker School in Wheeling.

"Funds which would have been used for materials for St. Alphonsus School in Prospect Heights have been diverted into the district's resource center at the request of that school," Dist. 21 Asst.

arts, math, science, social studies, physical education, music, art, special education, and outdoor education.

The summer work for which the district is seeking federal funds would take the hopes and wishes of those committees and translate them into practical objectives, she said. "We must know our destination before we can schedule our route," she said.

The Title III project fits in with the district's "program, planning, budgeting, evaluation system" which is being implemented to revamp day-to-day operations in the school district.

Miss Beu said the grant would begin in April with in-service training for the teachers who would work on the project for the summer if the grant is approved.

Supt. John Barger explained.

Barger said the district is assured of receiving the funds which come from Title II of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. He said the total reimbursement might not reach the $15,000 figure, but the district had applied for a slightly higher amount than it expects to spend, to be sure of a 100 per cent reimbursement.

Barger said the funds are allocated on the basis of $1.67 per pupil to each of the public and parochial schools in the district.

At the school board meeting last week, Supt. Kenneth Gill told the board that a similar program identifying goals of the board and administrators would be conducted by a Northwestern University professor later this year.

Gill said he also hoped to involve some citizens in the evaluation of board goals at a later date.

"We've set up this big elaborate program for the teachers," Gill noted, pointing out he felt the board should do its evaluating first.

"Our whole program, planning and budgeting system will revolve around it so it's of utmost importance," Gill said.

"I really don't see how we can ask our staff to do it unless we do it," Gill told the school board.

Drug Task Force Makes First Arrest

A narcotics ring operating in Arlington Heights was cracked Tuesday night by a special suburban police coalition formed this year to fight drug traffic in the north and northwest suburbs.

Arlington Heights police arrested three youths at Dana Point apartments, 1405 Central Rd., at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, after one of the youths allegedly made a narcotics sale to an undercover agent of the Metropolitan Narcotics Dangerous Drugs Enforcement Group (MEG).

Phillip Smith, 21, 1405 Central Rd., Arlington Heights, was charged with illegal sale of dangerous drugs. He allegedly made the sale to an MEG undercover agent in the parking lot of the apartment complex. Barbara Armbrust, 20, of 272 Kirchoff Rd., Palatine, and Michael Bock, 18, of Roselle, were also arrested and charged with conspiracy to sell dangerous drugs. The arrests climaxed a two-month narcotics investigation by MEG.

According to Arlington Heights police, 800 tablets of mescaline (a hallucinogenic drug) and 240 grams of marijuana, were seized in the raid.

THE ARLINGTON Heights investigation was the first conducted solely by MEG. The group has been involved with numerous arrests made by state drug agents.

MEG was created in June to control drug use in the suburbs and consists of agents from 19 north and northwest suburban police departments. The organization works with a $197,000 federal grant under the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968.

The Cook County Sheriff's police also supplies manpower to the organization. Local police department membership includes Palatine, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Mount Prospect.

According to MEG director and Niles Police Chief Clarence Emerickson, the concept of a police organization to combat drug abuse "has been in the works for about three years," but the federal grant was not approved until this summer. Emerickson said MEG's central headquarters is not located in one community but moves to various suburban municipalities.

Many Sump Pumps Down

The unseasonable rain yesterday caught some Buffalo Grove residents with their sump pumps down.

Basements were flooded, including some that normally are kept dry by sump pumps.

"They had disconnected the pumps for the winter and there was nothing we could do," said Bill Davis, director of public works for Buffalo Grove.

Flooding reports began coming in to police from the University Drive area of Cambridge shortly after midnight. Homeowners in that area are perennial flood victims.

A sewer backed up in Rosewood Avenue and interconnections were flooded at Farrington Drive and Springside Lane and at Dundee and Arlington Heights Roads.

Davis received no reports of flooding from Mill Creek, an area flooded last week. However, construction areas of Mill Creek were seas of mud.

School Choral Groups To Sing In Chicago

Choral groups from Prospect and Wheeling High Schools will perform tomorrow at the Chicago Civic Center.

The groups will sing from 12:30 until 2 p.m. They have been invited to perform near the Picasso statue by Jordan Canzona, Cook County director of the fine arts. If the weather is bad, the groups will move inside the center.

According to Sterling Mische, Prospect music department head, Canzona contacted High School Dist. 214 because "he had heard of the excellence of our music program." He said the Prospect Singing Choir, performing 12:30 p.m. to 1 p.m., will sing carols including "Silver Bells," "Winter Wonderland" and "White Christmas."

CLEANUP CREWS WORKED through the night removing equipment, uniforms and as much as eight inches of water from the locker rooms and fieldhouse at Rolling Meadows High School after heavy rains caused the sewers to back up and flood lower levels.

Water Closes Rolling Meadows High

by JOANN VAN WYE
Rolling Meadows High School was closed yesterday after heavy rains caused the sewers to back up and flood lower levels.

The fieldhouse and locker rooms had as much as eight inches of water in some areas early in the morning.

The flooding conditions resulted when the Metropolitan Sanitary District interceptor along Central Road, where the school is located, filled and could not handle the runoff water.

The situation at the high school was first noticed at 2 a.m. yesterday when cleanup crews saw the sewers bubbling up, according to Norman Bucher, head custodian.

"I called in nine men and they worked all night to get things up off the floor," said Bucher.

Bomb Threat In Adoption Battle

by MARGE FERROLI
Arlington Heights police are investigating a bomb threat made late Tuesday to Mrs. Paula Marshall, an Arlington Heights mother who earlier Tuesday was granted custody of her daughter, Amy, after a two-year court battle.

Police spokesmen said Mrs. Marshall reported the caller was a male and sounded as though in his 40s. He reportedly used abusive language and threatened her house would be bombed after saying he had adopted children of his own.

Police advised the telephone company of the call and are taking "the usual precautions."

Mrs. Marshall, who lives at 2324 Goebbert Rd. with her 7 year old daughter, was awarded custody of the 2½ year old child when Cook County Circuit Court Judge Helen McGillicuddy upheld an Illinois Appellate Court ruling ordering a Colorado Springs, Colo. couple to return Amy to her natural mother.

Mrs. Marshall said yesterday she received only one threatening phone call, "but it was enough to scare me."

"You hear about things like this all the time, but when someone threatens your own life, it's another story," she said.

"There are just some sick people in this world."

The court ordered that Mrs. Marshall receive immediate custody of the child, but Mrs. Sylvia Decker, one of her attorneys, said she has not yet been advised when Amy will be returned to her natural mother. But she said she expects notification shortly.

AMY IS NOW in the custody of her adoptive parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Huebert. The Hueberts adopted the baby in June, 1969.

However, the court ruled Mrs. Marshall, in giving up her child had been defrauded and had been under strain and duress.

"She never consented to give the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker said. "She was told at the time by the lawyer for the adoptive parents there would be a six-month waiting period during which she could reclaim custody of the child."

This waiting period, however, was nonexistent, Mrs. Decker said, which led her to unknowingly hand the child over to the Hueberts.

Mrs. Marshall's husband, Timothy, from whom she was then and is currently separated, was responsible for handing the child to the Cook County Dept. of Public Aid, which handled the adoptive proceedings, Mrs. Decker said.

She explained Marshall gave the child to a Julie Brown, who in turn presented Amy to the public aid department.

"She (Miss Brown) had a financial interest in putting the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker claimed, explaining the adoption would have eliminated child support payments for Amy by Marshall.

Miss Brown was a mutual friend of the Marshalls, Mrs. Decker said. Mrs. Marshall was unaware of her husband's relationship with her at the time of the adoption and "completely trusted her," she said.

MRS. DECKER placed the blame for the confusion over the adoption in three places:

—on the Hueberts' attorney who had claimed there would be a six-month waiting period;

—on the Public Aid department for not fully explaining the adoption proceedings to Mrs. Marshall; —and on Miss Brown for "misleading" Mrs. Marshall and giving her advice to turn the child over to the public aid department.

Mrs. Decker said Mrs. Marshall was under strain shortly after Amy's birth because she had just separated from her husband. She also did not have a job and worried about supporting her two children.

"A child cannot be taken away from its natural mother unless the mother consents to it or is proven unfit," Mrs. Decker said. "The court has no right to investigate the qualifications of a natural mother, except in an extreme case of child abuse."

She said Mrs. Marshall went to the public aid department for advice on how best to handle her situation shortly after Amy's birth.

"They told her in 15 minutes all her rights, which is a complete farce," Mrs. Decker said. "The public aid department must fully explain adoption procedures and assistance or they might as well just kidnap a child."

MRS. MURPHY said, "We would like to see a three-man committee set up to investigate the charges brought against the chief by the patrolmen. We request that the mayor and city council appoint one citizen, the patrolmen appoint one citizen and these two citizens choose a third citizen to act as chairman. We would like these three men to conduct an investigation of the chief and have them report all their findings to the public."

During a lull in the exchange, Flood rose to address the council and said, "Mr. mayor, I agree with you on one thing. You've said that you shouldn't believe everything in the newspapers. You're right, because the statements (denying the charges of coercion) that you and the chief made are lies."

Meyer banged the gavel, ruled Flood out of order and ordered him to sit down or leave. Flood tried to keep talking and the mayor called for a recess.

After the recess, Mrs. Greenway tried to speak, and Ald. William Ahrens objected, saying the discussion was closed. Ald. Fred Jacobson said the council should consider continuing the discussion.

The council voted 7-3 to end the discussion, with Jacobson, James Huddleston and Steve Eberhard voting to continue the discussion.

Mrs. Greenway said, "The mayor has refused to answer any direct questions. He's talking in circles. We want direct answers, not the circus we've been subjected to."

Mrs. O'Malley said "the policemen have tried to deal with the city before and come up against a blank wall."

Meyer responded saying, "Since the inception of the police department in 1955 this department has had rules and regulations and a grievance procedure to guard rights."

"The patrolmen have bargaining power within the department. But if they won't sit down and bargain by themselves, we won't recognize anyone's right to bargain for them."

Meyer told Mrs. O'Malley that if the men "will make charges in this council in writing and sign them, the council will conduct an investigation. I will appoint an outside committee — outside of the police department — to investigate."

INDICATING his support for fewer government controls on the economy, Crane said that "the alternative to a free economy is coercion." He said "history shows the sorry results when government increases that control."

Crane predicted that, as government enlarges its economic controls the first victims could well be small businessmen. "With more constraints, the profit margins will get thinner and thinner. I can anticipate the end of small entrepreneurs."

Though Crane feels the situation is worsening, he also said it was not hopeless. "I urge you not to adopt a defeatist attitude."

Wives Ask CCPA Coercion Charge Investigation

In a stormy exchange with Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer at Tuesday's City Council meeting, the wives of six city policemen demanded that an impartial investigation be opened into charges that Police Chief Lewis Case coerced four patrolmen to resign from the Combined Counties Police Association (CCPA) last week.

The women asked that an independent three-member committee be appointed to study the charges and report their findings. They want one member to be appointed by the City Council, one by patrolmen and a third to be appointed by the other two.

Meyer said he would appoint a panel to study the charges if and when the four patrolmen bring him written statements of their grievances against Case. Meyer said he would appoint a study group according to his own guidelines.

Mrs. Bruce Murphy was first to call for an independent, public investigation. She told the council she doesn't think an investigation by the mayor, "can be honest because he appointed Chief Case."

The six women were Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Brian O'Malley, Mrs. Mary Hamann, Mrs. Harvey Greenway, Mrs. Dennis Van Jacobs and Mrs. Jim Cosgrove. Their husbands are all Rolling Meadows patrolmen and members of the CCPA. The men were not at the council meeting.

Sgt. John Flood, a Cook County policeman and president of the entire CCPA organization, was also at the meeting and charged that statements made by Meyer and Case that the resignations were voluntary "are lies."

But the debate was primarily between Meyer and the women. The women said they believe the patrolmen were intimidated, and criticized the council for not starting an investigation.

MEYER SAID the women were basing their charges on second-hand information and did not have all the facts.

Mrs. Van Jacobs said the wives are concerned because "the futures of our families are at stake."

Most of his letters from businessmen have indicated support for wage-price controls, Crane said. But he warned, "When the teeth begin to apply, the businessman will find he is working with more constraints than labor or the consumer."

Crane Lashes New Economy

Lashing out at President Nixon's economic recovery plan, U. S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., said in a speech yesterday, "The wage-price controls attack the symptoms, not the cause, of inflation."

Crane spoke yesterday to the members of the Elk Grove Village Association of Industry and Commerce during their annual meeting held at the Holiday Inn, Elk Grove Village.

Crane told the businessmen the "tragedy" of all the current government economic measures "is their failure to recognize the true cause of inflation." The cause, he said, was the government's "deficit financing and expansion of the currency supply."

Crane termed the current "inflation psychology" in which wage earners expect periodic raises just to maintain the current earning power a "sorry problem." But, he added, "the public's attention has been diverted from the source of that problem with the wage-price controls."

Borrowing an analogy from economist Milton Friedman, Crane likened the wage-price controls to "putting a brick on a pressure cooker when Congress is controlling the heat." Doing this, he said, would only result in the need "for more bricks."

Crane predicted that, as government enlarges its economic controls the first victims could well be small businessmen. "With more constraints, the profit margins will get thinner and thinner. I can anticipate the end of small entrepreneurs."

Though Crane feels the situation is worsening, he also said it was not hopeless. "I urge you not to adopt a defeatist attitude."

She added, "I don't think the people of Rolling Meadows want a police force that is appointed politically on the basis that this man will shut up and this man will do what he's told."

She told the aldermen, "In order to check the power of the mayor and the chief we have to have the aldermen take a stand and ask for an investigation. Maybe this is a dictatorship where Roland Meyer is king and you are puppets."

Mrs. Van Jacobs criticized the lack of a responsive grievance procedure within the department and said the CCPA "would give the men a voice and allow them to get up here with dignity and talk."

Mrs. O'Malley said "the policemen have tried to deal with the city before and come up against a blank wall."

Meyer responded saying, "Since the inception of the police department in 1955 this department has had rules and regulations and a grievance procedure to guard rights."

"The patrolmen have bargaining power within the department. But if they won't sit down and bargain by themselves, we won't recognize anyone's right to bargain for them."

Officials, Catholic Church Oppose County

Village Refuses To Back Down On Lake-Cook Road

Buffalo Grove officials steadfastly refused to yield to pressure from Cook County, the Village of Wheeling, and the Catholic Church and won a partial victory in their fight against the proposed re-routing of Lake Cook Road. The route would go through village-owned land near the Buffalo Grove municipal building.

At a two-hour meeting yesterday in the Cook County Highway department offices, Buffalo Grove Village Pres. Gary Armstrong said, "It seems to us (the village) there should be a better way to put the road through."

"We don't object to the road going through the village. What we object to is how it's going through."

PRESENT AT THE meeting in the Civic Center in Chicago were Armstrong, Village Mgr. Daniel Larson, and village engineer Arnold Seaberg from Buffalo Grove; and Wheeling Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon, Trustee Edward Berger, Public Works Director Larry Oppenheimer and Thompson Dyke, the Wheeling planning consultant.

Representing Cook County were Jack Stearn, chief design engineer, and about five other officials. Two officials from the Lake County Highway department were also at the meeting.

The Catholic Church was represented by the officials from the Chicago archdiocese and an assistant priest at St.

Mary's Church. The church supports the county's route because it will leave the St. Mary's Church, school and cemetery complex intact.

The meeting was called after the village passed a resolution Nov. 21 denying a request from Cook County that the village dedicate land for the new route.

The county has spent over $100,000 on developing plans for a route that would run between the municipal building and the village reservoir and continue on between St. Mary's Catholic Church and the old Buffalo Utility Company's sewerage treatment plant.

The road would then be connected to a part already constructed in Wheeling.

OUTLINING Buffalo Grove's objections to the route, Armstrong said the road would run so close to the municipal building that "we can spit on cars as they go by."

He also said a public works garage is being considered for the land the county wants to use for the road.

Wheeling wants the road to be built as soon as possible because the village feels the new road would spur development.

"We're hurting because the road hasn't been completed," Scanlon said.

County officials were irritated at Buffalo Grove's objection to the route, because they thought objections to the route had been settled in 1970. They have nearly finished the construction drawings and have started acquiring land along the right-of-way east of McHenry Road in Wheeling.

Stearn produced a letter from Buffalo Grove dated in March of 1970 saying the village does not object to the route if some stipulations were met by the county.

Stearn said the county took the letter as meaning the village had approved the route and proceeded with the project.

ARMSTRONG NOTED the letter was sent before he took office and indicated the new members of the village board elected in April of 1971 do not necessarily agree with the sentiments of the former trustees.

Armstrong took the position that the letter does not constitute an agreement between the village and the county on the proposed route, and he pointed out the village never passed a resolution dedicating the land to the county.

County officials disagreed and said the present trustees are bound by the decisions of earlier trustees.

Officials then asked Armstrong if the village would agree to abandoning the present Lake Cook Road and realigning Raupp Boulevard to provide room for the public works garage to the west of the municipal building.

Armstrong said he couldn't accept the offer until he consulted the trustees, so the meeting ended.

DESPITE THE LOSS OF his sight, Chick Johnston continues to teach music. Taking a lesson from Johnston is Dan Novak, 9, of Prospect Heights. In addition to giving lessons, Johnston plays at a restaurant in Gurnee.

'No Road Work, No Vehicle Sticker'

A Buffalo Grove man, annoyed by the village's failure to repair part of Arlington Heights Road, has refused to buy a 1972 vehicle sticker.

J. Joseph Klodner wrote the village he would not buy the sticker until the road is repaired and said he hopes "other villages will also withhold payment."

In his letter to village president Gary Armstrong, Klodner complained the Cook County section of the road is "not only injurious to my automobile and to others that travel it, but more importantly, an extreme hazard."

The Cook County section of Arlington Heights Road is deeply rutted in western Buffalo Grove. The village has been unable to persuade the county to repair and village officials have said the village cannot afford to do the work itself.

However, Lake County repaired the section of the road in that county this fall.

"IT IS A SHAME," Klodner wrote, "that while our neighbors to the north have taken the bull by the horns and have had the northern half of Arlington Heights Road repaired, we cannot at the same time make the total length of Arlington Heights Road driveable."

Klodner was moved to make his protest after receiving a 1972 vehicle sticker application in the mail.

He pointed out a village letter accompanying the application said "pavement maintenance is also provided by your fee."

In his reply, Klodner, who lives at 14 Regent Ct., said, "Since I am one of hundreds in Buffalo Grove who use Arlington Heights Road daily, I can certainly attest to the fact that this particular pavement is not being maintained. The road is definitely in worse shape than it ever was, and, with the advent of the winter season, it obviously will continue to deteriorate."

Repair of the road was an issue in last spring's election and village officials concede that it has deteriorated badly. After Cook County refused to repair the road, village officials even talked of closing it to traffic.

'Losing My Sight Made Me Better Teacher': Musician

by PATRICK JOYCE

Being blind isn't really so bad, Chick Johnston tells you with a grin.

"I'm fortunate that I've been in music all my life," Johnston says. "Losing my sight has made me a better teacher."

Johnston gives guitar, banjo and bass lessons at his home in Northbrook and, three days a week, at The Music Shoppe in Wheeling.

It wasn't always that way. For decades, Chick Johnston traveled the country.

"I've been to 46 states — never made it to Oregon or Washington, or Hawaii either," he says. "I played with different bands, had my own group. I played solo, all kinds of guitar, classic, popular and jazz. I played the Hilton hotels, I played in Palm Springs. I was even in the same show with Shirley Temple."

Sitting in a cramped practice room in Wheeling, Chick smiles nostalgically as he recalls his days touring the country.

He relishes the show life and, though blind for six years, he still plays on weekends at a Shakey's restaurant in Gurnee.

CHICK JOHNSTON — his full name is Charles J. Johnston but only his young students call him anything other than Chick — even looks like a showman: thin red hair curling up over his collar, a black string tie and red vest under his sport jacket.

Even the smoked glass seem to fit the picture of a seasoned professional musician.

Chick, a native of Chicago, started playing while in high school. When he finished school, he became a professional and soon was playing around the country, in radio studio bands, in theatres and nightclubs.

Fifteen years ago, after he married for the second time, he settled down and began giving lessons in his Northbrook home and playing occasional engagements.

Then came the news: He had glaucoma. "They didn't catch it in time," Chick says casually. "I had three operations. Each time my eyes were supposed to get better but they got worse."

So, six years ago, Chick became blind. He tells you that blindness came gradually and that it wasn't hard to accept. Ordinarily that would be hard to believe — but coming from the cheerful musician, you accept it.

The biggest problem was driving. Chick's wife — she used to say she's never learn — learned to drive. Friends volunteered to take him places.

CHICK DIDN'T even bother to tell prospective music students that he was blind.

"When they come for their first lesson I tell them I've had a little trouble with my eyes," Chick says. "They gradually get the idea, and I made light of it. They all seem to forget about it — even the youngsters."

Now, with his sight gone, Chick thinks he's a better teacher. "I'm more conscientious, I can concentrate better," he says. "As I listen I call the notes off, and tell the kids where to mark them on the sheet."

Chick has memorized "thousands of tunes" and he picks up new ones listening to the radio and records.

For the first student of the day, nine-year-old Dan Novak from Prospect Heights, Chick doesn't have to strain his memory. Student and teacher pick up their guitars and begin "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer."

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference said it will not accept the resignation of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of SCLC's Operation Breadbasket. Jackson offered his resignation earlier this week after he had been suspended while SCLC officials investigated corporations he allegedly set up without their knowledge, including "Black Expo."

Congress began eliminating the final barriers to adjournment of the first session of the 92nd Congress. Only mass absenteeism and the fading threat of a filibuster against foreign aid appeared to stand in the way.

A Miami-based ship line said one of its cargo vessels was being attacked by a Cuban gunboat. A spokesman for the Coast Guard said it was powerless to take any action other than sending medical aid because the ship was in international waters and was of Panamanian registry.

Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton was freed of charges in the 1967 killing of an Oakland policeman when the district attorney decided a fourth trial would be fruitless. The dismissal ended a four-year effort involving three trials to convict Newton for the slaying of Policeman John Frey in a predawn street battle.

The State

Federal Appeals Court Judge Otto Kerner, former Illinois governor, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of bribery, mail fraud, tax evasion, perjury and conspiracy in a race track stock scandal. Kerner asked for, and was immediately relieved of participation in any activity of the court pending final disposition of the charges against him.

A Republican ward committeeman and two driver testing examiners were indicted on charges of bribery and official misconduct for allegedly allowing unqualified applicants to pass driving tests. The employees included Eddie Mack Jones, a 17th Ward committeeman.

The World

Pakistan walked out of the Security Council after denouncing the United Nations as a "fraud and farce" that delayed action in the India-Pakistan war until India could capture Dacca. The Council was considering a heavily pro-Indian resolution offered by Poland to stop the war.

Pakistani commanders in East Pakistan asked India for a cease-fire as Indian troops and tanks drove to nearly a mile from the besieged eastern capital of Dacca. A dispatch from Dacca reported India and Pakistan did not seem to be too far apart on terms for stopping the fighting in East Pakistan.

The War

The United States put off the next Vietnam peace talk session for another week, and the Communists responded by charging the move was aimed at killing the conference. In Cambodia, Communist forces firing massive mortar and rocket barrages cut off an estimated three brigades of Cambodian troops 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh. Thousands of civilian refugees were reported fleeing southward.

The Market

An early mid-morning calm on Wall Street was shattered by aggressive buying of stocks after midday. The Dow Jones industrial average, finished with a net gain of 8.62 at 863.78. The average price of a New York Stock Exchange Common share rose 33 cents. Advances outscored declines, 906 to 521 among the 1,726 issues on the tape. Turnover was 16,890,000 shares. Prices advanced in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

District Seeking $27,610

Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Elementary School Dist. 21 is seeking $27,610 in federal funds to help pay for a program to identify the district's goals and objectives.

A proposal seeking the federal funds as a project under Title III of the Federal Elementary and Secondary Education Act was filed yesterday. It received school board approval last week.

The funds would pay teachers next summer to compile information on the goals, and methods of reaching those goals, that Dist. 21 teachers have suggested in a survey underway this year and last year.

Marjorie Beu, district curriculum director, said the district will use its own funds to pay for the work on the project during the school year, but needs federal help to pay the salaries for the summer work.

"School districts have operated too long without concretely stated educational objectives, without a system of accountability which would measure the attainment of school district goals and objectives," the proposal states.

Once the district completes the details on its goals and objectives this summer, the program will be implemented in the curriculum next school year, Miss Beu said.

THE DISTRICT will then seek additional federal funds to evaluate the success of the program in the summer of 1973, she said.

The portion of the work financed by the district so far has included developing lists of goals in various subject area committees including language

$15,700 For Library Items

Federal funds will provide $15,700 worth of library materials for public and parochial schools within the boundaries of School Dist. 21.

The school Dist. 21 board Thursday approved applications for the books, slides, filmstrips and records for its 15 schools, for the district resource center and St. Joseph the Worker School in Wheeling.

"Funds which would have been used for materials for St. Alphonsus School in Prospect Heights have been diverted into the district's resource center at the request of that school," Dist. 21 Asst.

Supt. John Barger explained.

Barger said the district is assured of receiving the funds which come from Title II of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. He said the total reimbursement might not reach the $15,000 figure, but the district had applied for a slightly higher amount than it expects to spend, to be sure of a 100 per cent reimbursement.

Barger said the funds are allocated on the basis of $1.67 per pupil to each of the public and parochial schools in the district.

arts, math, science, social studies, physical education, music, art, special education, and outdoor education.

The summer work for which the district is seeking federal funds would take the hopes and wishes of those committees and translate them into practical objectives, she said. "We must know our destination before we can schedule our route," she said.

The Title III project fits in with the district's "program, planning, budgeting, evaluation system" which is being implemented to revamp day-to-day operations in the school district.

Miss Beu said the grant would begin in April with in-service training for the teachers who would work on the project for the summer if the grant is approved.

At the school board meeting last week, Supt. Kenneth Gill told the board that a similar program identifying goals of the board and administrators would be conducted by a Northwestern University professor later this year.

Gill said he also hoped to involve some citizens in the evaluation of board goals at a later date.

"We've set up this big elaborate program for the teachers," Gill noted, pointing out he felt the board should do its evaluating first.

"Our whole program, planning and budgeting system will revolve around it so it's of utmost importance," Gill said.

"I really don't see how we can ask our staff to do it unless we do it," Gill told the school board.

Drug Task Force Makes First Arrest

A narcotics ring operating in Arlington Heights was cracked Tuesday night by a special suburban police coalition formed this year to fight drug traffic in the north and northwest suburbs.

Arlington Heights police arrested three youths at Dana Point apartments, 1405 Central Rd., at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, after one of the youths allegedly made a narcotics sale to an undercover agent of the Metropolitan Narcotics Dangerous Drugs Enforcement Group (MEG).

Phillip Smith, 21, 1405 Central Rd., Arlington Heights, was charged with illegal sale of dangerous drugs. He allegedly made the sale to an MEG undercover agent in the parking lot of the apartment complex. Barbara Armbrust, 20, of 272 Kirchoff Rd., Palatine, and Michael Bock, 18, of Roselle, were also arrested and charged with conspiracy to sell dangerous drugs. The arrests climaxed a two-month narcotics investigation by MEG.

According to Arlington Heights police, 800 tablets of mescaline (a hallucinogenic drug) and 240 grams of marijuana, were seized in the raid.

THE ARLINGTON Heights investigation was the first conducted solely by MEG. The group has been involved with numerous arrests made by state drug agents.

MEG was created in June to control drug use in the suburbs and consists of agents from 19 north and northwest suburban police departments. The organization works with a $197,000 federal grant under the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968.

The Cook County Sheriff's police also supplies manpower to the organization. Local police department membership includes Palatine, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Mount Prospect.

According to MEG director and Niles Police Chief Clarence Emerickson, the concept of a police organization to combat drug abuse "has been in the works for about three years," but the federal grant was not approved until this summer. Emerickson said MEG's central headquarters is not located in one community but moves to various suburban municipalities.

Many Sump Pumps Down

The unseasonable rain yesterday caught some Buffalo Grove residents with their sump pumps down.

Basements were flooded, including some that normally are kept dry by sump pumps.

"They had disconnected the pumps for the winter and there was nothing we could do," said Bill Davis, director of public works for Buffalo Grove.

Flooding reports began coming in to police from the University Drive area of Cambridge shortly after midnight. Homeowners in that area are perennial flood victims.

A sewer backed up in Rosewood Avenue and intersections were flooded at Farrington Drive and Springside Lane and at Dundee and Arlington Heights Roads.

Davis received no reports of flooding from Mill Creek, an area flooded last week. However, construction areas of Mill Creek were seas of mud.

School Choral Groups To Sing In Chicago

Choral groups from Prospect and Wheeling High Schools will perform tomorrow at the Chicago Civic Center.

The groups will sing from 12:30 until 2 p.m. They have been invited to perform near the Picasso statue by Jordan Canzona, Cook County director of the fine arts. If the weather is bad, the groups will move inside the center.

According to Sterling Mische, Prospect music department head, Canzona contacted High School Dist. 214 because "he had heard of the excellence of our music program." He said the Prospect Sing Choir, performing 12:30 p.m. to 1 p.m., will sing carols including "Silver Bells," "Winter Wonderland" and "White Christmas."

Suit Dismissed Over Cop Killing Of Boy In 1965

A $30,000 suit against the Village of Palatine stemming from the fatal shooting of a 16-year-old youth more than six years ago has been dismissed in Cook County Circuit Court.

Administrators of the estate of Bernard J. Azure charged the village and two Palatine policemen with "wrongful death" in the shooting of the Palatine youth Aug. 29, 1965.

A Cook County Circuit Court jury, meeting in the Chicago Civic Center issued a "not guilty" verdict Monday following about 30 minutes of deliberation. The trial lasted two days.

Part of the three-count suit earlier had been thrown out of court on a directed verdict by Judge Norman Barry.

Atty. Frederick O. Floberg represented the plaintiffs, and atty. Clark King of the law firm of Lord, Bissell and Brook, Chicago, represented the defendants. He was assisted by Palatine village attorneys.

Named in the suit, in addition to the village, were Police Lt. Raymond Radlein and Patrolman Frank Incaprero. Both are still on the Palatine force.

THE DEFENSE case was based on a section of the Illinois Revised Statutes that justifies the use of deadly force by police officers under certain circumstances.

In the Azure case, police said they had been notified that a youth with a pistol was in the vicinity of Slade and Bothwell streets. The following account was given by Palatine police at the time of the incident:

A Fox River Grove couple reported to police at 10:08 p.m. the night of the shooting that they had dropped off a hitchhiker in the downtown area whom they said had a gun.

Minutes later, a patrolman heard glass breaking at the former Marsala's Finer Foods store, 21 Railroad Ave.

Palatine and Rolling Meadows policemen surrounded the area and ordered the person believed to have broken into the building to come out.

At that point, police said, Azure jumped from the broken window and ran down a nearby alley. Police fired warning shots, then another shot that struck the youth. A knife with a five-inch blade was found in his pocket.

He died the following day in Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights.

The couple who had notified police about the hitchhiker with the gun said Azure was not the same person they picked up.

A Cook County coroner's jury ruled the death was "justifiable homicide."

Police Chief Robert R. Centner said yesterday it was never determined who fired the fatal shot.

The victim was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence M. Azure, 503 E. Baldwin Rd.

CARS SWISHED past the new United States Post Office in Palatine Wednesday as heavy rains blocked off most of the day. A post office employee said the water appeared to come mainly from a nearby apartment complex and a factory. The area also was partly flooded last week after a heavy rainfall.

Bomb Threat In Adoption Battle

by MARGE FERROLI

Arlington Heights police are investigating a bomb threat made late Tuesday to Mrs. Paula Marshall, an Arlington Heights mother who earlier Tuesday was granted custody of her daughter, Amy, after a two-year court battle.

Police spokesmen said Mrs. Marshall reported the caller was a male and sounded as though in his 40s. He reportedly used abusive language and threatened her house would be bombed after saying he had adopted children of his own.

Police advised the telephone company of the call and are taking "the usual precautions."

Mrs. Marshall, who lives at 2224 Goebert Rd. with her 7 year old daughter, was awarded custody of the 2½ year old child when Cook County Circuit Court Judge Helen McGillicuddy upheld an Illinois Appellate Court ruling ordering a Colorado Springs, Colo. couple to return Amy to her natural mother.

Mrs. Marshall said yesterday she received only one threatening phone call, "but it was enough to scare me." "You hear about things like this all the time, but when someone threatens your own life, it's another story," she said. "There are just some sick people in this world."

The court ordered that Mrs. Marshall receive immediate custody of the child, but Mrs. Sylvia Decker, one of her attorneys, said she has not yet been advised when Amy will be returned to her natural mother. But she said she expects notification shortly.

AMY IS NOW IN the custody of her adoptive parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Huebert. The Hueberts adopted the baby in June, 1969.

However, the court ruled Mrs. Marshall, in giving up her child had been defrauded and had been under strain and duress.

"She never consented to give the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker said. "She was told at the time by the lawyer for the adoptive parents there would be a six-month waiting period during which she could reclaim custody of the child."

This waiting period, however, was nonexistent, Mrs. Decker said, which led her to unknowingly hand the child over to the Hueberts.

Mrs. Marshall's husband, Timothy, from whom she was then and is currently separated, was responsible for handing the child to the Cook County Dept. of Public Aid, which handled the adoptive proceedings, Mrs. Decker said.

She explained Marshall gave the child to a Julie Brown, who in turn presented Amy to the public aid department.

"She (Miss Brown) had a financial interest in putting the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker claimed, explaining the adoption would have eliminated child support payments for Amy by Marshall. Miss Brown was a mutual friend of the Marshall, Mrs. Decker said. Mrs. Marshall was unaware of her husband's relationship with her at the time of the adoption and "completely trusted her," she said.

MRS. DECKER placed the blame for the confusion over the adoption in three places:

—on the Hueberts' attorney who had claimed there would be a six-month waiting period;

—on the Public Aid department for not fully explaining the adoption proceedings to Mrs. Marshall; —and on Miss Brown for "misleading" Mrs. Marshall and giving her advice to turn the child over to the public aid department.

Mrs. Decker said Mrs. Marshall was under strain shortly after Amy's birth because she had just separated from her husband. She also did not have a job and worried about supporting her two children.

"A child cannot be taken away from its natural mother unless the mother consents to it or is proven unfit," Mrs. Decker said. "The court has no right to investigate the qualifications of a natural mother, except in an extreme case of child abuse."

She said Mrs. Marshall went to the public aid department for advice on how best to handle her situation shortly after Amy's birth.

"They told her in 15 minutes all her rights, which is a complete farce," Mrs. Decker said. "The public aid department must fully explain adoption procedures and assistance or they might as well just kidnap a child."

THE PUBLIC AID department, although dealing primarily with welfare payments, does act as an adoption service, but is not a state recognized adoption agency, Mrs. Decker said. The regular investigation proceedings of the adoptive and natural parents made by a recognized adoption agency are not conducted by the county office.

Study Coercion Charge: CCPA Wives

In a stormy exchange with Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer at Tuesday's City Council meeting, the wives of six city policemen demanded that an impartial investigation be opened into charges that Police Chief Lewis Case coerced four patrolmen to resign from the Combined Counties Police Association (CCPA) last week.

The women asked that an independent three-member committee be appointed to study the charges and report their findings. They want one member to be appointed by the City Council, one by patrolmen and a third to be appointed by the other two.

Meyer said he would appoint a panel to study the charges if and when the four patrolmen bring him written statements of their grievances against Case. Meyer said he would appoint a study group according to his own guidelines.

Mrs. Bruce Murphy was first to call for an independent, public investigation. She told the council she doesn't think an investigation by the mayor, "can be honest because he appointed Chief Case."

The six women were Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Brian O'Malley, Mrs. Marv Hamann, Mrs. Harvey Greenway, Mrs. Dennis Van Jacobs and Mrs. Jim Cosgrove. Their husbands are all Rolling Meadows patrolmen and members of the CCPA. The men were not at the council meeting.

Sgt. John Flood, a Cook County policeman and president of the entire CCPA organization, was also at the meeting and charged that statements made by Meyer and Case that the resignations were voluntary "are lies."

But the debate was primarily between Meyer and the women. The women said they believe the patrolmen were intimidated, and criticized the council for not starting an investigation.

MEYER SAID the women were basing their charges on second-hand information and did not have all the facts.

Mrs. Van Jacobs said the wives are concerned because "the futures of our families are at stake."

She added, "I don't think the people of Rolling Meadows want a police force that is appointed politically on the basis that this man will shut up and this man will do what he's told."

She told the aldermen, "In order to check the power of the mayor and the chief we have to have the aldermen take a stand and ask for an investigation. Maybe this is a dictatorship where Roland Meyer is king and you are puppets."

Mrs. Van Jacobs criticized the lack of a responsive grievance procedure within the department and said the CCPA "would give the men a voice and allow them to get up here with dignity and talk."

Mrs. O'Malley said "the policemen have tried to deal with the city before and come up against a blank wall."

Meyer responded saying, "Since the inception of the police department in 1955 this department has had rules and regulations and a grievance procedure to guard rights."

"The patrolmen have bargaining power within the department. But if they won't sit down and bargain by themselves, we won't recognize anyone's right to bargain for them."

Meyer told Mrs. O'Malley that if the men "will make charges in this council in writing and sign them, the council will conduct an investigation. I will appoint an outside committee — outside of the police department — to investigate."

MRS. MURPHY said, "We would like to see a three-man committee set up to investigate the charges brought against the chief by the patrolmen. We request that the mayor and city council appoint one citizen, the patrolmen appoint one citizen and these two citizens choose a third citizen to act as chairman. We would like these three men to conduct an investigation of the chief and have them report all their findings to the public."

During a lull in the exchange, Flood rose to address the council and said, "Mr. mayor, I agree with you on one thing. You've said that you shouldn't believe everything in the newspapers. You're right, because the statements (denying the charges of coercion) that you and the chief made are lies."

THIS SIGN GREETED students when they reported to Rolling Meadows High School yesterday. For more pictures see page 8.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference said it will not accept the resignation of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of SCLC's Operation Breadbasket. Jackson offered his resignation earlier this week after he had been suspended while SCLC officials investigated corporations he allegedly set up without their knowledge, including "Black Expo."

Congress began eliminating the final barriers to adjournment of the first session of the 92nd Congress. Only mass absenteeism and the fading threat of a filibuster against foreign aid appeared to stand in the way.

A Miami-based ship line said one of its cargo vessels was being attacked by a Cuban gunboat. A spokesman for the Coast Guard said it was powerless to take any action other than sending medical aid because the ship was in international waters and was of Panamanian registry.

Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton was freed of charges in the 1967 killing of an Oakland policeman when the district attorney decided a fourth trial would be fruitless. The dismissal ended a four-year effort involving three trials to convict Newton for the slaying of Policeman John Frey in a pre-dawn street battle.

The State

Federal Appeals Court Judge Otto Kerner, former Illinois governor, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of bribery, mail fraud, tax evasion, perjury and conspiracy in a race-track stock scandal. Kerner asked for, and was immediately relieved of participation in any activity of the court pending final disposition of the charges against him.

A Republican ward committeeman and two driver testing examiners were indicted on charges of bribery and official misconduct for allegedly allowing unqualified applicants to pass driving tests. The employees included Eddie Mack Jones, a 17th Ward committeeman.

The World

Pakistan walked out of the Security Council after denouncing the United Nations as a "fraud and farce" that delayed action in the India-Pakistan war until India could capture Dacca. The Council was considering a heavily pro-Indian resolution offered by Poland to stop the war.

Pakistani commanders in East Pakistan asked India for a cease-fire as Indian troops and tanks drove to nearly a mile from the besieged eastern capital of Dacca. A dispatch from Dacca reported India and Pakistan did not seem to be too far apart on terms for stopping the fighting in East Pakistan.

The War

The United States put off the next Vietnam peace talk session for another week, and the Communists responded by charging the move was aimed at killing the conference. In Cambodia, Communist forces firing massive mortar and rocket barrages cut off an estimated three brigades of Cambodian troops 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh. Thousands of civilian refugees were reported fleeing southward.

Victories For CCPA In NW Suburbs Have Not Come Easy

by KEN KOZAK

The Combined Counties Police Association, formerly called the Cook County Police Association, has been working for 3½ years to gain recognition as the bargaining agency for policemen in several Northwest suburban communities.

In some communities the CCPA has met with varying degrees of success, but the victories haven't come easily. In Des Plaines, patrolmen had to strike before city officials would recognize the local CCPA chapter as their bargaining unit.

After several months of talks, the Palatine Village Board agreed to recognize the CCPA as the sole local bargaining agent for patrolmen-members there.

Wheeling CCHA members still don't have a contract with the village, which they've been trying to get for two years.

In Rolling Meadows, the CCPA has come up against a blank wall. Sixteen of 20 Rolling Meadows patrolmen joined the CCPA in March, but the city council, led by Mayor Roland Meyer, has repeatedly refused to recognize the CCPA as the bargaining agent for its members. To force recognition, CCPA attorneys are preparing a suit against the city. The suit will ask that the city be required to recognize the CCPA's bargaining power, and to deal with it in future salary and personnel negotiations.

THE CCPA was chartered as the Cook County Police Association in June, 1968, to "protect and promote" the interests of member officers in the Cook County area. It was founded by three policemen to serve specifically as a voice for policemen.

The CCPA today is made up of Cook County Sheriff's policeman and members of 25 local municipal police forces, not all of which are recognized as bargaining agents by their local governments. There are 1,200 members under a country-wide executive board. Each local chapters represents only its own members.

The CCPA had membership in Waukegan, but members there went on strike last year and were fired. A court ruling upheld their dismissal.

A founder and first and still president is Sgt. John Flood, a Cook County Sheriff's policeman.

The sheriff's department was the first CCPA target, but CCPA leaders were already in 1968 planning a drive to attract patrolmen in suburban municipalities to the organization.

The problems that the CCPA has had in gaining municipal recognition were foreshadowed by its relationship with the sheriff's department.

TOP-RANKING CCPA leaders, including Flood, who had responsible investigative positions in the sheriff's department, suddenly found themselves counting pencils downtown, or covering a remote suburban beat.

Flood felt these personnel changes were more than coincidental, and protested that then Sheriff Joe Woods had ordered the shifts, and complained of further harassment, including a police "tail" on himself and an investigation of his activities to determine if he'd broken department rules that he was never charged with breaking.

At this time, which was mid-1969, the CCPA was beginning to make inroads into suburban municipal police departments. The first step was into Wheeling where, in April, 1969, 19 patrolmen and sergeants — 90 per cent of the force then — voted to form a CCPA chapter, which was authorized by its members "to negotiate in their behalf in all aspects of their employment."

In more than two years since then, the CCPA has not been recognized officially by the Wheeling village board as the bargaining arm of the city's patrolmen.

The dispute at one point led to a two-week strike by Wheeling police in 1970, but no formal recognition resulted. This year, however, the village sat down in October with the CCPA to discuss recognition, salaries and a contract between the CCPA and the village. But the contract, which would require the village to recognize the CCPA as the only representative of the member policemen, wasn't signed. So the CCPA has no official recognition in Wheeling, but police matters are discussed with the group.

DES PLAINES patrolmen probably have had most success in gaining recognition for their CCPA chapter. A two-day strike in December, 1969, by patrolmen seeking recognition for their CCPA unit, provided some of the impetus for recognition of the organization by the Des Plaines city council in August, 1970.

Patrolman John Meese, Des Plaines CCPA president, said the group has had a good relationship with city officials since recognition was granted. The Des Plaines CCPA chapter has more than 50 members.

Palatine's CCPA group received recognition from the village board in August, 1970, one day after their counterparts in Des Plaines.

This year, according to Mike McDonald, the Palatine CCPA president, the group negotiated their 1971 contract with the village manager, and settled on a good agreement.

The village board, which approves such negotiations, granted every provision of the agreement, except the requested salary.

This year, McDonald said, "we took it, but next year we're going to remember what happened." Negotiations for a new police contract begin in January in Palatine.

Drug Bust For Task Force

A narcotics ring operating in Arlington Heights was cracked Tuesday night by a special suburban police coalition formed this year to fight drug traffic in the north and northwest suburbs.

Arlington Heights police arrested three youths at Dana Point apartments, 1405 Central Rd., at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, after one of the youths allegedly made a narcotics sale to an undercover agent of the Metropolitan Narcotics Dangerous Drugs Enforcement Group (MEG).

Phillip Smith, 21, 1405 Central Rd., Arlington Heights, was charged with illegal sale of dangerous drugs. He allegedly made the sale to an MEG undercover agent in the parking lot of the apartment complex. Barbara Armbrust, 20, of 272 Kirchhoff Rd., Palatine, and Michael Bock, 18, of Roselle, were also arrested and charged with conspiracy to sell dangerous drugs. The arrests climaxed a two-month narcotics investigation by MEG.

According to Arlington Heights police, 800 tablets of mescaline (a hallucinogenic drug) and 240 grams of marijuana, were seized in the raid.

THE ARLINGTON Heights investigation was the first conducted solely by MEG. The group has been involved with numerous arrests made by state drug agents.

MEG was created in June to control drug use in the suburbs and consists of agents from 19 north and northwest suburban police departments. The organization works with a $197,000 federal grant

Two Students Named To Top Music Groups

Two Palatine High School juniors have been named to all-state musical groups.

Bill Schrickel, 1127 E. Sayles Dr., Palatine, was selected to the all-state orchestra, and Norman Lagerquist, 856 Fairway Dr., Palatine, to the all-state band.

Schrickel plays the string bass and Lagerquist the trombone. Both are members of the high school musical groups.

They participated in sectional tryouts Nov. 13 at Glenbrook South High School in Glenview, along with six other Palatine High School students.

The youths will attend an all-state meeting Jan. 20-22 in Peoria, where they and other high school musicians will prepare and give a concert.

The events are sponsored by the Illinois Music Educators Association. This is the first year Palatine High School has entered the competition. Fremd High School did not enter.

under the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968.

The Cook County Sheriff's police also supplies manpower to the organization. Local police department membership includes Palatine, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Mount Prospect.

According to MEG director and Niles Police Chief Clarence Emerickson, the concept of a police organization to combat drug abuse "has been in the works for about three years," but the federal grant was not approved until this summer. Emerickson said MEG's central headquarters is not located in one community but moves to various suburban municipalities.

'Losing Sight Made Me Better Teacher': Musician

by PATRICK JOYCE
Being blind isn't really so bad, Chick Johnston tells you with a grin.
"I'm fortunate that I've been in music all my life," Johnston says. "Losing my sight has made me a better teacher."
Johnston gives guitar, banjo and bass lessons at his home in Northbrook and, three days a week, at The Music Shoppe in Wheeling.

It wasn't always that way. For decades, Chick Johnston traveled the country.

Woman Injured In Auto Crash

A Palatine woman was injured in a two-car accident at Campbell Street and Wilke Road yesterday morning.

Elizabeth T. Klaas of 316 Circle Dr., was admitted to Northwest Community Hospital with fractured ribs.

Rolling Meadows Patrolman Harvey Greenway reported that Mrs. Klaas was headed east on Campbell, when a collision occurred in the intersection with a car driven by Louise Montgomery of 994 Carswell Ct., Elk Grove Village. Mrs. Montgomery was driving south on Wilke.

Mrs. Klaas told Greenway she stopped at the intersection for a flashing red light. She said she saw the other car approaching on Wilke but thought it had to stop. The traffic signal on Wilke was flashing yellow, according to the police, but the Campbell signal was red.

Mrs. Klaas said she pulled into the intersection when the collision occurred.

Mrs. Klaas was charged with failure to yield the right of way. A court appearance is set for Jan. 10 in the Arlington Heights branch of circuit court.

"I've been to 46 states — never made it to Oregon or Washington, or Hawaii either," he says. "I played with different bands, had my own group I played solo, all kinds of guitar, classic, popular and jazz. I played the Hilton hotels, I played in Palm Springs. I was even in the same show with Shirley Temple."

Sitting in a cramped practice room in Wheeling, Chick smiles nostalgically as he recalls his days touring the country.

He relishes the show life and, though blind for six years, he still plays on weekends at a Shakey's restaurant in Gurnee.

picture of a seasoned professional musician.

Chick, a native of Chicago, started playing while in high school. When he finished school, he became a professional and soon was playing around the country, in radio studio bands, in theatres and nightclubs.

Fifteen years ago, after he married for the second time, he settled down and began giving lessons in his Northbrook home and playing occasional engagements.

Then came the news: He had glaucoma. "They didn't catch it in time," Chick says casually. "I had three operations. Each time my eyes were supposed to get better but they got worse."

So, six years ago, Chick became blind. He tells you that blindness came gradually and that it wasn't hard to accept. Ordinarily that would be hard to believe but coming from the cheerful musician, you accept it.

The biggest problem was driving. Chick's wife — she used to say she's never learned — learned to drive. Friends volunteered to take him places.

CHICK DIDN'T even bother to tell prospective music students that he was blind.

"When they come for their first lesson I tell them I've had a little trouble with my eyes," Chick says. "They gradually get the idea, and I made light of it. They all seem to forget about it — even the youngsters."

Now, with his sight gone, Chick thinks he's a better teacher. "I'm more conscientious, I can concentrate better," he says. "As I listen I call the notes off, and tell the kids where to mark them on the sheet."

Dogs Love Merwyn The Mailcarrier

by NANCY COWGER

Merwyn Pye has cast a magic spell on the dogs of Hoffman Estates.

Instead of playing a magic flute, Pye uses dog biscuits to "soothe the savage beasts" and has woven a spell of love and friendship with 145 dogs in the Highlands area.

Pye is a mailman, and he's learned both the truth and the falsehood of an axiom of the trade — dogs hate mailmen. He agrees they do, but he also has found a way to change that hate to such strong affection the dogs whine when he doesn't make his rounds.

Forking over $8 to $10 each week, Pye gives a daily handout of dog biscuits to hounds along his route. At last count there were 145, but the figure changes as people move in and out or as they acquire new pets. Some of the animals are ferocious. But even these are among Pye's friends, as long as he sticks with the ground rules, staying out of their yards and letting them come to him.

EACH DAY as Pye walks his route he gives each dog along the way a treat.

19 Teachers Attend Nutrition Workshop

Nineteen teachers in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 have just completed a workshop designed to help them teach nutrition.

Instruction for the workshop was handled by Milk Foundation staff nutritionists and teachers. Four sessions were conducted in order to complete the material in "The Big Ideas" workshop.

"The Big Ideas" project was developed by the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA) and the Dairy Council of California on an experimental basis three years ago. It is now being fed into the schools throughout the United States. It is hoped the process will update the health education curricula, particularly in the study of nutrition, health and growth.

Chick has memorized "thousands of tunes" and he picks up new ones listening to the radio and records.

Carolers Will Sing At Shopping Center

Carolers will sing out Christmas on the Rolling Meadows shopping center mall this weekend.

The musical program will begin Saturday at 1 p.m. with the Cub Scouts of Rolling Meadows Pack 68.

On Sunday at 2 p.m., members of the Rolling Meadows 4-H club will perform.

The final recital will be presented by the Girl Scouts of Rolling Meadows on Monday, Dec. 20 at 7 p.m.

Crane Lashes New Economy: 'No Vision'

Lashing out at President Nixon's economic recovery plan, U. S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-13th, said in a speech yesterday, "The wage-price controls attack the symptoms, not the cause, of inflation."

Crane spoke yesterday to the members of the Elk Grove Village Association of Industry and Commerce during their annual meeting held at the Holiday Inn, Elk Grove Village.

Crane told the businessmen the "tragedy" of all the current government economic measures "is their failure to recognize the true cause of inflation." The cause, he said, was the government's "deficit financing and expansion of the currency supply."

Crane termed the current "inflation psychology" in which wage earners expect periodic raises just to maintain the current earning power a "sorry problem." But, he added, "the public's attention has been diverted from the source of that problem with the wage-price controls."

Borrowing an analogy from economist Milton Friedman, Crane likened the wage-price controls to "putting a brick on a pressure cooker when Congress is controlling the heat." Doing this, he said, would only result in the need "for more bricks."

Most of his letters from businessmen

have indicated support for wage-price controls, Crane said. But, he warned, "When the teeth begin to apply, the businessman will find he is working with more constraints than labor or the consumer."

INDICATING his support for fewer government controls on the economy, Crane said that "the alternative to a free economy is coercion." He said "history shows the sorry results when government increases that control."

Crane predicted that as government enlarges its economic controls the first victims could well be small businessmen. "With more constraints, the profit margins will get thinner and thinner. I can anticipate the end of small entrepreneurs."

Though Crane feels the situation is worsening, he also said it was not hopeless. "I urge you not to adopt a defeatist attitude."

Instead, he told businessmen to become more active in the governmental progress. "You should monitor legislation as an association. Even the big business associations don't do this as well as the unions." He urged businessmen to take public stands on economic issues, and, he said, "Know when, where and how to fight."

Some get the giant biscuits, others get the tiny ones. But nearly all have come to depend on his visit with timed precision.

There is only one exception to the handout routine — the owners of a dog who asked Pye not to leave treats because they feared it would spoil him as a watchdog. Occasionally other owners request a temporary embargo for dogs on diets.

While feeding the dogs is partially a defense mechanism, to discourage them from biting him, Pye considers the friendship angle more important. Being a mailman can be tedious, dull work, he said. But it isn't for him.

Each time he goes on his rounds, he has 145 friends waiting to see him. They are glad when he comes around, and their welcome makes every day a social occasion.

Tippy is one of his favorites, although they are all special to him. Tippy sees him through the front window, or the fence when he is in the yard, and begins crying when Pye is on the other side of the street. The dog doesn't stop until Pye is there with the dog biscuit and a friendly word.

WHISKERS is different. He and Pye have their own understanding. Whiskers won't let Pye come too close, but will follow Pye anywhere for that dog biscuit. He proved it once when he got loose from his yard and followed Pye and the biscuits home. Police had tried to catch Whiskers and couldn't, so they called on Pye for help.

Another dog, a large German shepherd, has a reputation for ferocity although his owners say he is friendly. They leave the garage door open just a crack, and when Pye comes around the dog barks until he slides the bone under the door.

There are about 30 mail carriers working out of the Hoffman Estates branch post office, but only three of them feed the dogs along their routes. Pye, Walter Zarro and Doug Wilder find it expensive but worth every penny. Pye and Wilder each have been bitten by dogs. Zarro was never bitten by a dog, but once was nipped by a 5-year-old boy.

Zarro carries more than mail and dog biscuits on his route. He carries candy too, and gives it to children along the way. The day Zarro was bitten he had run short on lollipops. The youngster was disappointed, and took a nip from Zarro's ankle while the mail carrier talked with his mother.

No Serious Damage Results

Water Closes Rolling Meadows High

by JOANN VAN WYE

Rolling Meadows High School was closed yesterday after heavy rains caused the sewers to back up and flood lower levels.

The fieldhouse and locker rooms had as much as eight inches of water in some areas early in the morning.

The flooding conditions resulted when the Metropolitan Sanitary District interceptor along Central Road, where the school is located, filled and could not handle the runoff water.

The situation at the high school was first noticed at 2 a.m. yesterday when cleanup crews saw the sewers bubbling up, according to Norman Bucher, head custodian.

"I called in nine men and they worked all night to get things up off the floor," said Bucher.

"Due to the real extra effort of these men to get things up off the floor, there was no great damage to the building and equipment," said Robert Hoese, principal.

Hoese said the water had never gotten high enough to get into the lockers but some repainting might be necessary in the fieldhouse and locker rooms.

"The floor slants a little near the main equipment room and we were fortunate for that," said Thomas O'Driscoll, athletic director. He added the damage appeared to be limited to a few wet football jerseys and cheerleading uniforms.

Hoese was notified of the situation at about 5 a.m. and the decision to close the school was made about 7:30 a.m. by High School Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert.

The decision was made after the school officials had conferred with city officials and learned it would take a minimum of two hours to clear the water out with sump pumps if it did not rain any more.

"Considering there was a 100 per cent chance of rain for the day we didn't have much choice but to close the school," said Hoese.

HOESE SAID THE flooded areas could have been closed off but the students would not have been able to use the washrooms because they would have just caused more flooding in the lower levels.

"No School — Flooded Sewers" read the signs that greeted students when they arrived. Teachers reported to school on schedule and some pitched in to help clear the water. Only about an inch of water remained on the locker room floor at noon.

Hoese said the sump pumps had been working throughout the night but they were just recycling the water because there was no place for it to go.

"The frightening thing is we know it could happen again if there is another heavy rainfall," said Hoese.

The school's architects, city public work officials and maintenance men from the central administration office were at the school yesterday to check the cause of the flooding and investigate possible solutions.

James McFeggan, Rolling Meadows public works director, said the problem was not with the city's lines but with the MSD lines.

"We only have the one line going out of the city carrying all of the city's sewage," said McFeggan.

McFeggan said devices were available so that any time the sewers are filled the backup does not get into buildings.

A SPOKESMAN for the MSD said, "There are no problems with the capability of the system."

"The problem is that the interceptor along Central Road is designed to relieve Weller Creek and the creek is at full capacity. When Weller Creek goes much higher than normal the system becomes overloaded and we can't do anything to relieve it," the spokesman said. He added that it was unusual for the creek to get this high.

"MSD is aware there are problems in the area and they (MSD) have been pushing for big flood control programs for Weller Creek area to prevent this from happening," he said.

The situation appeared to be under control yesterday afternoon and school officials were hopeful the school could open this morning.

Students (And Teachers) Enjoy 'Holiday'

by DOUG RAY

No School... Flooded Sewers.

That small sign, taped to the front door of Rolling Meadows High School, greeted smiling students yesterday morning. All classes were postponed due to a sewage backup which caused flooding to the school's basement areas.

However, one group remained loyal to the flooded ship, and they too were grinning.

Teachers found the absence of their students in contrast to the normal Wednesday activities. There was no competition between the library's stereo music and whispering youths.

"I really enjoy the quiet," said Mrs. Ginny Smith, a girls' physical education teacher. "You wouldn't believe what you can get done," she said. "It's a nice change."

SOME OF THE instructors were busy preparing their students' failure notices which were mailed to parents yesterday.

Mrs. Bev Stek, freshman composition and creative writing instructor, said she would be mailing 10 of them to show parents their child is doing substandard academic work. She spent the rest of the day grading papers and planning future lessons. "At Christmas there isn't much time to get this done," she commented.

Vadis Grants, Russian and German language teacher, idled away some of the day by reading poetry. "Frankly, you can't get much done, unless you can plan ahead for a day off."

Bill Ahlberg, football coach and history teacher, spent some of his time "cleaning the basement," which was under water most of the morning. He helped the coaching staff take inventory of damaged items in the locker rooms.

The day without students gave Mrs. Irene Jacobs time to reflect. "This is very pleasant," she said. "It gives badly needed time to stop and reflect and see what we are doing."

But Mrs. Debbie Zimmerman, also of the history department, couldn't get away from some of her loyal following. Rick Myers and Scott Kramer, both sophomores, laughed that they "just couldn't stay away from school." They admitted it was partly because of their fondness for their young, brunette instructor.

THERE WERE other students in the high school by late afternoon. Mustang wrestlers and basketball players went through their regularly scheduled workouts.

Two dozen tangled grapplers engaged in their practice, responding to the booming commands of the coaches.

The coaching staff didn't have much spare time. They remained active cleaning the debris from the locker rooms. "That's how we spent our day," said Tom O'Driscoll, athletic director, looking into soiled hands.

"Tomorrow will be business as usual," he said.

Study Coercion Charge: CCPA Wives

In a stormy exchange with Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer at Tuesday's City Council meeting, the wives of six city policemen demanded that an impartial investigation be opened into charges that Police Chief Lewis Case coerced four patrolmen to resign from the Combined Counties Police Association (CCPA) last week.

The women asked that an independent three-member committee be appointed to study the charges and report their findings. They want one member to be appointed by the City Council, one by patrolmen and a third to be appointed by the other two.

Meyer said he would appoint a panel to study the charges if and when the four patrolmen bring him written statements of their grievances against Case. Meyer said he would appoint a study group according to his own guidelines.

Mrs. Bruce Murphy was first to call for an independent, public investigation. She told the council she doesn't think an investigation by the mayor, "can be honest because he appointed Chief Case."

The six women were Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Brian O'Malley, Mrs. Marv Hamann, Mrs. Harvey Greenway, Mrs. Dennis Van Jacobs and Mrs. Jim Cosgrove. Their husbands are all Rolling Meadows patrolmen and members of the CCPA. The men were not at the council meeting.

Sgt. John Flood, a Cook County policeman and president of the entire CCPA organization, was also at the meeting and charged that statements made by Meyer and Case that the resignations were voluntary "are lies."

But the debate was primarily between Meyer and the women. The women said they believe the patrolmen were intimidated, and criticized the council for not starting an investigation.

MEYER SAID the women were basing their charges on second-hand information and did not have all the facts.

Mrs. Van Jacobs said the wives are concerned because "the futures of our families are at stake."

She added, "I don't think the people of Rolling Meadows want a police force that is appointed politically on the basis that this man will shut up and this man will do what he's told."

She told the aldermen, "In order to check the power of the mayor and the chief we have to have the aldermen take a stand and ask for an investigation. Maybe this is a dictatorship where Roland Meyer is king and you are puppets."

Mrs. Van Jacobs criticized the lack of a responsive grievance procedure within the department and said the CCPA "would give the men a voice and allow them to get up here with dignity and talk."

Mrs. O'Malley said "the policemen have tried to deal with the city before and come up against a blank wall."

Meyer responded saying, "Since the inception of the police department in 1955 this department has had rules and regulations and a grievance procedure to guard rights."

"The patrolmen have bargaining power within the department. But if they won't sit down and bargain by themselves, we won't recognize anyone's right to bargain for them."

Meyer told Mrs. O'Malley that if the men "will make charges in this council in writing and sign them, the council will conduct an investigation. I will appoint an outside committee — outside of the police department — to investigate."

MRS. MURPHY said, "We would like to see a three-man committee set up to investigate the charges brought against the chief by the patrolmen. We request that the mayor and city council appoint one citizen, the patrolmen appoint one citizen and these two citizens choose a third citizen to act as chairman. We would like these three men to conduct an investigation of the chief and have them report all their findings to the public."

During a lull in the exchange, Flood rose to address the council and said, "Mr. mayor, I agree with you on one thing. You've said that you shouldn't believe everything in the newspapers. You're right, because the statements (denying the charges of coercion) that you and the chief made are lies."

Meyer banged the gavel, ruled Flood out of order and ordered him to sit down or leave. Flood tried to keep talking and the mayor called for a recess.

After the recess, Mrs. Greenway tried to speak, and Ald. William Ahrens objected, saying the discussion was closed. Ald. Fred Jacobson said the council should consider continuing the discussion.

The council voted 7-3 to end the discussion, with Jacobson, James Huddleston and Steve Eberhard voting to continue the discussion.

Mrs. Greenway said, "The mayor has refused to answer any direct questions. He's talking in circles. We want direct answers, not the circus we've been subjected to."

RM High School Is Near Completion

Construction at Rolling Meadows High School is expected to be virtually completed by the new year.

At a meeting of the Dist. 214 school board Monday, H. P. Miller of the architectural firm of Orput and Orput, reported electric, plumbing and heating work should be completed by Jan. 1. "There will still be some checklist items left because we are waiting for parts." In addition, four areas of the building will not be completed. They are the art room, the boiler room, one, and possibly a second, band room.

The Rolling Meadows school will be dedicated soon after its completion next year. It was slated to be completed by Dec. 1.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference said it will not accept the resignation of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of SCLC's Operation Breadbasket. Jackson offered his resignation earlier this week after he had been suspended while SCLC officials investigated allegations he allegedly set up without their knowledge, including "Black Expo."

Congress began eliminating the final barriers to adjournment of the first session of the 92nd Congress. Only mass absenteeism and the fading threat of a filibuster against foreign aid appeared to stand in the way.

A Miami-based ship line said one of its cargo vessels was being attacked by a Cuban gunboat. A spokesman for the Coast Guard said it was powerless to take any action other than sending medical aid because the ship was in international waters and was of Panamanian registry.

Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton was freed of charges in the 1967 killing of an Oakland policeman when the district attorney decided a fourth trial would be fruitless. The dismissal ended a four-year effort involving three trials to convict Newton for the slaying of Police-man John Frey in a pre-dawn street battle.

The State

Federal Appeals Court Judge Otto Kerner, former Illinois governor, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of bribery, mail fraud, tax evasion, perjury and conspiracy in a race track stock scandal. Kerner asked for, and was immediately relieved of participation in any activity of the court pending final disposition of the charges against him.

A Republican ward committeeman and two driver testing examiners were indicted on charges of bribery and official misconduct for allegedly allowing unqualified applicants to pass driving tests. The employees included Eddie Mack Jones, a 17th Ward committeeman.

The World

Pakistan walked out of the Security Council after denouncing the United Nations as a "fraud and farce" that delayed action in the India-Pakistan war until India could capture Dacca. The Council was considering a heavily pro-Indian resolution offered by Poland to stop the war.

Pakistani commanders in East Pakistan asked India for a cease-fire as Indian troops and tanks drove to nearly a mile from the besieged eastern capital of Dacca. A dispatch from Dacca reported India and Pakistan did not seem to be too far apart on terms for stopping the fighting in East Pakistan.

The War

The United States put off the next Vietnam peace talk session for another week, and the Communists responded by charging the move was aimed at killing the conference. In Cambodia, Communist forces firing massive mortar and rocket barrages cut off an estimated three brigades of Cambodian troops 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh. Thousands of civilian refugees were reported fleeing southward.

Teachers Plan To Press Demand For More Money

Teachers in Mount Prospect School Dist. 57 will continue to ask for more money than the school board is offering, according to Mike Jetel, new teacher negotiator.

Jetel said when teacher and board bargaining teams meet Saturday they will determine what they agree upon and "then get down to the basic issues, including salary." The board has offered teachers an increase of about 5.25 per cent over last year. Jetel would not specify what percentage the Mount Prospect Education Association (MPEA) will demand, however.

"We want a reasonable salary schedule," he said. "The rest of the districts have settled for raises of 7.5 per cent and the board is offering us 5.25 per cent. Does that seem reasonable?"

Neither side agrees as to what is a reasonable 1971-72 raise under Phase II of President Nixon's economic plan. According to Larry Halter, Illinois Education Association (IEA) official, teachers in Dist. 57 should receive retroactive pay hikes. He also says the raises should be more than 5.25 per cent. Richard Zwieback, professional negotiator hired by the board, interprets Phase II rulings differently.

"My feeling right now is that Dist. 57 should get retroactive pay hikes to their first teaching day in September," Halter said yesterday. Although the IEA has received no official rulings on Phase II and teachers, Halter said he based his judgment on a recent measure passed by the U.S. House of Representatives.

The measure provides that pay raises would be retroactive if an employer raised taxes, prices or made budgetary appropriations for any increase before the freeze. In the Dist. 57 budget, approved in September, officials budgeted enough money to pay for at least partial teacher increases.

The measure has been included in a bill approved by the Senate earlier this week and was expected to be given final approval by the House and sent to the President today.

"WE'RE VERY hopeful that retroactivity will be included in the final bill," Halter said. "High pressure by National Education Association (NEA) and IEA lobbyists is finally paying off."

Halter also thinks teachers would be able to receive more than the 5.5 per cent ceiling increase that has been set by the Federal Pay Board. He said the yearly pay hike for experience, negotiated in last year's contract, would not be counted as part of the 5.5 per cent since it has already been agreed upon. That increment accounts for about 2.7 per cent of the board's 5.25 per cent offer.

But according to Zwieback, the increment is part of last year's contract and has to be re-negotiated. "Therefore it would be counted under the 5.5 ceiling," he said. "We're counting as an increase every dollar teachers did not receive last year."

"Besides, we don't feel that any decision that could come out of Washington would change the position of the board. All an act says, if passed, is that certain things would be permissible and not mandatory," he said.

ZWIEBACK SAID he doubts that any retroactive ruling would apply to Dist. 57 teachers because they did not settle a contract before the freeze. "As long as we delay a settlement like this, teachers may not even get retroactive pay to Nov. 15," he said. "We hope we'll settle Saturday."

Jetel said he "has no idea" if the two sides will settle soon. "The people in Mount Prospect are tired of this; it's been hanging around like a spectre," he said. "But all we're asking for is what's reasonable."

Leo Florus, chairman of the board's bargaining team, said yesterday the board would not make any new offers. "Not now, or at any other meeting in the future," he said yesterday. "There may be different allocations but not any more money forthcoming."

Minor Flooding In Area

Heavy rains in the Northwest suburbs brought minor flooding to the Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights areas.

Some of the heaviest flooding occurred in Country Gardens in north Prospect Heights, Fairview Gardens in east Mount Prospect, Brickman in northeast Mount Prospect and Country Club Terrace in south Mount Prospect.

Dave Creamer, Mount Prospect public works director, said calls started coming in at midnight Wednesday, complaining that a combination of storm and sanitary sewer water was backing up and flooding basements. He said one person said he had two feet of water in his basement.

Creamer said although there was "quite a bit of flooding," the retention basins at Golf and Busse roads, West Park basin, and the basin at Bonita and Busse roads were "working beautifully."

Mrs. Ben Tollstam, 35 W. Stonegate, Prospect Heights, said about a foot of water was standing in the intersection of West Wildwood and West Stonegate in Country Gardens.

Another resident in the area, Jack Gilligan, 36 Lynbrook, said although there was some flooding, there was little property damage.

Gilligan said water had seeped into some basements and family rooms but many homes remained dry.

Creamer said Weller Creek was below flood level but if the rain continues, there may be problems.

Workmen put finishing touches on the frame of the $2.4 million United Air Lines reservation center.

United Had Priority From County, Lee Charges

'Airline Got A Special Permit Deal'

A member of the Elk Grove Township Board of Auditors believes United Air Lines received preferential treatment when it applied for Cook County Building and sewer permits for the new reservation center going up across the street from the company's corporate headquarters.

Auditor Bernard Lee made the charge because the company was given a county building permit on the condition it would get proper clearance for its sewer, a procedure he says is not allowed for smaller developers.

However, a United official said yesterday the building permit was granted conditionally while the airline studied the problem of obtaining a sewer permit without overburdening the sewer maintenance operation of Elk Grove Townships.

Robert Sampson, regional vice president for United, said that after the building permit was granted airline officials discovered they could receive a sewer permit because they hold the status of public utility in connection with their airline operations.

THE PROBLEMS began, according to Lee, when United approached the township last summer and asked that it sign a sewer permit application for the new building.

Under procedures implemented in the last two years, the Metropolitan Sanitary District requires that an application for a sewer permit be signed by another governing body, such as a township or village, or that the permit holder be licensed as a public utility or sanitary authority with the state.

Lee said United was informed that the township requires a deposit and dedication of the sewer line to the township before it will sign a sewer permit application.

After that, Lee said, the airline "had conversations with MSD and they talked the county building authority into issuing a building permit while United was applying for a public utility license."

Lee said that procedure violated administrative agreements between the sanitary district and the township that require that a sewer permit be granted before a building permit would be issued.

"Because of their size or special ties, United received special treatment that is not available to anyone else," Lee said.

LEE SAID THE objection United had to the township's procedure apparently was that "they didn't want anyone else to touch their sewers." He said that if the sewer had been dedicated to the township the township would have maintained it and charged United a monthly fee.

"The cost would have been peanuts," Lee said. "It would have cost them maybe $100 a month. That was certainly not an issue in the whole matter."

The corporate offices of United were granted sewer permits in 1961 under an old policy of the MSD, he said. That policy was changed to require a governmental body to cosign applications because of problems with developers who deserted privately installed sewer systems after property was sold, he said.

Sampson, however, said United's concern with dealing with the township was the fact the township would have maintained the system. "United's system is so large it would have required Elk Grove Township to assume the burden of maintaining the whole system. We were worried about the quality of service," he said.

Lee said he did not believe United would fail to maintain its system, but said he still objected to the fact building permits were issued before the problem with sewer permits was resolved.

"It's not a violation of the law," Lee said, "but it's a dual standard. No individual could have gotten the permit the way United did. It is the only exception I am aware of in the last 1 1/2 years — everybody else has followed the rules."

United's Building Progressing

Construction of the United Air Lines $2.4 million reservation center on Algonquin Road is proceeding on schedule, as the airline marks its 10th anniversary this week at its Elk Grove Township site.

The building addition is located on a 13-acre site across Algonquin Road from the corporation headquarters building and the stewardess school, east of Busse Road.

A spokesman said this week that construction is coming along well with the frame of the building near completion. He said the building should be finished in August and will go into service by November.

The center, designed by Graham, Anderson, Probst and White, will house the reservation system serving all or part of 10 Midwestern states. The system is designed to handle 648,000 messages per hour at 515 sales agent locations which utilize cathode-ray television sets.

The first floor will consist of administration offices, a ticket service center, conference and training rooms, locker rooms and an employee lounge area.

More than 500 sales desks grouped in clusters and 15 management areas will be found on the second level. States handled by the reservation center will include Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Kentucky, Missouri and North and South Dakota.

Altogether United owns 102.3 acres in the complex with a total property value of $55.5 million. Some 55 acres are devoted to buildings and landscape while 47.3 acres remain undeveloped.

Within the last two months United initiated the three-division concept in running the airline, which divides the United States into three geographic areas with each having its own headquarters. The Chicago headquarters for the Central Division also is located at the Elk Grove Township site.

Find Propellant For 'The Ultimate Trip'

A bag, containing an unknown substance, was discovered by an usher near the candy counter at the Randhurst Cinema in Mount Prospect.

The Mount Prospect police later identified the substance as marijuana. The marijuana was discovered Monday, while the film, "2001: A Space Odyssey" was playing. Stanley Kubrick's movie is advertised as "the ultimate trip."

Congress began eliminating the final barriers to adjournment of the first session of the 92nd Congress. Only mass absenteeism and the fading threat of a filibuster against foreign aid appeared to stand in the way.

A Miami-based ship line said one of its cargo vessels was being attacked by a Cuban gunboat. A spokesman for the Coast Guard said it was powerless to take any action other than sending medical aid because the ship was in international waters and was of Panamanian registry.

Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton was freed of charges in the 1967 killing of an Oakland policeman when the district attorney decided a fourth trial would be fruitless. The dismissal ended a four-year effort involving three trials to convict Newton for the slaying of Police Officer John Frey in a pre-dawn street battle.

The State

Federal Appeals Court Judge Otto Kerner, former Illinois governor, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of bribery, mail fraud, tax evasion, perjury and conspiracy in a race track stock scandal. Kerner asked for, and was immediately relieved of participation in any activity of the court pending final disposition of the charges against him.

A Republican ward committeeman and two driver testing examiners were indicted on charges of bribery and official misconduct for allegedly allowing unqualified applicants to pass driving tests. The employees included Eddie Mack Jones, a 17th Ward committeeman.

The World

Pakistan walked out of the Security Council after denouncing the United Nations as a "fraud and farce" that delayed action in the India-Pakistan war until India could capture Dacca. The Council was considering a heavily pro-Indian resolution offered by Poland to stop the war.

Pakistani commanders in East Pakistan asked India for a cease-fire as Indian troops and tanks drove to nearly a mile from the besieged eastern capital of Dacca. A dispatch from Dacca reported India and Pakistan did not seem to be too far apart on terms for stopping the fighting in East Pakistan.

The War

The United States put off the next Vietnam peace talk session for another week, and the Communists responded by charging the move was aimed at killing the conference. In Cambodia, Communist forces firing massive mortar and rocket barrages cut off an estimated three brigades of Cambodian troops 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh. Thousands of civilian refugees were reported fleeing southward.

Claim Old Orchard Accord

The Mount Prospect Village Board and developers of the Old Orchard property have reached apparent agreement on proposed modifications in the consent decree.

"In the end, the consensus of the board was that the concept was acceptable," Mayor Robert D. Teichert said after Tuesday's meeting between the two groups. It was the second such meeting in recent weeks.

Representatives of owner Albert Newman and Hollywood Builders of Chicago, outlined changes that involve taking units from high-rise buildings and distributing them among townhouses. The over-all density of the development has not been changed.

Teichert said the matter will be discussed in executive session prior to Tuesday's village board meeting. He also said Hollywood Builders has asked to be on the agenda that evening.

A MODEL OF THE proposed development of the nine-hole golf course to the west of Schoenbeck Road will be presented that night. This had been a point of controversy at the first meeting. Some trustees felt open space had been neglected in favor of parking.

In the second plan presented Tuesday, parking had been reduced from two spaces per unit to 1.7 spaces. This is still more than the 1.65 required by the consent decree.

The Old Orchard Country Club consists of a 205-acre site, east of Rand Road at the north end of the village. The development area is approximately 70.5 acres divided into live separate parcels.

Plans for the development and its 2,100 dwelling units were set in court under a consent decree. This document required the village to allow construction of the development but also preserved much of the open space. The decree ended seven years of controversy and legal battles concerning the annexation and development of the site.

TRUSTEE GEORGE B. Anderson brought up a number of points at the meeting and Anderson said the developers responded favorably to most of his suggestions.

The trustee questioned the narrow width of some of the proposed inner streets. He also wanted to make sure the common area between townhouses would remain open for use as walkways by all residents. This would mean no fences would go up. He said the developers agreed to both.

Anderson called the 1.7 parking spaces per unit "reasonable" and pointed out that this part of the development would not be built for five to seven years. "The plans may have to be changed," he said, after their experiences in selling the other, earlier townhouses.

When asked if they might not need room for ball parks and the like, the developers replied that in their experience such were not needed in these types of developments.

Anderson said they also agreed to a widening of Camp McDonald Road from one of the development's streets to Route 83, a distance of 200 to 400 feet.

Probe Bomb Threat In Adoption Fight

by MARGE FERROLI

Arlington Heights police are investigating a bomb threat made late Tuesday to Mrs. Paula Marshall, an Arlington Heights mother who earlier Tuesday was granted custody of her daughter, Amy, after a two-year court battle.

Police spokesmen said Mrs. Marshall reported the caller was a male and sounded as though in his 40s. He reportedly used abusive language and threatened her house would be bombed after saying he had adopted children of his own.

Police advised the telephone company of the call and are taking "the usual precautions."

Mrs. Marshall, who lives at 2234 Goebert Rd. with her 7 year old daughter, was awarded custody of the 2½ year old child when Cook County Circuit Court Judge Helen McGillicuddy upheld an Illinois Appellate Court ruling ordering a Colorado Springs, Colo. couple to return Amy to her natural mother.

Mrs. Marshall said yesterday she received only one threatening phone call, "but it was enough to scare me."

"You hear about things like this all the time, but when someone threatens your own life, it's another story," she said. "There are just some sick people in this world."

The court ordered that Mrs. Marshall receive immediate custody of the child, but Mrs. Sylvia Decker, one of her attorneys, said she has not yet been advised when Amy will be returned to her natural mother. But she said she expects notification shortly.

AMY IS NOW IN the custody of her adoptive parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Huebert. The Hueberts adopted the baby in June, 1969.

However, the court ruled Mrs. Marshall, in giving up her child had been defrauded and had been under strain and duress.

"She never consented to give the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker said. "She was told at the time by the lawyer for the adoptive parents there would be a six-month waiting period during which she could reclaim custody of the child."

This waiting period, however, was nonexistent, Mrs. Decker said, which led her to unknowingly hand the child over to the Hueberts.

Mrs. Marshall's husband, Timothy, from whom she was then and is currently separated, was responsible for handing the child to the Cook County Dept. of Public Aid, which handled the adoptive proceedings, Mrs. Decker said.

She explained Marshall gave the child to a Julie Brown, who in turn presented Amy to the public aid department.

Signal Gone Wild Hampers Motorists

It was every motorist for himself yesterday afternoon at the intersection of Main Street and Northwest Highway in Mount Prospect when the north-south traffic light was stuck on red.

The lights malfunctioned for about 15 minutes and until police arrived, Main Street motorists tried to cross Northwest Highway with the cross traffic.

Two policemen arrived at the scene and began directing traffic at that intersection and at Prospect Avenue and Main Street. The second man was necessary because the train warning lights were also going constantly, although the gates were not down.

Apparently the arrival of the 1:10 from Chicago corrected the situation by triggering the correct sequence for the traffic lights.

Christmas Carols At Prospect High Sunday

Christmas carols will be sung Sunday at the Prospect High School Christmas concert in Mount Prospect.

The Prospect Swing Choir, Girls' Chorus and the Freshmen Girls' Chorus will perform at 3 p.m. The groups will be accompanied by the Prospect concert and symphonic bands.

The concert will be performed in the Field House, 801 W. Kensington Rd. Admission is free. According to Sterling Mische, head of the music department, the concert is in "the true meaning of Christmas."

Carroll Says He'll Seek Relection

State Sen. John Carroll, R-4th, said yesterday he will seek reelection in the new 4th legislative district, which now includes parts of Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights and Des Plaines.

Sen. Carroll, 66, a Park Ridge newspaper publisher and 15-year General Assembly veteran, said he is "going back home" by running in a district which includes more Northwest suburbs than he has formerly served as a senator.

Before his election in 1966 as senator for the former 4th district, which included Maine and Niles townships, Carroll served from 1966 to 1966 as a state representative from the former sixth district, which included all the Northwest suburbs.

He feels he is well known within the recently remapped 4th district. "I have represented these Northwest suburban residents. I pioneered some of the important legislation for the district. I feel like I'm going back home."

NO OTHER Republican has filed in the 4th district, which includes northern Skokie, part of Niles, most of Park Ridge, Des Plaines north and east of the Des Plaines River, Wheeling Township, parts of Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights south of Palatine Road, and Arlington Heights east of Dunton Avenue and north of Northwest Highway.

Thomas Flynn, 35, of Niles has been endorsed by the Maine Township Democratic Organization for state senator in the district. A past president of the township Young Democrats club, Flynn is a planner and project coordinator for the Cook County Department of Planning and Development, and assistant commissioner of consumer fraud for the Village of Niles.

Carroll, who considers himself a conservative Republican, is a member of the influential senate executive committee, and is also a member of the welfare and transportation committees.

During the current legislative session, Carroll has voted for aid to non-public schools and against legalization of abortion.

He joined with State Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, in a legal fight in 1970 to allow townships to collect fees for collecting taxes.

Publisher of a weekly newspaper chain in Maine Township, Carroll began his political career as a Park Ridge alderman.

He has served as president of the Maine Township Republican club and as a member of the township Regular Republican organization.

He is a member and past president of the Illinois Press Association, and a member of the Park Ridge Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis, Elks and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A native of Ontario, Canada, Carroll, and his wife Carole, have two children.

Drug Bust For Task Force

A narcotics ring operating in Arlington Heights was cracked Tuesday night by a special suburban police coalition formed this year to fight drug traffic in the north and northwest suburbs.

Arlington Heights police arrested three youths at Dana Point apartments, 1405 Central Rd., at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, after one of the youths allegedly made a narcotics sale to an undercover agent of the Metropolitan Narcotics Dangerous Drugs Enforcement Group (MEG).

Phillip Smith, 21, 1405 Central Rd., Arlington Heights, was charged with illegal sale of dangerous drugs. He allegedly made the sale to an MEG undercover agent in the parking lot of the apartment complex. Barbara Armbrust, 20, of 272 Kirchoff Rd., Palatine, and Michael Bock, 18, of Roselle, were also arrested and charged with conspiracy to sell dangerous drugs. The arrests climaxed a two-month narcotics investigation by MEG.

According to Arlington Heights police, 800 tablets of mescaline (a hallucinogenic drug) and 240 grams of marijuana, were seized in the raid.

THE ARLINGTON Heights investigation was the first conducted solely by MEG. The group has been involved with numerous arrests made by state drug agents.

MEG was created in June to control drug use in the suburbs and consists of agents from 19 north and Northwest suburban police departments. The organization works with a $197,000 federal grant under the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968.

The Cook County Sheriff's police also supplies manpower to the organization. Local police department membership includes Palatine, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Mount Prospect.

According to MEG director and Niles Police Chief Clarence Emerickson, the concept of a police organization to combat drug abuse "has been in the works for about three years," but the federal grant was not approved until this summer. Emerickson said MEG's central headquarters is not located in one community but moves to various suburban municipalities.

Offer Men's Basketball

The Prospect Heights Park District will offer men's open basketball as one of its activities starting at 1 p.m. Saturday at Ann Sullivan School, 700 N. Schoenbeck Rd.

The fee for the two-hour basketball session is $10.

Practice times for boys basketball and gymnastics has been changed to 9-11 a.m. for fifth and sixth graders and 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. for seventh and eighth grade boys. Both groups meet at Ann Sullivan School.

$15,700 For Library Items

Federal funds will provide $15,700 worth of library materials for public and parochial schools within the boundaries of School Dist. 21.

The school Dist. 21 board Thursday approved applications for the books, slides, filmstrips and records for its 15 schools, for the district resource center and St. Joseph the Worker School in Wheeling.

"Funds which would have been used for materials for St. Alphonsus School in Prospect Heights have been diverted into the district's resource center at the request of that school," Dist. 21 Asst.

Supt. John Barger explained. Barger said the district is assured of receiving the funds which come from Title II of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. He said the total reimbursement might not reach the $15,000 figure, but the district had applied for a slightly higher amount than it expects to spend, to be sure of a 100 per cent reimbursement.

Barger said the funds are allocated on the basis of $1.67 per pupil to each of the public and parochial schools in the district.

Crane Lashes New Economy

Lashing out at President Nixon's economic recovery plan, U. S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-13th, said in a speech yesterday, "The wage-price controls attack the symptoms, not the cause, of inflation."

Crane spoke yesterday to the members of the Elk Grove Village Association of Industry and Commerce during their annual meeting held at the Holiday Inn, Elk Grove Village.

Crane told the businessmen the "tragedy" of all the current government economic measures "is their failure to recognize the true cause of inflation." The cause, he said, was the government's "deficit financing and expansion of the currency supply."

Crane termed the current "inflation psychology" in which wage earners expect periodic raises just to maintain the current earning power a "sorry problem." But, he added, "the public's attention has been diverted from the source of that problem with the wage-price controls."

Borrowing an analogy from economist Milton Friedman, Crane likened the wage-price controls to "putting a brick on a pressure cooker when Congress is controlling the heat." Doing this, he said, would only result in the need "for more bricks."

Most of his letters from businessmen have indicated support for wage-price controls, Crane said. But he warned, "When the teeth begin to apply, the businessman will find he is working with more constraints than labor or the consumer."

INDICATING his support for fewer government controls on the economy, Crane said that "the alternative to a free economy is coercion." He said "history shows the sorry results when government increases that control."

Crane predicted that as government enlarges its economic controls the first victims could well be small businessmen. "With more constraints, the profit margins will get thinner and thinner. I can anticipate the end of small entrepreneurs."

Though Crane feels the situation is worsening, he also said it was not hopeless. "I urge you not to adopt a defeatist attitude."

Instead, he told businessmen to become more active in the governmental progress. "You should monitor legislation as an association. Even the big business associations don't do this as well as the unions." He urged businessmen to take public stands on economic issues, and, he said, "Know when, where and how to fight."

Burglars Strike At 3 Homes Here

Three Mount Prospect homes were broken into last week by thieves, according to Mount Prospect Police.

On Thursday night, a color television set and seven charge cards were taken from the home of Paul Wisniewski of 1809 Aralia Dr.

While the Philip Semar family was at Prospect High School watching a wrestling match Friday night, thieves entered their home at 720 Hiawatha Ct. Police said the back door had been left unlocked.

Among the missing items, police listed a gold wedding ring, a gold engagement ring, two cocktail rings, a gold bracelet and four watches. They said "a couple of hundred dollars" left in drawers were left untouched. There were mud prints left throughout the house.

The third burglary took place Friday evening at 500 S. We-Go Trail, the home of Philip J. Robinson. Cash and jewelry were taken, police said, and a Civil War antique muzzle-loading rifle. Police said the thieves apparently "knew" jewelry because they took "higher quality" pieces but left cheaper and costume jewelry.

Wheeling Bank Is Low Bidder On Park Bonds

The Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank was the low bidder Tuesday for $100,000 in Prospect Heights Park District general obligation bonds.

The Wheeling bank offered a 5.24 per cent interest rate which was $137.50 less than the next lowest bidder, John Haas, attorney, said.

Others submitting bids were the First National Bank of Mount Prospect, Northern Trust Co. of Chicago and Mount Prospect State Bank.

Ron Greenberg, park director, said the money will be used for buying and developing land. He said the district is considering buying three sites adjacent to Lions Park on Camp McDonald Road encompassing more than two acres for expanding the park.

Some of the money also may go for equipment for Lions Park, he said.

Surrey Ridge Hit By Flooding, Power Failure

by KURT BAER

It happens every spring. Except this time it happened yesterday. Surrey Ridge subdivision in southwest Arlington Heights was flooded.

"Everything that we constructed was working. The rain just exceeded the capacity of the system," said Village Engineer Allen Sander, referring to a detention basin built last year on the Army's Nike site and a smaller secondary basin off of Harvard Avenue.

The flooding resulted in the loss of electrical power in a number of homes along Harvard Avenue.

A spokesman for Commonwealth Edison Co. said temporary power lines were put up to nine homes where flood waters had completely shorted out ground level transformers.

Sander said that until the huge retention basin planned for Busse Woods in Elk Grove Township is completed, Salt Creek will continue to flood after very heavy rains like yesterday's.

"There is no Salt Creek right now," he said yesterday afternoon. "It's just one big lake."

Sander said that although the retention basin on Lot 118 in the subdivision has auxiliary pumps, they only work to pump out water left in the very bottom of the basin, which is below the level of the sewer system.

"THEY SHUT OFF as soon as the water rises above that level," Sander said.

For residents the heavy rain meant missed workdays and a chilly house.

"I felt like Noah when I woke up this morning," said Ken Bryza who lives at 1410 Harvard Ave.

Bryza, like several of his neighbors was unable to get to work yesterday morning and could only sit and wait for the water to recede.

"The same thing happened to us a year-and-a-half ago. But we hoped that the new retention basin had solved the problem."

Sander said unofficial reports indicate that more rain fell yesterday than in June of last year when Surrey Ridge was heavily flooded.

Donald Nowicki of 1406 S. Harvard, said the power failure meant that his sump pump was not working and as a result water was accumulating in his basement.

Nowicki said he has been flooded three times since moving into Surrey Ridge.

THE END OF THE ROAD for Donald Nowicki's automobile yesterday was a small lake where Harvard Avenue used to be. Nowicki, who lives at 1406 S. Harvard Ave. in the Surrey Ridge subdivision, said he left his house to pick up his daughter, Nancy, who was ill at school. He said yesterday marked the third time he has had to wade through floodwaters in the southwestern subdivision.

Investigate Bomb Threat To Mother In Adoption Case

by MARGE FERROLI

Arlington Heights police are investigating a bomb threat made late Tuesday to Mrs. Paula Marshall, an Arlington Heights mother who earlier Tuesday was granted custody of her daughter, Amy, after a two-year court battle.

Police spokesmen said Mrs. Marshall reported the caller was a male and sounded as though in his 40s. He reportedly used abusive language and threat-

Police advised the telephone company of the call and are taking "the usual precautions."

Mrs. Marshall, who lives at 2234 Goebert Rd. with her 7 year old daughter, was awarded custody of the 2½ year old child when Cook County Circuit Court Judge Helen McGillicuddy upheld an Illinois Appellate Court ruling ordering a Colorado Springs, Colo. couple to return Amy to her natural mother.

Mrs. Marshall said yesterday she received only one threatening phone call, "but it was enough to scare me."

"You hear about things like this all the time, but when someone threatens your own life, it's another story," she said. "There are just some sick people in this world."

The court ordered that Mrs. Marshall receive immediate custody of the child, but Mrs. Sylvia Decker, one of her attorneys, said she has not yet been advised when Amy will be returned to her natural mother. But she said she expects notification shortly.

AMY IS NOW IN the custody of her adoptive parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Huebert. The Hueberts adopted the baby in June, 1969.

However, the court ruled Mrs. Marshall, in giving up her child had been defrauded and had been under strain and duress.

"She never consented to give the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker said. "She was told at the time by the lawyer for the adoptive parents there would be a six-month waiting period during which she could reclaim custody of the child."

This waiting period, however, was nonexistent, Mrs. Decker said, which led her to unknowingly hand the child over to the Hueberts.

Mrs. Marshall's husband, Timothy, from whom she was then and is currently separated, was responsible for handing the child to the Cook County Dept. of Public Aid, which handled the adoptive proceedings, Mrs. Decker said.

She explained Marshall gave the child to a Julie Brown, who in turn presented Amy to the public aid department.

"She (Miss Brown) had a financial interest in putting the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker claimed, explaining the adoption would have eliminated child support payments for Amy by Marshall.

Miss Brown was a mutual friend of the Marshalls, Mrs. Decker said. Mrs. Marshall was unaware of her husband's relationship with her at the time of the adoption and "completely trusted her," she said.

MRS. DECKER placed the blame for the confusion over the adoption in three places:

—on the Hueberts' attorney who had claimed there would be a six-month waiting period;

—on the Public Aid department for not fully explaining the adoption proceedings to Mrs. Marshall; —and on Miss Brown for "misleading" Mrs. Marshall and giving her advice to turn the child over to the public aid department.

Mrs. Decker said Mrs. Marshall was under strain shortly after Amy's birth because she had just separated from her husband. She also did not have a job and worried about supporting her two children.

"A child cannot be taken away from its natural mother unless the mother consents to it or is proven unfit," Mrs. Decker said. "The court has no right to investigate the qualifications of a natural mother, except in an extreme case of child abuse."

She said Mrs. Marshall went to the public aid department for advice on how best to handle her situation shortly after Amy's birth.

"They told her in 15 minutes all her rights, which is a complete farce," Mrs. Decker said. "The public aid department must fully explain adoption procedures and assistance or they might as well just kidnap a child."

THE PUBLIC AID department, although dealing primarily with welfare payments, does act as an adoption service, but is not a state recognized adoption agency, Mrs. Decker said. The regular investigation proceedings of the adoptive and natural parents made by a recognized adoption agency are not conducted by the county office.

Tree Trimming Party

Neighborhood recreation centers in Arlington Heights are sponsoring a tree trimming party from 3:30 to 5 p.m. today.

Anyone who has an unusual or favorite decoration they would like to contribute to the tree is welcome to bring them. After Christmas the decorations can be returned.

Parks participating include Frontier, Camelot, Hasbrook, Recreation and Pioneer. Each park will have individual recreation programs to go with the trimming. Some are having decoration sessions and others are popping corn to string and to eat.

Drug Task Force Makes First Arrest

A narcotics ring operating in Arlington Heights was cracked Tuesday night by a special suburban police coalition formed this year to fight drug traffic in the north and northwest suburbs.

Arlington Heights police arrested three youths at Dana Point apartments, 1405 Central Rd., at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, after one of the youths allegedly made a narcotics sale to an undercover agent of the Metropolitan Narcotics Dangerous Drugs Enforcement Group (MEG).

Philip Smith, 21, 1405 Central Rd., Arlington Heights, was charged with illegal sale of dangerous drugs. He allegedly made the sale to an MEG undercover agent in the parking lot of the apartment complex. Barbara Armbrust, 20, of 272 Kirchoff Rd., Palatine, and Michael Bocka, 18, of Roselle, were also arrested and charged with conspiracy to sell dangerous drugs. The arrests climaxed a two-month narcotics investigation by MEG.

According to Arlington Heights police, 800 tablets of mescaline (a hallucinogenic drug) and 240 grams of marijuana, were seized in the raid.

THE ARLINGTON Heights investigation was the first conducted solely by MEG. The group has been involved with numerous arrests made by state drug agents.

MEG was created in June to control drug use in the suburbs and consists of agents from 19 north and Northwest suburban police departments. The organization works with a $197,000 federal grant under the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968.

The Cook County Sheriff's police also supplies manpower to the organization. Local police department membership includes Palatine, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Hoffman Estates and Mount Prospect.

According to MEG director and Niles Police Chief Clarence Emerickson, the concept of a police organization to combat drug abuse "has been in the works for about three years," but the federal grant was not approved until this summer. Emerickson said MEG's central headquarters is not located in one community but moves to various suburban municipalities.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference said it will not accept the resignation of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of SCLC's Operation Breadbasket. Jackson offered his resignation earlier this week after he had been suspended while SCLC officials investigated allegations he allegedly set up without their knowledge, including "Black Expo."

Congress began eliminating the final barriers to adjournment of the first session of the 92nd Congress. Only mass absenteeism and the fading threat of a filibuster against foreign aid appeared to stand in the way.

A Miami-based ship line said one of its cargo vessels was being attacked by a Cuban gunboat. A spokesman for the Coast Guard said it was powerless to take any action other than sending medical aid because the ship was in international waters and was of Panamanian registry.

Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton was freed of charges in the 1967 killing of an Oakland policeman when the district attorney decided a fourth trial would be fruitless. The dismissal ended a four-year effort involving three trials to convict Newton for the slaying of Policeman John Frey in a predawn street battle.

The State

Federal Appeals Court Judge Otto Kerner, former Illinois governor, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of bribery, mail fraud, tax evasion, perjury and conspiracy in a race track stock scandal. Kerner asked for, and was immediately relieved of participation in any activity of the court pending final disposition of the charges against him.

A Republican ward committeeman and two driver testing examiners were indicted on charges of bribery and official misconduct for allegedly allowing unqualified applicants to pass driving tests. The employees included Eddie Mack Jones, a 17th Ward committeeman.

The World

Pakistan walked out of the Security Council after denouncing the United Nations as a "fraud and farce" that delayed action in the India-Pakistan war until India could capture Dacca. The Council was considering a heavily pro-Indian resolution offered by Poland to stop the war.

Pakistani commanders in East Pakistan asked India for a cease-fire as Indian troops and tanks drove to nearly a mile from the besieged eastern capital of Dacca. A dispatch from Dacca reported India and Pakistan did not seem to be too far apart on terms for stopping the fighting in East Pakistan.

The War

The United States put off the next Vietnam peace talk session for another week, and the Communists responded by charging the move was aimed at killing the conference. In Cambodia, Communist forces firing massive mortar and rocket barrages cut off an estimated three brigades of Cambodian troops 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh. Thousands of civilian refugees were reported fleeing southward.

Water Closes Rolling Meadows High

by JOANN VAN WYE

Rolling Meadows High School was closed yesterday after heavy rains caused the sewers to back up and flood lower levels.

The fieldhouse and locker rooms had as much as eight inches of water in some areas early in the morning.

The flooding conditions resulted when the Metropolitan Sanitary District interceptor along Central Road, where the school is located, filled and could not handle the runoff water.

The situation at the high school was first noticed at 2 a.m. yesterday when cleanup crews saw the sewers bubbling up, according to Norman Bucher, head custodian.

"I called in nine men and they worked all night to get things up off the floor," said Bucher.

"Due to the real extra effort of these men to get things up off the floor, there was no great damage to the building and equipment," said Robert Hoese, principal.

Hoese said the water had never gotten high enough to get into the lockers but some repainting might be necessary in the fieldhouse and locker rooms.

"The floor slants a little near the main equipment room and we were fortunate for that," said Thomas O'Driscoll, athletic director. He added the damage appeared to be limited to a few wet football jerseys and cheerleading uniforms.

Hoese was notified of the situation at about 5 a.m. and the decision to close the school was made about 7:30 a.m. by High School Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert.

The decision was made after the school officials had conferred with city officials and learned it would take a minimum of two hours to clear the water out with sump pumps if it did not rain any more.

"Considering there was a 100 per cent chance of rain for the day we didn't have much choice but to close the school," said Hoese.

HOESE SAID THE flooded areas could have been closed off but the students would have had to be able to use the washrooms because they would have just caused more flooding in the lower levels.

"No School — Flooded Sewers" read the signs that greeted students when they arrived. Teachers reported to school on schedule and some pitched in to help clear the water. Only about an inch of water remained on the locker room floor at noon.

Hoese said the sump pumps had been working throughout the night but they were just recycling the water because there was no place for it to go.

"The frightening thing is we know it could happen again if there is another heavy rainfall," said Hoese.

The school's architects, city public work officials and maintenance men from the central administration office were at the school yesterday to check the cause of the flooding and investigate possible solutions.

James McFeggan, Rolling Meadows public works director, said the problem was not with the city's lines but with the MSD lines.

"We only have the one line going out of the city carrying all of the city's sewage," said McFeggan.

McFeggan said devices were available so that any time the sewers are filled the backup does not get into buildings.

A SPOKESMAN for the MSD said, "There are no problems with the capability of the system."

'No Road Work, No Vehicle Sticker'

A Buffalo Grove man, annoyed by the village's failure to repair part of Arlington Heights Road, has refused to buy a 1972 vehicle sticker.

J. Joseph Klodner wrote the village he would not buy the sticker until the road is repaired and said he hopes "other villages will also withhold payment."

In his letter to village president Gary Armstrong, Klodner complained the Cook County section of the road is "not only injurious to my automobile and to others that travel it, but more importantly, an extreme hazard."

The Cook County section of Arlington Heights Road is deeply rutted in western Buffalo Grove. The village has been unable to persuade the county to repair and village officials have said the village cannot afford to do the work itself.

However, Lake County repaired the section of the road in that county this fall.

"IT IS A SHAME," Klodner wrote, "that while our neighbors to the north have taken the bull by the horns and have had the northern half of Arlington Heights Road repaired, we cannot at the same time make the total length of Arlington Heights Road driveable."

Klodner was moved to make his protest after receiving a 1972 vehicle sticker application in the mail.

He pointed out a village letter accompanying maintenance is also provided by your fee."

In his reply, Klodner, who lives at 14 Regent Ct., said, "Since I am one of hundreds in Buffalo Grove who use Arlington Heights Road daily, I can certainly attest to the fact that this particular pavement is not being maintained. The road is definitely in worse shape than it ever was, and, with the advent of the winter season, it obviously will continue to deteriorate."

Repair of the road was an issue in last spring's election and village officials conceded that it has deteriorated badly. After Cook County refused to repair the road, village officials even talked of closing it to traffic.

Rain, Wind Cause Blackouts

Rain and high winds yesterday morning caused blackouts in parts of Arlington Heights and on the Wheeling-Edison border.

However, Paul Parker of Commonwealth Edison said the effects of the storm were no more than they'd have expected on a normal working day.

Parker said flooding in the Surrey Ridge section of Arlington Heights caused a section fuse to blow about 6 a.m. This left some 70 homes without electricity for about an hour and one-half.

Edison crews worked through the afternoon to string up temporary power lines to nine homes in the Surrey Ridge section that remained without power, because a transformer was almost completely under water.

The second power failure took place about 9 a.m. in the area of McHenry and Aptakisic roads in northwest Wheeling and adjacent Buffalo Grove. Parker said some 20 customers were without power for about an hour.

Wives Ask Investigation Of CCPA Coercion Charge

In a stormy exchange with Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer at Tuesday's City Council meeting, the wives of six city policemen demanded that an impartial investigation be opened into charges that Police Chief Lewis Case coerced four patrolmen to resign from the Combined Counties Police Association (CCPA) last week.

The women asked that an independent three-member committee be appointed to study the charges and report their findings. They want one member to be appointed by the City Council, one by patrolmen and a third to be appointed by the other two.

Meyer said he would appoint a panel to study the charges if and when the four patrolmen bring him written statements of their grievances against Case. Meyer said he would appoint a study group according to his own guidelines.

Mrs. Bruce Murphy was first to call for an independent, public investigation. She told the council she doesn't think an investigation by the mayor, "can be honest because he appointed Chief Case."

The six women were Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Brian O'Malley, Mrs. Mary Hamann, Mrs. Harvey Greenway, Mrs. Dennis Van Jacobs and Mrs. Jim Cosgrove. Their husbands are all Rolling Meadows patrolmen and members of the CCPA. The men were not at the council meeting.

Sgt. John Flood, a Cook County policeman and president of the entire CCPA organization, was also at the meeting and charged that statements made by Meyer and Case that the resignations were voluntary "are lies."

But the debate was primarily between Meyer and the women. The women said they believe the patrolmen were intimidated, and criticized the council for not starting an investigation.

MEYER SAID the women were basing their charges on second-hand information and did not have all the facts.

Mrs. Van Jacobs said the wives are concerned because "the futures of our families are at stake."

She added, "I don't think the people of Rolling Meadows want a police force that is appointed politically on the basis that this man will shut up and this man will do what he's told."

She told the aldermen, "In order to check the power of the mayor and the chief we have to have the aldermen take a stand and ask for an investigation. Maybe this is a dictatorship where Roland Meyer is king and you are puppets."

Mrs. Van Jacobs criticized the lack of a responsive grievance procedure within the department and said the CCPA "would give the men a voice and allow them to get up here with dignity and talk."

Mrs. O'Malley said "the policemen have tried to deal with the city before and come up against a blank wall."

Meyer responded saying, "Since the inception of the police department in 1955 this department has had rules and regulations and a grievance procedure to guard rights."

"The patrolmen have bargaining power within the department. But if they won't sit down and bargain by themselves, we won't recognize anyone's right to bargain for them."

Meyer told Mrs. O'Malley that if the men "will make charges in this council in writing and sign them, the council will conduct an investigation. I will appoint an outside committee — outside of the police department — to investigate."

MRS. MURPHY said, "We would like to see a three-man committee set up to investigate the charges brought against the chief by the patrolmen. We request that the mayor and city council appoint one citizen, the patrolmen appoint one citizen and these two citizens choose a third citizen to act as chairman. We would like these three men to conduct an investigation of the chief and have them report all their findings to the public."

During a lull in the exchange, Flood rose to address the council and said, "Mr. mayor, I agree with you on one thing. You've said that you shouldn't believe everything in the newspapers. You're right, because the statements (denying the charges of coercion) that you and the chief made are lies."

Meyer banged the gavel, ruled Flood out of order and ordered him to sit down or leave. Flood tried to keep talking and the mayor called for a recess.

After the recess, Mrs. Greenway tried to speak, and Ald. William Ahrens objected, saying the discussion was closed. Ald. Fred Jacobson said the council should consider continuing the discussion.

The council voted 7-3 to end the discussion, with Jacobson, James Huddleston and Steve Eberhard voting to continue the discussion.

Mrs. Greenway said, "The mayor has refused to answer any direct questions. He's talking in circles. We want direct answers, not the circus we've been subjected to."

Make It A Safe Holiday

Avoid Unnecessary Kitchen Risks

by JEANNE LESEM

UPI — Last minute cooking, like last minute shopping, takes some of the joy out of Christmas.

Among other things, it can cause accidents that spoil the holiday.

But advance cooking also can present problems, such as an overstuffed refrigerator whose cooling efficiency is impaired.

Here, from the Greater New York Safety Council and the New York City Health and Hospitals Corp., are tips to help you avoid these and other risks.

Mrs. Marjorie May, director of the safety council, suggests you do as much cooking as possible ahead of time so you won't be tired and rushed at the last minute.

Keep children out of the kitchen, especially when you use electrical appliances such as mixers.

Use good potholders for handling hot foods. The mitten type is recommended because it covers the back of the hand and doesn't droop. Never substitute a damp towel. It can break a hot glass container and steam caused by dampness can burn you hands.

Mrs. May said towels of terrycloth and other napped fabrics are especially hazardous because repeated washings loosen their fibers and makes them more vulnerable than usual to fire.

Dress sensibly in a housedress with pockets and opening that aren't liable to catch on knobs, pothandles and doors. Avoid clothing with bows and long sleeves. Wear sensible shoes with heels that are straight, in good condition and likely to stay on the feet.

Mrs. May said poorly fitted or worn shoes are very fatiguing — a hidden but big cause of accidents.

Take a coffee break at midmorning and midafternoon, with or without the coffee. Sit down and put your feet up for at least five minutes.

Even as simple a task as lighting the oven can be dangerous if you must use a match instead of a pilot light. Stand to one side, not directly in front of the oven. Open the door a couple of inches for a couple of minutes to let any accumulated gas escape. Light the match before you turn on the gas.

With an oven pilot light, reverse the procedure. Don't open the oven door until you hear flames hissing. It's gas accumulating in the oven that triggers the pilot light.

FOR CHOPPING or cutting food, use a cutting board, not a plate or the porcelain sink cover. Your knife can slip on a hard, shiny surface and cause a painful or dangerous cut.

Both Mrs. May and Charlotte Scotti, director of dietetics for the city health and hospitals agency, cautioned against overloading refrigerators with too many hot foods at one time.

This raises the interior temperature of the appliance and increases the risk of food spoilage.

Food wrapped in heavy paper should be rewrapped in lighter material because the heavy kind insulates food against refrigeration.

Mrs. Scotti said cooked food should remain at room temperature only until steam stops rising from it. Then it should be covered and refrigerated, but with enough space around it for cold air to circulate and bring the freshly cooked food well below 50 degrees Fahrenheit in a hurry.

She said frozen foods that need defrosting before cooking — such as unstuffed turkeys — should be defrosted in the refrigerator, not at room temperature or in warm water.

Refrigerate raw meat, poultry, eggs,

dairy products and other highly perishable food promptly.

The same advice applies to bought or home-baked cream or custard pies.

"They're far more vulnerable to bacterial infection than most people think," said Mrs. Scotti.

Even bagged prepared vegetables such as celery and salad greens should be washed carefully and well in several changes of water.

Keep your hands clean, too. Wash them often, particularly between handling different food items and after you've done other household chores. If you've any open sores or cuts on your hands, wear gloves when you handle food. Disposable, lightweight plastic ones are sold at some fancy housewares stores.

Mrs. Scotti's agency advises baking most of the turkey stuffing separately or stuffing the bird just before cooking it, even if you pre-chill the stuffing to lessen the chance of spoilage.

And leftovers should be removed from the cavity to a covered storage container for the same reason.

Several Autos 'Lost' In High Underpass Water

Heavy rains yesterday caused an overflow of Higgins-Willow Creek, some street and basement flooding on the city's south and west sides, and inundation of several cars in a Higgins Road underpass.

City public works officials reported that Willow Creek, unable to flow into the already overloaded Des Plaines River, flooded a section of Higgins near Mannheim Road. The Willow Creek overflow also caused sewer backups and street flooding in parts of Orchard Place and north Rosemont, officials said.

Street and basement flooding also was reported on the city's west side, caused, city officials said, by an overload of the Metropolitan Sanitary District sewers.

City and Rosemont maintenance crews still were working at Herald press time last night to drain flooding and open sewers.

FLOODING ON Higgins caused several cars to be inundated in at least 12 feet of water in the 14-foot-deep Higgins Road viaduct under the Soo Line Railroad tracks.

One car was pulled from the viaduct by Schinka Auto Wreckers, while several others, abandoned when they stalled in the high waters, could not be removed because of high waters.

One woman was helped from her car at the viaduct early yesterday morning by Des Plaines Patrolman, Michael Banner.

Nancy Beecroft, 3738 N. Neva, Chicago, was driven to work by police, after her car stalled in the viaduct.

Joseph Schwab, city public works commissioner, said his crews were working to relieve flooding along Higgins east of Mannheim.

City crews barricaded the intersection of Railroad and Lunt avenues, which had flooded. Schwab also reported flooding on North Shore Avenue, which lies between Maple Street and Eisenhower Drive.

STREET FLOODING was reported on a four block area surrounding the intersection of Morse Avenue and Cora Street. Hip-deep flooding was reported on Morse, from Mannheim to Chestnut Street, by Mrs. Loraine Angell, director of Angel Town nursery school, 6904 Cora. Mrs. Angell said her students had to be lifted by adults to and from the school over the flooded streets.

Public works officials reported about 20 calls from homeowners who complained that untreated sewage water from sanitary sewers had backed up and overflowed into basements.

Hardest hit by basement flooding was the Capitol Hill subdivision on the city's west side, especially on Marshall Drive, Dover Lane and Dover Drive, according to Walter Schaefer, deputy public works commissioner.

Officials also reported flooding on Westmere Road, on the city's west side, and at the intersection of Willow and Harding Avenue, on the city's north side.

The Des Plaines River overflowed its banks near the River Road bridge east of downtown Des Plaines, covering a section of Campground Road, Schwab said.

MSD spokesman yesterday said he had received no complaints about flooding. He said overloading of MSD sewers is caused by illegal sewer connections and construction without regard to water runoff.

Methodist Minister Heads Association

The Des Plaines Ministerial Assn. recently elected new officers for the coming year.

Named chairman was the Rev. R.A.W. Bruhl, senior minister of the First United Methodist Church of Des Plaines. The Rev. H. D. Peckenpaugh, rector of St. Martin's Episcopal Church, was elected co-chairman, and the Rev. Mark Bergman of Trinity Lutheran Church was named secretary-treasurer.

Carroll Will Run For Reelection

State Sen. John Carroll, R-4th, said yesterday he will seek reelection in the new 4th legislative district, which now includes parts of Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights and Des Plaines.

Sen. Carroll, 66, a Park Ridge newspaper publisher and 15-year General Assembly veteran, said he is "going back home" by running in a district which includes more Northwest suburbs than he has formerly served as a senator.

Before his election in 1966 as senator for the former 4th district, which included Maine and Niles townships, Carroll served from 1956 to 1966 as a state representative from the former sixth district, of Niles.

Carroll, who considers himself a conservative Republican, is a member of the influential senate executive committee, and is also a member of the welfare and transportation committees.

During the current legislative session, Carroll has voted for aid to non-public schools and against legalization of abortion.

He joined with State Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, in a legal fight in 1970 to allow townships to collect fees for collecting taxes.

Publisher of a weekly newspaper chain in Maine Township, Carroll began his political career as a Park Ridge alderman.

He has served as president of the Maine Township Republican club and as a member of the township Regular Republican organization.

He is a member and past president of the Illinois Press Association, and a member of the Park Ridge Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis, Elks and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A native of Ontario, Canada, Carroll, and his wife Carole, have two children.

Sen. John Carroll

Des Plaines Girl In Play At Maine North

A Des Plaines girl is among the Maine North High School students who will have lead roles in "A Thousand Clowns," the Thespian play which will be performed at 8 p.m. Jan. 20-22.

Sharon Fey, 200 Lee St., Des Plaines, will act in the play along with Glenview students Greg Polcyn, Ron Elliott, Kathy Papajohn, Geoff Homes and Hal Pollack. Directing the show will be drama teacher Roger Kleinfeld, assisted by Glenview students Shar Watts and Lori Schoenherr.

A comedy written by Herb Gardner, "A Thousand Clowns," is about an eccentric bachelor who tries to raise his nephews. He loses his job as a comedy writer for a children's television show and finds time to do the things he never had time to do while employed.

Admission will be $2 for adults and $1 for students. The play will be presented in Maine North's large group instruction room, 5611 Harrison St., Des Plaines.

which included all the Northwest suburbs.

He feels he is well known within the recently remapped 4th district. "I have represented these Northwest suburban residents. I pioneered some of the important legislation for the district. I feel like I'm going back home."

NO OTHER Republican has filed in the 4th district, which includes northern Skokie, part of Niles, most of Park Ridge, Des Plaines north and east of the Des Plaines River, Wheeling Township, parts of Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights south of Palatine Road, and Arlington Heights east of Dunton Avenue and north of Northwest Highway.

Thomas Flynn, 35, of Niles has been endorsed by the Maine Township Democratic Organization for state senator in the district. A past president of the township Young Democrats club, Flynn is a planner and project coordinator for the Cook County Department of Planning and Development, and assistant commissioner of consumer fraud for the Village

Community Chest Within 10 Per Cent Of Its Goal

The Des Plaines Community Chest has announced it is within 10 per cent of its 1971 fund drive goal of $50,000, and has asked residents who have not contributed to make a donation.

At a meeting Tuesday night, chest officials also elected John Heddens Jr., vice president of the First National Bank of Des Plaines, as community chest president for the coming year.

The chest, which benefits 13 local agencies, asked residents to send their contributions to: Des Plaines Community Chest, P.O. Box 204, Des Plaines, Ill. 60017.

Also elected at the meeting Tuesday were chest vice presidents: Artist White, wage and salary administrator of Universal Oil Products Co., of Des Plaines; Milton Cully, owner of Cully Auction Co., of Des Plaines; and Joseph Sommer, president of Magnetic Coil Co. of Chicago and a Des Plaines resident.

Named treasurer was Thomas Tate, cashier at the Des Plaines National Bank. Elected secretary was Mrs. Shirley Saffold, 1601 Sherman Pl., Des Plaines.

ELECTED DIRECTORS for three-year terms were: Robert Ayers, salesman with Baird and Warner in Des Plaines; Mrs. Richard Cameron, of Des Plaines; Kenneth Franke, personnel manager for Conex division of Illinois Tool Works in Des Plaines; Sgt. Kenneth Fredricks, Des Plaines police youth officer; Glen Glaser of Hynes Pharmacy; and William Walter, principal at Plainfield School in Des Plaines.

Named to two-year terms as directors were: Jordan Minerva of Des Plaines, former head for two years of the community chest; and Henry Lashway of Des Plaines, a retired school principal. Elected to a one-year term as director was Harold Franzen, vice president of Des Plaines Lumber and Coal Co.

WATER WAS several feet deep in this area on Lunt Avenue on the far south side of Des Plaines yesterday. See additional photo on page 2.

Burglars Get $405

Thieves stole $405 in cash in a daylight burglary on the city's north side Tuesday, according to Des Plaines Police.

Lillian Johnson of 570 Princeton St., told police she returned to her apartment Tuesday afternoon to find the money missing. Police said the burglars searched the apartment after entering by prying open a rear door.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference said it will not accept the resignation of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of SCLC's Operation Breadbasket. Jackson offered his resignation earlier this week after he had been suspended while SCLC officials investigated corporations he allegedly set up without their knowledge, including "Black Expo."

Congress began eliminating the final barriers to adjournment of the first session of the 92nd Congress. Only mass absenteeism and the fading threat of a filibuster against foreign aid appeared to stand in the way.

A Miami-based ship line said one of its cargo vessels was being attacked by a Cuban gunboat. A spokesman for the Coast Guard said it was powerless to take any action other than sending medical aid because the ship was in international waters and was of Panamanian registry.

Black Panther co-founder Huey P. Newton was freed of charges in the 1967 killing of an Oakland policeman when the district attorney decided a fourth trial would be fruitless. The dismissal ended a four-year effort involving three trials to convict Newton for the slaying of Policeman John Frey in a predawn street battle.

The State

Federal Appeals Court Judge Otto Kerner, former Illinois governor, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of bribery, mail fraud, tax evasion, perjury and conspiracy in a race track stock scandal. Kerner asked for, and was immediately relieved of participation in any activity of the court pending final disposition of the charges against him.

A Republican ward committeeman and two driver testing examiners were indicted on charges of bribery and official misconduct for allegedly allowing unqualified applicants to pass driving tests. The employees included Eddie Mack Jones, a 17th Ward committeeman.

The World

Pakistan walked out of the Security Council after denouncing the United Nations as a "fraud and farce" that delayed action in the India-Pakistan war until India could capture Dacca. The Council was considering a heavily pro-Indian resolution offered by Poland to stop the war.

Pakistani commanders in East Pakistan asked India for a cease-fire as Indian troops and tanks drove to nearly a mile from the besieged eastern capital of Dacca. A dispatch from Dacca reported India and Pakistan did not seem to be too far apart on terms for stopping the fighting in East Pakistan.

The War

The United States put off the next Vietnam peace talk session for another week, and the Communists responded by charging the move was aimed at killing the conference. In Cambodia, Communist forces firing massive mortar and rocket barrages cut off an estimated three brigades of Cambodian troops 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh. Thousands of civilian refugees were reported fleeing southward.

PTA Notes

Tonight is family night at Orchard Place School, Maple and Farwell avenues, Des Plaines. The Orchard Place PTA is sponsoring its Christmas meeting, which will feature musical presentations by students and will be followed by a community sing.

After a short business meeting at 7:15 p.m., there will be a presentation by John O'Donnel and five instrumental students. Mrs. Evelyn Clancy will direct a sixth grade singing group and the fifth and sixth grade Spanish classes of Mrs. Christine Dudek will present a Christmas play and sing carols.

Find Woman, 50, Dead In Home

A Des Plaines woman died Tuesday of what police said was an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound.

The woman, Thelma Griffith, 50, of 1013 Wilson Dr., was found dead in the basement of her home shortly before 5 p.m. Tuesday by her husband, Mikel, according to Des Plaines police.

Police said a .38 cal. pistol that apparently had been fired several times was found lying next to the woman's body. She was pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital, police said.

Griffith told police he returned home from work to find his wife lying at the bottom of the basement stairs, according to police reports. Police said the woman had been shot in the head.

Youth Gets Probation For Stolen Property

An 18-year-old Des Plaines youth was put on six months probation Tuesday after being found guilty of possessing stolen property.

The youth, Charles Fuller, of 1314 Fargo Ave., had been arrested in connection with burglaries at C-Line Products, 1530 Birchwood Ave., Des Plaines, and at the Des Plaines Park District Lake Opeka fieldhouse, police said.

Fuller and three juveniles were arrested Nov. 4, after a dispute among several youths broke out when one group of youths reportedly burglarized the home of another youth. With the arrest of the four youths, police said they had solved six south side burglaries, all in October or early November.

The other three youths were turned over to juvenile authorities after their arrests.

What A Way To Glow

Vanity Fair quilts elegance into the styling of the long robe illustrated center. The "y-shaped" panel accentuates the slim silhouette. Nylon tricot in shades of burgundy and rose. $25

Above is another Vanity Fair quilted creation. This one a bit bouncier, although it's called Dreamline. Again of nylon tricot in green and yellow. $25

Left center is the young girl shirt look of nylon tricot dished with lace and satin beading. This one available in the peignor set only. $20

A mini length peignor is done quite demurely by Miss Elaine (lower left). Made of Caprolan nylon tricot. The peignor is full and sheer over the double layered sheer-over-opaque shift gown. $15 set

Burglars are invading my neighborhood. I don't know what is so attractive about the south side of town — it is hardly where the money is in the city — but it's attracting thieves like flies. And the whole neighborhood is becoming paranoid.

The police department suggests the old standard precautions to prevent your home from being burglarized. Just locking your doors doesn't do the trick, they say. Instead, make it look as though you're home. Leave a radio on, leave lights on, try and keep a vehicle parked next to your house, in the garage or in a driveway.

If you're not home, have a neighbor watch your house. Do not, under any circumstances, leave money around the house.

Report any suspicious looking persons to the police. Get a description and, if they are in a car, a license number. Ask for a solicitor's license from all door-to-door salesmen and if they have none notify the police immediately. It's even worth it to hassle the meter readers a little bit by asking for identification (they are not insulted by it).

ONE OF MY friends is concerned because her children get home from school before she gets home from work. What if they walk in on a burglar while he is burgling? she asked. Have them make a lot of noise before they enter the house. I remember when I'd come home from school to an empty house I'd open the door and yell inside, "If there's any burglars in here I'll give you five minutes to get out." Then I'd go wait in the backyard for five minutes before going in.

Unfortunately, if a thief wants to steal from you badly enough he'll probably succeed. There is practically no lock that is burglar-proof. Regular door locks can be unlocked with pieces of plastic, metal and even credit cards if you know how.

When we lived in Chicago in a rickety old apartment building (on the third floor) my next door neighbors were burgled. It was in the afternoon, I was at home — right on the other side of the common wall we shared — and I never heard or noticed a thing. It was frightening. They carried off their television, radios, clocks, jewelry, cash and silver in a matter of minutes.

I, TOO, WAS ROBBED once. Some cuckoo stole all of my diapers out of the building's washing machine. And that was a catastrophe for a new mother with a six-week-old baby and no money to replace them.

The super-robbery story of all times comes from Eleanor, my co-worker. Way back when her oldest daughter (now married) was a baby, Eleanor walked in on a burglary in progress in her own little apartment. The robber had a scarf around his face and everything and was standing there with her money envelopes. (Money envelopes, for those of you who have never budgeted, contain portions of each paycheck that are to be used to pay future bills.)

Instead of panicking, Eleanor put down her baby, asked the burglar what he was doing and continued to chastise him for trying to steal the money she had so carefully set aside for a new snowsuit for her daughter. The burglar apologized, returned the money and sat down over a cup of coffee to tell her his life story. Eleanor sympathized, gave him $5 and sent him home — with his promise that he would go straight, try and find a job and talk to his clergyman. And she swears every word of it is true.

Girls' Fall Sports End

The fall sports season of swimming, tennis and archery competitions has ended for Maine West High School girls in Des Plaines.

The swim team, coached by Maine West physical education teacher Lou Homan, competed in two tournaments, placing second out of six teams in the Maine West Invitational and third out of six teams in the Arlington Invitational.

Pat Sipple, one of the Maine West swimmers, received first-place ribbons for the 100-yard and 200-yard freestyle events and ribbons were also awarded to the Maine West 100-yard medley relay team and the 400-yard freestyle relay team.

The girls tennis team earned a record of three wins and five losses in competition with area schools.

Maine West girls playing in singles competition included Carla Krebs, Kathy Zykowski, Martha Clement and Barb Schwartz. Doubles players were Sue MacDonald and Gail Kremers, Monica Polachek and Karen Neetz, Kim Tuttle and Karen Beatty, Sue Dolan and Rita Dolan and Debbie Maday and Diane Ehorn.

Barb Jones, Maine West physical education instructor, coached the tennis team.

The archery team also competed with area schools and earned a record of three wins and two losses. Coaching the 12 shooters on the team was Connie Bauman, another Maine West physical education instructor. Top shooters for the team were Maine West students Jean Wolf, Mary Gunderson and Mary Van Noy.

Crane Lashes New Economy: 'No Vision'

Lashing out at President Nixon's economic recovery plan, U. S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., said in a speech yesterday, "The wage-price controls attack the symptoms, not the cause, of inflation."

Crane spoke yesterday to the members of the Elk Grove Village Association of Industry and Commerce during their annual meeting held at the Holiday Inn, Elk Grove Village.

Crane told the businessmen the "tragedy" of all the current government economic measures "is their failure to recognize the true cause of inflation." The cause, he said, was the government's "deficit financing and expansion of the currency supply."

Crane termed the current "inflation psychology" in which wage earners expect periodic raises just to maintain the current earning power a "sorry problem." But, he added, "the public's attention has been diverted from the source of that problem with the wage-price controls."

Borrowing an analogy from economist Milton Friedman, Crane likened the wage-price controls to "putting a brick on a pressure cooker when Congress is controlling the heat." Doing this, he said, would only result in the need "for more bricks."

Most of his letters from businessmen have indicated support for wage-price controls, Crane said. But he warned, "When the teeth begin to apply, the businessman will find he is working with more constraints than labor or the consumer."

INDICATING his support for fewer government controls on the economy,

Crane said that "the alternative to a free economy is coercion." He said "history shows the sorry results when government increases that control."

Crane predicted that as government enlarges its economic controls the first victims could well be small businessmen. "With more constraints, the profit margins will get thinner and thinner. I can anticipate the end of small entrepreneurs."

Though Crane feels the situation is worsening, he also said it was not hopeless. "I urge you not to adopt a defeatist attitude."

Instead, he told businessmen to become more active in the governmental process. "You should monitor legislation as an association. Even the big business associations don't do this as well as the unions." He urged businessmen to take public stands on economic issues, and, he said, "Know when, where and how to fight."

Psychiatric Program Set

A partial hospitalization program for psychiatric patients is now being held during evening hours at Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge.

The evening program allows patients to work at their jobs and to live at home. The program is similar to Lutheran General's psychiatric day hospital program, but the hours are 5 to 10 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. The program has a capacity for 15 patients.

All diagnoses are accepted other than alcoholism or drug abuse. Each patient is under the care of his attending psychiatrist on Lutheran General's medical staff. Patients must be between 16 and 65 years of age, have control of their behavior and be able to furnish their own transportation to and from the hospital.

The program begins with an evening meal, which is followed by occupational therapy where patients can accomplish goals and work together in situations where they both give and receive orders. Three nights a week patients work on a personal project including wood-working, leathercraft and mosaic. Twice weekly a group project is completed similar to a true working experience.

This is followed by group therapy sessions and once-weekly psycho-drama programs when patients are allowed to reenact recent conflicts within their lives.

There is an hour free time each evening followed by recreation. One evening a week patients take a field trip such as bowling, rollerskating and other community activities.

Additional information is available by contacting the hospital. Many third party insurers provide benefits for the cost of the program.

Workmen put finishing touches on the frame of the $2.4 million United Air Lines reservation center.

'Airline Got A Special Permit Deal'

A member of the Elk Grove Township Board of Auditors believes United Air Lines received preferential treatment when it applied for Cook County Building and sewer permits for the new reservation center going up across the street from the company's corporate headquarters.

Auditor Bernard Lee made the charge because the company was given a county building permit on the condition it would get proper clearance for its sewer, a procedure he says is not allowed for smaller developers.

However, a United official said yesterday the building permit was granted conditionally while the airline studied the problem of obtaining a sewer permit without overburdening the sewer maintenance operation of Elk Grove Townships.

Robert Sampson, regional vice president for United, said that after the building permit was granted airline officials discovered they could receive a sewer permit because they hold the status of public utility in connection with their airline operations.

THE PROBLEMS began, according to Lee, when United approached the township last summer and asked that it sign a sewer permit application for the new building.

Under procedures implemented in the last two years, the Metropolitan Sanitary District requires that an application for a sewer permit be signed by another governing body, such as a township or village, or that the permit holder be licensed as a public utility or sanitary authority with the state.

Lee said United was informed that the township requires a deposit and dedication of the sewer line to the township before it will sign a sewer permit application.

After that, Lee said, the airline "had conversations with MSD and they talked the county building authority into issuing a building permit while United was applying for a public utility license."

Lee said that procedure violated administrative agreements between the sanitary district and the township that require that a sewer permit be granted before a building permit would be issued.

"Because of their size or special ties, United received special treatment that is not available to anyone else," Lee said.

LEE SAID THE objection United had to the township's procedure apparently was that "they didn't want anyone else to touch their sewers." He said that if the sewer had been dedicated to the township the township would have maintained it and charged United a monthly fee.

"The cost would have been peanuts," Lee said. "It would have cost them maybe $100 a month. That was certainly not an issue in the whole matter."

The corporate offices of United were granted sewer permits in 1961 under an old policy of the MSD, he said. That policy was changed to require a governmental body to cosign applications because of problems with developers who deserted privately installed sewer systems after property was sold, he said.

Sampson, however, said United's concern with dealing with the township was the fact the township would have maintained the system. "United's system is so large it would have required Elk Grove Township to assume the burden of maintaining the whole system. We were worried about the quality of service," he said.

Lee said he did not believe United would fail to maintain its system, but said he still objected to the fact building permits were issued before the problem with sewer permits was resolved.

"It's not a violation of the law," Lee said, "but it's a dual standard. No individual could have gotten the permit the way United did. It is the only exception I am aware of in the last 1 1/2 years — everybody else has followed the rules."

'Old Timers' Receive Awards

Some 175 employees and guests attended the annual "Old Timers Club" service awards dinner-dance held recently for Des Plaines employees of Parker Hannifin Corp.

Thirty employees were honored during the evening with recognition and awards for their length of service to the corporation.

Among those receiving awards were 30-year employees: John Blazina, John Kollar, Frank Steinman, and Wayne Beyer. Each received a tie tuck with three diamonds.

Recipients of watches in recognition of 20 years service were: Tillman Bailey, Avery Barton, Robert Bauer, Leo Breske, Darrell Eskew, Philip Pagliaro, Anton Sulik, Floyd Hartgraves, Walter Johnson, Charles Metrick, Joseph Nemet, Philip McLaughlin, Roy England, George Homola, John Olinger, Margaret Schmidt, and Clarence Zygowicz.

Those receiving diamond bracelets or tie tucks for 10 years of service were: Bobby Hensley, Marvin Ninneman, Thomas O'Donnell, Barton Rossi, Romuald Szuba, John Chamberlain, Charles Henry, Josephine Bennett, and Lucinda Patko.

United's Building Progressing

Construction of the United Air Lines $2.4 million reservation center on Algonquin Road is proceeding on schedule, as the airline marks its 10th anniversary this week at its Elk Grove Township site.

The building addition is located on a 13-acre site across Algonquin Road from the corporation headquarters building and the stewardess school, east of Busse Road.

A spokesman said this week that construction is coming along well with the frame of the building near completion. He said the building should be finished in August and will go into service by November.

The center, designed by Graham, Anderson, Probst and White, will house the reservation system serving all or part of 10 Midwestern states. The system is designed to handle 640,000 messages per hour at 515 sales agent locations which utilize cathode-ray television sets.

The first floor will consist of administration offices, a ticket service center, conference and training rooms, locker rooms and an employee lounge area.

More than 500 sales desks grouped in clusters and 15 management areas will be found on the second level. States handled by the reservation center will include Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Kentucky, Missouri and North and South Dakota.

Altogether United owns 102.3 acres in the complex with a total property value of $55.5 million. Some 55 acres are devoted to buildings and landscape while 47.3 acres remain undeveloped.

Within the last two months United initiated the three-division concept in running the airline, which divides the United States into three geographic areas with each having its own headquarters. The Chicago headquarters for the Central Division also is located at the Elk Grove Township site.

THE ACCEPTED INFLUENCE IN THE NORTHWEST SUBURBS

Bomb Threat In Adoption Battle

by MARGE FERROLI

Arlington Heights police are investigating a bomb threat made late Tuesday to Mrs. Paula Marshall, an Arlington Heights mother who earlier Tuesday was granted custody of her daughter, Amy, after a two-year court battle.

Police spokesmen said Mrs. Marshall reported the caller was a male and sounded as though in his 40s. He reportedly used abusive language and threatened her house would be bombed after saying he had adopted children of his own.

Police advised the telephone company of the call and are taking "the usual precautions."

Mrs. Marshall, who lives at 2234 Goebert Rd. with her 7 year old daughter, was awarded custody of the 2½ year old child when Cook County Circuit Court Judge Helen McGillicuddy upheld an Illinois Appellate Court ruling ordering a Colorado Springs, Colo. couple to return Amy to her natural mother.

Mrs. Marshall said yesterday she received only one threatening phone call,

"but it was enough to scare me."

"You hear about things like this all the time, but when someone threatens your own life, it's another story," she said. "There are just some sick people in this world."

The court ordered that Mrs. Marshall receive immediate custody of the child, but Mrs. Sylvia Decker, one of her attorneys, said she has not yet been advised when Amy will be returned to her natural mother. But she said she expects notification shortly.

AMY IS NOW IN the custody of her adoptive parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Huebert. The Hueberts adopted the baby in June, 1969.

However, the court ruled Mrs. Marshall, in giving up her child had been defrauded and had been under strain and duress.

"She never consented to give the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker said. "She was told at the time by the lawyer for the adoptive parents there would be a six-month waiting period during which she could reclaim custody of the child."

This waiting period, however, was nonexistent, Mrs. Decker said, which led her to unknowingly hand the child over to the Hueberts.

Mrs. Marshall's husband, Timothy, from whom she was then and is currently separated, was responsible for handing the child to the Cook County Dept. of Public Aid, which handled the adoptive proceedings, Mrs. Decker said.

She explained Marshall gave the child to a Julie Brown, who in turn presented Amy to the public aid department.

"She (Miss Brown) had a financial interest in putting the baby up for adoption," Mrs. Decker claimed, explaining the adoption would have eliminated child support payments for Amy by Marshall.

Miss Brown was a mutual friend of the Marshalls, Mrs. Decker said. Mrs. Marshall was unaware of her husband's relationship with her at the time of the adoption and "completely trusted her," she said.

MRS. DECKER placed the blame for the confusion over the adoption in three places:

—on the Hueberts' attorney who had claimed there would be a six-month waiting period;

—on the Public Aid department for not fully explaining the adoption proceedings to Mrs. Marshall; —and on Miss Brown for "misleading" Mrs. Marshall and giving her advice to turn the child over to the public aid department.

Mrs. Decker said Mrs. Marshall was under strain shortly after Amy's birth because she had just separated from her husband. She also did not have a job and worried about supporting her two children.

"A child cannot be taken away from its natural mother unless the mother consents to it or is proven unfit," Mrs. Decker said. "The court has no right to investigate the qualifications of a natural mother, except in an extreme case of child abuse."

She said Mrs. Marshall went to the public aid department for advice on how best to handle her situation shortly after Amy's birth.

"They told her in 15 minutes all her rights, which is a complete farce," Mrs. Decker said. "The public aid department must fully explain adoption procedures and assistance or they might as well just kidnap a child."

THE PUBLIC AID department, although dealing primarily with welfare payments, does act as an adoption service, but is not a state recognized adoption agency, Mrs. Decker said. The regular investigation proceedings of the adoptive and natural parents made by a recognized adoption agency are not conducted by the county office.

Brighten Yule For Needy

Elk Grove Township residents are being asked to help make the Christmas holidays a little brighter for needy township residents.

Township Supervisor William Rohlwing has proposed residents consider "adopting" needy families during the Christmas season.

In a similar project, the Elk Grove Kiwanians are asking residents to donate clothes, toys, and money to 350 needy individuals.

Rohlwing suggested residents help needy families by either inviting them to be included in the Christmas Day celebration of the supporting family or to purchase gifts and food for a needy family.

"Many families are still on welfare in the township because of illness, loss of jobs, desertion and many other personal reasons," he said. "Most of these families don't have any relatives in the area who can help, and they are finding it difficult to get the day-to-day essentials."

"The special Christmas meal and gift-giving and exchanging that we all enjoy will not be possible for those families without help from those who can afford it."

THE SUPERVISOR offered services of the township office as the go-between for the plan. He promised the plan would be handled on a confidential basis and asked interested persons to call the office at 437-0300 during regular office hours.

The Kiwanis plan, "Project Share," involves donating needed items to needy individuals identified by the group.

Kiwanian Clyde Brooks said the group has identified 350 individuals in the township who are in need of help. The needy individuals include both children and adults, Brooks said.

"We are putting a priority on clothing for these people," he said, "but we will be glad to accept other items."

Items to be donated may be dropped off at any of the three Elk Grove Village fire stations. "Kiwanis" should be marked on the box. Cash for needy persons should be sent in care of Robert Haskell, 500 Elk Grove Blvd.

Persons seeking information or wishing to identify needy persons may call Donna Pritchard at 437-3527.

City Fire Department Offers Christmas Tips

Avoid Gift Loss By Proper Packaging

Improper packaging and illegible addresses will cause countless disappointments and perhaps a few small tragedies this Christmas season, according to Des Plaines Postmaster John F. Koulentes, who said last year more than 150,000 parcels and 2 million letters and greeting cards were processed in Chicago's dead letter office.

He offered these suggestions to speed the gifts and greetings to their destinations: address fully and clearly; write legibly or print plainly; avoid abbreviations; use zip codes.

—Place the return address in upper left corner of every envelope and parcel. Use 8-cent stamps on Christmas cards.

—Do not enclose coins or hard objects of any kind in envelopes. Canceling machines often damage such letters and cards.

—Pack gifts well in strong cartons, wrap in heavy paper, and tie securely with strong twine.

—Packages of food should be marked "perishable," and those containing glassware, china, electric appliances, radios, and such should be marked "fragile." Parcel should be insured.

—Place an itemized list of contents and the names and addresses of sender and receiver inside each parcel.

ing, firm needed one. Saw off the butt an inch above the old cut, stand it in water and keep it in water until you dispose of it, which should be soon after Christmas. Don't rely on do-it-yourself flameproofing treatments — none is truly effective. Locate the tree away from heat and where it won't block escape.

—Artificial trees should be clearly marked as made of slow-burning materials. Look for the Underwriters' Laboratories (UL) label on trees with built-in electrical systems. With metal trees use only indirect lighting to avoid shock hazard.

—Check lighting strings for frayed wires, loose connections, broken sockets. Replace only with UL labeled sets. Bulbs made in the United States generally are safer; imported ones may have dangerous hot spots. Electric cords sets with built-in fuses are strongly recommended. For outdoor lighting use only "UL-listed" Always turn off tree and other indoor holiday lights when you leave the house or retire.

—Use noncombustible decorating materials, metal, glass, asbestos, where possible. Make sure cotton batting, flock and decorating paper, is flameproofed. Natural evergreen decorations dry quickly and burn readily, so keep lighted candles well removed from them. Don't use polystyrene foam for candle holders or for table or mantle decorations where candles are also used.

—Dispose of gift wrappings promptly and safely. The fireplace is not a safe place to burn them.

—Watch for children playing near the tree and keep matches and lighters out of their reach.

Wives Demand Investigation Of CCPA Coercion Charge

In a stormy exchange with Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer at Tuesday's City Council meeting, the wives of six city policemen demanded that an impartial investigation be opened into charges that Police Chief Lewis Case coerced four patrolmen to resign from the Combined Counties Police Association (CCPA) last week.

The women asked that an independent three-member committee be appointed to study the charges and report their findings. They want one member to be appointed by the City Council, one by patrolmen and a third to be appointed by the other two.

Meyer said he would appoint a panel to study the charges if and when the four patrolmen bring him written statements of their grievances against Case. Meyer said he would appoint a study group according to his own guidelines.

Mrs. Bruce Murphy was first to call for an independent, public investigation. She told the council she doesn't think an investigation by the mayor, "can be honest because he appointed Chief Case."

The six women were Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Brian O'Malley, Mrs. Marv Hamann, Mrs. Harvey Greenway, Mrs. Dennis Van Jacobs and Mrs. Jim Cosgrove. Their husbands are all Rolling Meadows patrolmen and members of the CCPA. The men were not at the council meeting.

Sgt. John Flood, a Cook County policeman and president of the entire CCPA organization, was also at the meeting and charged that statements made by Meyer and Case that the resignations were voluntary "are lies."

But the debate was primarily between Meyer and the women. The women said they believe the patrolmen were intimidated, and criticized the council for not starting an investigation.

MEYER SAID the women were basing their charges on second-hand information and did not have all the facts.

Mrs. Van Jacobs said the wives are concerned because "the futures of our families are at stake."

She added, "I don't think the people of Rolling Meadows want a police force that is appointed politically on the basis that this man will shut up and this man will do what he's told."

She told the aldermen, "In order to check the power of the mayor and the chief we have to have the aldermen take a stand and ask for an investigation. Maybe this is a dictatorship where Roland Meyer is king and you are puppets."

Mrs. Van Jacobs criticized the lack of a responsive grievance procedure within the department and said the CCPA "would give the men a voice and allow them to get up here with dignity and talk."

Mrs. O'Malley said "the policemen have tried to deal with the city before and come up against a blank wall."

Meyer responded saying, "Since the inception of the police department in 1955 this department has had rules and regulations and a grievance procedure to guard rights."

"The patrolmen have bargaining power within the department. But if they won't sit down and bargain by themselves, we won't recognize anyone's right to bargain for them."

Meyer told Mrs. O'Malley that if the men "will make charges in this council in writing and sign them, the council will conduct an investigation. I will appoint an outside committee — outside of the police department — to investigate."

MRS. MURPHY said, "We would like to see a three-man committee set up to investigate the charges brought against the chief by the patrolmen. We request that the mayor and city council appoint one citizen, the patrolmen appoint one citizen and these two citizens choose a third citizen to act as chairman. We would like these three men to conduct an investigation of the chief and have them

Elk Grove Debate Team Has 17-7 Mark

Debaters from Elk Grove High School chalked up 17 wins and 7 losses in tournaments last weekend.

The varsity debate team of Patti Curtis, Charles Hanrahan, Mike Smith and Sue Keegan won all four of their debates at Oak Park Saturday. The novice team of Carol Swanson, Jay Zimmerman, Terri Nelson and Stephanie Sanders won three and lost one at the same meet.

The junior varsity team of Kathy McCoy, Sue Diamond, Dean Runzel and Tom Broten split with four wins and four losses at a meet at Wheaton North High School. The novice team of Tom Hanrahan, Cheryl Turban, Dave Parr and Dick Nelson had six wins and two losses at the same meet.

report all their findings to the public." During a lull in the exchange, Flood rose to address the council and said, "Mr. mayor, I agree with you on one thing. You've said that you shouldn't believe everything in the newspapers. You're right, because the statements (denying the charges of coercion) that you and the chief made are lies."

Meyer banged the gavel, ruled Flood out of order and ordered him to sit down or leave. Flood tried to keep talking and the mayor called for a recess.

After the recess, Mrs. Greenway tried to speak, and Ald. William Ahrens objected, saying the discussion was closed. Ald. Fred Jacobson said the council should consider continuing the discussion.

The council voted 7-3 to end the discussion, with Jacobson, James Huddleston and Steve Eberhard voting to continue the discussion.

Mrs. Greenway said, "The mayor has refused to answer any direct questions. He's talking in circles. We want direct answers, not the circus we've been subjected to."

CCPA Victories Were Not Easy

by KEN KOZAK

The Combined Counties Police Association, formerly called the Cook County Police Association, has been working for 3½ years to gain recognition as the bargaining agent for policemen in several Northwest suburban communities.

In some communities the CCPA has met with varying degrees of success, but the victories haven't come easily. In Des Plaines, patrolmen had to strike before city officials would recognize the local CCPA chapter as their bargaining unit.

After several months of talks, the Palatine Village Board agreed to recognize the CCPA as the sole local bargaining agent for patrolmen-members there.

Wheeling CCHA members still don't have a contract with the village, which they've been trying to get for two years.

In Rolling Meadows, the CCPA has come up against a blank wall. Sixteen of 20 Rolling Meadows patrolmen joined the CCPA in March, but the city council, led by Mayor Roland Meyer, has repeatedly refused to recognize the CCPA as the bargaining agent for its members. To force recognition, CCPA attorneys are preparing a suit against the city. The suit will ask that the city be required to recognize the CCPA's bargaining power, and to deal with it in future salary and personnel negotiations.

THE CCPA was chartered as the Cook County Police Association in June, 1968, to "protect and promote" the interests of member officers in the Cook County area. It was founded by three policemen to serve specifically as a voice for policemen.

The CCPA today is made up of Cook County Sheriff's policeman and members of 25 local municipal police forces, not all of which are recognized as bargaining agents by their local governments. There are 1,200 members under a country-wide executive board. Each local chapter represents only its own members.

The CCPA had membership in Waukegan, but members there went on strike last year and were fired. A court ruling upheld their dismissal.

A founder and first and still president is Sgt. John Flood, a Cook County Sheriff's policeman.

The sheriff's department was the first CCPA target, but CCPA leaders were already in 1968 planning a drive to attract patrolmen in suburban municipalities to the organization.

The problems that the CCPA has had in gaining municipal recognition were foreshadowed by its relationship with the sheriff's department.

TOP-RANKING CCPA leaders, including Flood, who had responsible investigative positions in the sheriff's department, suddenly found themselves counting pencils downtown, or covering a remote suburban beat.

Flood felt these personnel changes were more than coincidental, and protested that then Sheriff Joe Woods had ordered the shifts, and complained of further harassment, including a police "tail" on himself and an investigation of his activities to determine if he'd broken department rules that he was never charged with breaking.

At this time, which was mid-1969, the CCPA was beginning to make inroads into suburban municipal police departments. The first step was into Wheeling where, in April, 1969, 19 patrolmen and sergeants — 90 per cent of the force then — voted to form a CCPA chapter, which was authorized by its members "to negotiate in their behalf in all aspects of their employment."

In more than two years since then, the CCPA has not been recognized officially by the Wheeling village board as the bargaining arm of the city's patrolmen.

The dispute at one point led to a two-week strike by Wheeling police in 1970, but no formal recognition resulted. This year, however, the village sat down in October with the CCPA to discuss recognition, salaries and a contract between the CCPA and the village. But the contract, which would require the village to recognize the CCPA as the only representative of the member policemen, wasn't signed. So the CCPA has no official recognition in Wheeling, but police matters are discussed with the group.

DES PLAINES patrolmen probably have had most success in gaining recognition for their CCPA chapter. A two-day strike in December, 1969, by patrolmen seeking recognition for their CCPA unit, provided some of the impetus for recognition of the organization by the Des Plaines city council in August, 1970.

Patrolman John Meese, Des Plaines CCPA president, said the group has had a good relationship with city officials since recognition was granted. The Des Plaines CCPA chapter has more than 50 members.

Palatine's CCPA group received recognition from the village board in August, 1970, one day after their counterparts in Des Plaines.

This year, according to Mike McDonald, the Palatine CCPA president, the group negotiated their 1971 contract with the village manager, and settled on a good agreement.

The village board, which approves such negotiations, granted every provision of the agreement, except the requested salary.

This year, McDonald said, "we took it, but next year we're going to remember what happened." Negotiations for a new police contract begin in January in Palatine.

'Snow Foolin'—Sled Dogs Race At Towers Sunday

SIBERIANS, Samoyeds and Malamutes will come to Arlington Park Towers next Sunday for a day of racing and other competitive exhibits.

Everyone is invited to watch the sled dog races and weight pulling contests at the Arlington Park Towers hotel golf course at 1 p.m. Sunday, but please leave your dogs at home.

There will be about 100 dogs in the teams of five and three dogs, making up the entries for the events. Siberian and Alaskan Huskies, Alaskan Malamutes, and Samoyeds.

The unique event is free and is being presented by Don Ellison, Arlington Park Towers general manager, and the Midwest Sled Dog Club. Robert Thieme, president of the club, said there will be both senior and junior competition. Three classes will be entered: Class B teams of a maximum of five dogs per team. Class C teams of a maximum of three dogs per team. Junior Class; young people 12 years and under, and teams of a maximum of three dogs.

There will be weight pulling contests for dogs under 65 pounds and over 65 pounds.

A $500 purse, offered by Arlington Park Towers Management, will be divided between the eight winners in the B and C classes. Trophies and ribbons will be awarded to the Junior Class winners and there will be trophies and a purse for the weight-pulling winners.

Drivers will meet at noon for position draw. The event will last from 1 p.m. until about 3 p.m. There is plenty of free parking, and racing with or without snow.

Members of the club come from Palatine, West Chicago, McHenry, Lake Villa, Barrington, Crystal Lake, Rockford, Waukegan, Chicago, Prospect Heights, Marseilles, Warrensburg, Woodstock, Highland Park, and Hamilton, Ind.

Extension Courses Offered At Maine West High School

Chicago State University will offer extension courses at Maine West High School, 1755 S. Wolf Rd., Des Plaines, and at Maine South High School, 1111 S. Dee Rd., Park Ridge, for the winter trimester beginning Jan. 3.

Courses designed to meet adult needs for continuing education will be offered in a variety of subjects including psychology, English, library science, special education, industrial education, teacher education and home economics.

Registration is open to undergraduates meeting admissions requirements and to graduates of accredited colleges and universities. A list of courses by location is available by writing to the Office of Extension Services, Chicago State University, 6800 S. Stewart Ave., Chicago 60621, or telephoning 224-3900, extension 211.

There are three methods of registration for the 16-week courses: by mail, in person and at the first class session of the course.

Students may register by mail by requesting an enrollment application from the university's Office of Extension Services. Mail registration deadline is Monday. Students may register in person at the CSU campus Tuesday, Jan. 4, from 3 to 5 p.m. No registrations will be accepted after the first class meeting.

Forest Hospital Officers Elected

The 1972 medical staff officers of Forest Hospital, a private psychiatric hospital in Des Plaines, were elected Wednesday at the annual medical staff dinner.

Dr. Melvin Nudelman was chosen president of the staff; Dr. Robert Cutler was named vice president; and Dr. Karl Willich was chosen as secretary-treasurer.

The executive committee, which is the governing board of the hospital, was also elected at the meeting. The officers of that committee include: Dr. Melvin Nudelman, chairman; Dr. Robert Cutler, vice chairman and Dr. Karl Willich, secretary-treasurer.

Other members of the committee is

Forest Preserve Burning Ruling Near

The Illinois Pollution Control Board will decide the fate of open burning at the Cook County Forest Preserve District tree burning area near Wheeling within the next few weeks.

The village of Wheeling, Wheeling-area residents and antipollution enthusiasts have opposed a request by the forest preserve district to allow open burning at the site in addition to using the site for disposing of dead and diseased trees in an air curtain destructor, a machine designed to cut pollution from tree burning.

Among those favoring the variance for open burning are the village of Mount Prospect, and arborists who need the site to dispose of dead and diseased trees.

The variance asks for permission to allow open burning at the site to resume immediately and to continue until July 1, 1972.

At first the open burning would be the only method of disposing of trees at the site. Once the air curtain destructor, which is now being installed at the site, is operational it would also be used.

But, according to James Tyndall, assistant general superintendent of the forest preserve district, the variance would allow the district to burn openly until July, all trees in excess of what one air curtain destructor could consume.

As of that date all burning at the site would be in air curtain destructors. Tyndall said the county needs the additional time for open burning to determine how many destructors will be needed for the site.

THE ISSUE OVER the burning site began when the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) closed the burning area in September under a new state law on environmental control.

Since that time the county has received a burning permit which will allow burning in the destructor once it is installed, Tyndall said.

He explained that the first destructor should be installed by the end of December if the weather is good. The machine will then have to be inspected by the EPA before the burning permit for the destructor goes into effect, Tyndall said.

But whether open burning will also be allowed at the site until next summer is for the pollution control board to decide.

A public hearing on the variance for that open burning was held last Friday at the Northbrook Village Hall. EPA officials said they would make a decision by Jan. 4.

At the hearing arborists and the forest preserve district favored open burning, while the village of Wheeling, the Northbrook environmental quality commission, and individual residents opposed it.

Wheeling administrative assistant Roger Stricker said at the hearing that the village filed an objection to burning at the site in November.

"ALTHOUGH THIS site is not within the limits of the village of Wheeling it is close enough that the smoke and ashes from this burning affects the citizens of Wheeling," Stricker said at the hearing.

"The village of Wheeling would again like to go on record that we have had many complaints from our citizens in regard to burning that had gone on previously in this area and we are, therefore, strongly opposed to the issuance of this variance," Stricker said.

The village of Mount Prospect, on the other hand, passed a resolution endorsing the burning area for enabling municipalities to successfully battle Dutch elm disease and urged that the variance be granted.

In his letter requesting the variance from the EPA forest preserve district superintendent Arthur Janura pointed out that installation of the one 25-foot air curtain destructor at the site is costing the county in excess of $50,000.

In defense of the variance request Janura noted that, "lack of funds and land areas to install air curtain destructors leaves the local municipalities without a practical method of disposing of the wood wastes generated in their villages, primarily as a result of the Dutch elm disease."

He pointed out that the need for the site to remain open affects the City of Chicago, the Chicago Park District, 36 other municipalities, more than 50 private arborists and the forest preserve district itself.

HE SAID OPEN burning would only be begun when the wind was blowing away from nearby populated areas.

The final result of a refusal for the variance, according to Janura, could be that the inability to dispose of diseased elm trees "would create epidemic conditions resulting in the death and destruction of all elm trees in the Chicago Metropolitan area. In addition," he said, "standing dead trees in parkways, parks, forest preserve areas and on private property would become an extreme safety hazard."

Different Families Light Advent Candles At Church

During the Advent season at the First United Methodist Church of Des Plaines, Graceland and Prairie avenues, a different family will be lighting the Advent candles at the 9:30 and 11 a.m. worship services. The lighting of the candles is symbolic of the spiritual preparation needed prior to the celebration of the Christ Child's birth.

The Children's Christmas program will be held Sunday in the sanctuary at 3 p.m. The program, "Christmas Legends and Stories," is being coordinated by Mrs. H. A. Dickinson. A play, "The Christmas Rose," will be presented by the 11 a.m. fifth and sixth graders. "St. Francis and the First Christmas Creche" will be read prior to the assembling of the creche by the 11 a.m. third and fourth graders and the Nursery I children. "Martin Luther's Christmas Tree" will precede the "Christ Child and the Pine Tree."

The 9:30 Kindergarten I and II children will then put the lights on the tree. "Why the Christmas Tree Wears Tinsel" will find the 11 a.m. Kindergarten I and II children placing the tinsel on the tree. "The Story of St. Nicholas" will be followed by a choral reading presented by the 9:30 first and second graders. "Carol, Children, Carol" will be sung by the 11 a.m. first and second graders. The story of "The Drummer Boy" will be followed by the song "The Drummer Boy" sung by the 9:30 third and fourth graders. Members of the 11 a.m. fifth and sixth grade class will be the readers of the stories.

Members of the church staff and their mates will hold their second Christmas Progressive dinner party Saturday. The appetizer course will be enjoyed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reuter in Glenview, the salad at the F. Richard Hissong's, the main course at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David B. Clarke and the dessert at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Paul Grimes. The gifts exchanged are for someone outside the group. This year the recipients will be patients in the convalescent wings of Bethany Terrace, a United Methodist home in Morton Grove.

Talent Network Helps Open The Doors

Marketing Pro Athletes Is Big Business

by BOB FRISK

NELSON BRILES MADE an important phone call shortly after the final game of the World Series.

"What can you do for me now?" the 23-year-old righthander for the Pittsburgh Pirates asked Jack Childers of Talent Network, Inc. in Skokie, Ill.

Briles had dazzled Baltimore's powerful Orioles in a pulsating two-hit, 4-0 Series victory that enabled Pittsburgh to take a 3-2 edge in games. He had returned to center stage after a two-year struggle to regain the eminence he knew in 1967 with St. Louis.

Briles wanted to capitalize on that Series exposure. He knows that an athlete finds glory for only a few years. His body is his skill, and it can depreciate very fast.

He called Childers because this 41-year-old former Air Force jet fighter pilot makes it his business to help athletes, to market athletes, to make sure that the athlete has proper representation in business offers.

Briles was a onetime bit player in Twelfth Night at Chico (Calif.) State College, a budding thespian who had taken voice lessons. Could Childers help him now? He knew he had helped a former Cardinal teammate Lou Brock.

Jack went to work. He made some phone calls, worked out many details with the proper people, and then made some more phone calls. Nelson Briles was in business, the entertainment business.

Briles, who has his own television show in Pittsburgh, is booked into Mr. Kelly's in Chicago Jan. 17-30 and then he heads to Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas. He's working with such talented performers as Kay Stevens and Kaye Ballard. He sings, he has several routines, and he has been called by some critics "the best talent to come out of sports since Joe Garagiola."

A lot has happened to Nelson Briles since that afternoon of Oct. 11 when he walked off the mound at Three Rivers Stadium in Pittsburgh.

"What can you do for me now?" he asked Jack Childers, and Jack did the rest.

Jack Childers has been doing things for athletes for several years now. That's his line. Timing is important in any profession, and the proper marketing and handling of professional athletes has become big business.

"The athlete today has become what the movie star of yesterday was," says the 41-year-old Childers, who has always been a sports enthusiast and was an all-city basketball player at Senn High School in Chicago.

"The athlete provides recognition. More than that," he continued, "he also supplies the image. The 1970s will be the decade of the athlete. Our country has always idolized someone. Actors are just that, actors, and there is a suspicion they're always acting. There was a time when television stars were something special, when you'd talk about a George Gobel or Milton Berle, but there are too many stars, too many shows now."

"You'll always come up with your Beatles or Elvis Presleys in the entertainment field, but how often? Who could you point to now? Tom Jones? That leaves a tremendous void, and you have sports. Ninety-two million people watched each game of the World Series. Then there's the Super Bowl."

Childers, who became involved in representation of athletes after beginning as the licensing agent for such products as James Bond 007 and Batman, is the exclusive agent for Dick Butkus of the Chicago Bears and Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals among others.

He worked with the Heath Candy Co. on Super Crunch, a new candy bar that was initiated through a series of teaser promotions that had everyone asking, "Just what is Super Crunch?" Now they know and you can see the ads saying, "Super Crunch. Butkus Loves It. Don't Argue. His candy bar."

"There is a problem of when to utilize an athlete for a commercial or something like this candy bar," says Childers.

"There are only certain circumstances when an athlete is applicable. You don't just say, hey, let's get an athlete for this. There must be a legitimate reason and when they came up with a candy bar, a crunchy candy bar, you think of the crunchers in football and... well, doesn't that remind you of Dick Butkus?"

When Lou Brock of the Cardinals starred in the 1968 World Series, showing his speed to such good advantage, he worked with Childers in hooking up with a company that makes sneakers. Lou had been working on a new design sneaker and it proved to be a major breakthrough. Today, Lou still gets a royalty on every shoe sold.

Childers has a list of clients that sounds like a "Who's Who" of sports, names like Ernie Banks, Ron Santo, Pete Rose, Dennis Hull, Oscar Robertson, Roman Gabriel, Lenny Dawson, Jack Concanon, Dick Gordon, Bobby Douglass and many more.

It was Childers who worked with Old Orchard Country Club and Paddock Publications in landing Douglass for the first Paddock Sports Club luncheon. He had 18 athletes making personal appearances that day across the country.

"Prices obviously vary on these personal appearances," says Childers, "and it's a matter of supply and demand. Quarterbacks obviously have the most ups and downs. I try to limit the number of appearances a week and then for only about two hours at the most. It's more difficult for these athletes than it might look. Just the signing of autographs can be demanding if they make a couple appearances a day. But Pete Rose once told me, 'Don't worry about the autographs or how long I stay. I've got a short name.'"

Many of these athletes are not tied up in exclusive contracts with Childers and Talent Network because as Jack puts it, "If a person in this business is really interested in representing an athlete, he should try to get him into something respected, something meaningful, and we don't want to be so tied down that we can't do a proper job."

Childers was in the Chicago news frequently in the summer of 1969. The Chicago Cubs worked out a unique arrangement with Jack. They were to share equally all endorsement moneys, even if only one player was used. This concept was supposed to promote team solidarity but there were some repercussions as the club folded in September.

"The Cubs were a fantastic property that summer as everyone can remember," says Childers. "You couldn't go anywhere without someone talking about them and I wanted to help the players in this regard. But it was the adulation of the fans that took such a tremendous toll. They were drained because everywhere these players went, even in their own off-the-field lives, they were mobbed by fans. It was the first time something like this had happened to them, and the pressures became too great."

"From our end we had everything wrapped up by August so I honestly feel a lot of what was said later was unwarranted publicity. If I had to do it all over again, I'd do it the same way."

Jack Childers is in a fascinating business. It's a business that keeps growing every year. How important are these agents? An athlete without proper representation can throw away a fortune. Baseball's Denny McLain and basketball star Jerry Lucas both claimed bankruptcy because of poor business associations. Deacon Jones of the Los Angeles Rams went far into debt.

"I don't think there's an athlete alive who doesn't get business offers," says baseball star Willie Mays. "The tough thing is to know good from bad, especially when you're playing. And, if it is good, how to keep it going without making expensive mistakes."

That's where Talent Network, Inc. comes in.

That's their job.

That's why Nelson Briles called Jack Childers after the World Series and asked, "What can you do for me now?"

PETE ROSE of the Cincinnati Reds is just one of the many athletes represented by Jack Childers of Talent Network, Inc. in Skokie. Childers works out licensing arrangements, and he says the 1970s will be the decade of the athlete. "Our country has always idolized someone," he says, "and now it's the professional athlete."

East Matmen 2nd In Quad

Paul Board, Tom Bullis and Scott Perlman each earned first places to help earn Maine East a second place finish in a quadrangular wrestling meet at East Leyden. The host school won the meet with 93 1/2 points and Maine East was second with 67. East Aurora was third with 52 and Riverside-Brookfield last with 25.

Board won the meet's title at 105 pounds with a 2-1 victory over an East Aurora opponent and a 6-5 win over an East Leyden foe.

Bullis won the 126-pound crown by winning two matches by pins, both coming in the second period.

Perlman posted 10-0 and 8-2 decision victories at 138 pounds to earn first place.

Getting second places were Jim Sylverne at 112 pounds, Lou Capozzoli at 119, Mike Kan at 167 and Marc Grant at 185.

Sylverne won 6-3 in the first round over an East Leyden opponent but lost 4-1 to an East Aurora foe in the finals. Capozzoli won a first round match by forfeit but lost 22-7 to an East Leyden wrestler in the finals.

Kan won 6-3 over a Riverside-Brookfield grappler but then lost 5-4 to an East Aurora opponent. Grant was a 5-2 victory over an East Aurora wrestler in the first round but lost by pin in overtime, 8:49, to an East Leyden grappler. Grant was in a 9-9 draw at the end of regulation.

Third place finishers were Jay Check at 98 pounds, Tony Raschillo at 132, Frank Marteo at 145 and Scott Vaughan at 155.

Check lost 4-3 to a Riverside-Brookfield opponent but came back to beat an East Aurora foe 6-2. Raschillo lost 9-7 against East Leyden but won by pin in the first period against East Aurora. Martello lost 7-5 to an East Aurora wrestler but won 3-1 against a Riverside-Brookfield opponent.

Vaughan was a 10-9 victim to an East Leyden grappler but came back to whip a Riverside-Brookfield foe 12-1.

Heavyweight Ed Kleckner finished in fourth place, losing by 3-0 and 3-2 decisions.

Team points were awarded nine points for a first place finish, six for a second and three for a third. One point was awarded for a pin and one-half point for a win by 10 points or more.

Maine East's freshman team finished second in a tournament at Palatine which DeKalb won.

The Demon grapplers will be home against Proviso West in the first West Suburban League meet of the season at 6:30 p.m.

Triton Downs Oakton, 107-71

By taking advantage of a distinct height difference, Triton downed Oakton 107-71 in a Skyway Conference junior college basketball game.

The Raiders, who gave away quite a few inches in height to Triton on the front line, managed to get only 18 rebounds during the game. Larry Gawaluch was the leading Raider rebounder and he had six.

Oakton managed to keep the game close to the first half and was within striking distance. Triton's halftime lead was 49-37.

In the second half, Triton's rebounding strength provided a number of tap-in points and started fast breaks to put the game out of reach for Oakton.

Dennis Phelus was Oakton's leading scorer with 23 points. Craig Christensen had 13 points and Gawaluch contributed 12.

The Raiders, who have a 1-3 Skyway Conference record and who are 5-3 overall, will not be in action until Tuesday, Jan. 4. The opponent on that date will be Harper.

East Swimmers Set Two Records

Two more varsity records were set as Maine East swept through weekend competition with dual meet victories over East Leyden, 51-44, and Elk Grove, 52-43.

Highlighting the victory over East Leyden were Scott Shaver and Jerry Kosberg, placing 1-2 in the 100 yard breaststroke and Bob Wadman's continued assault on the record book as he once again bettered the varsity standard with a time of 2:14.3 in the 200 yard individual medley.

Wadman also won the 100 yard butterfly (56.8) and swam the butterfly leg of the victorious 200 yard medley relay (1:51.7). Other members of the medley relay were Ken Meyer, Jerry Kosberg, and Carl Anderson.

Phil Bergquist was another double winner with victories in the 200 and 400 yard freestyle relays. Glen Sedjo was Maine's only other individual winner, with his first in diving.

Second place finishers for Maine East were Tom McKervey, diving; Ken Meyer, 100 yard backstroke; and Jerry Kosberg, 100 yard breaststroke.

Phil Bergquist was responsible for the second varsity record of the weekend against Elk Grove as he established a standard of 4:22.2 in the 400 yard freestyle to better Frank Morgan's previous best of 4:23.0. Bergquist also won the 200 yard freestyle (2:00.3) and was the anchor man on the winning and meet clinching 400 yard freestyle relay.

Other individual winners for Maine East were Bob Wadman, 100 yard freestyle (53.0); Tom McKervey, diving; and Scott Shaver, 100 yard breaststroke (1:11.0).

Second place finishers were Bob Wadman, 200 yard individual medley; Bob Miner, 50 yard freestyle; Glen Sedjo, diving; Ken Meyer, 100 yard backstroke; and Jerry Kosberg, 100 yard breaststroke.

Maine East will open its West Suburban Conference schedule this Friday at Riverside-Brookfield at 7 p.m., after completing a 4-3 record against non-conference foes.

Ruff's Pin Gives Oakton Mat Tie With Lake County

A crucial pin victory by heavyweight Herman Ruff enabled Oakton to gain a 27-27 tie with Lake County in a Junior College wrestling meet at Niles East.

Oakton trailed 27-21 before Ruff came through with a pin over Pat Monahan in 3:53 to get the tie.

At 118 pounds, Keith Nelson won by forfeit as did Ray Flores at 134 pounds. John Donnelly, at 126 pounds, was an 8-5 victor for Oakton.

County 4-2 at 142 and 150 pounds, respectively.

At 158 pounds, Tom Magas of Oakton won by forfeit. Tom Zei of Oakton was pinned by Mike Angeloff in 4:13 at 167 pounds. Kevin Harrington of Lake County won by forfeit at 177 pounds and Ed Novak of Oakton was pinned by Larry Lesza in 2:37 at 190 pounds to give Lake County its short-lived 27-21 lead.

Earlier in the week Oakton downed Amundsen Mayfair 51-6 in a meet dominated by forfeits.

Oakton, which has a 3-0-1 record, will go against Wright on Monday at 5 p.m. at Wright Junior College.

How tickled am I! I've just learned that Pollution and Environmental Problems (PEP) ecology group has created a continuing annual conservation award program.

I am deeply touched that the board of directors of PEP chose to call this award "The Mary B. Good Trillium Award." It will be presented each year to the person or group deemed to have performed unique services in the field of conservation.

A degradation award will also be presented annually. For this, they've got the "Mary B. Good Ragweed Award."

This honor makes me feel something akin to the John Hancock Building, Kosciuszko Park or the Pulaski Road bus.

I don't know that I did anything extra special to deserve such an honor — it's teamwork that gets jobs done — but I'll take it anyway!

Since I left the bosom of PEP, they've been up to lots of new developments.

For those who wonder if the Prairie Park Organic Gardening project will still "be" next year, I'm happy to report that Jane Murphy of Schaumburg is the new Prairie Farmer, to be assisted by John Rausch of Hoffman Estates. Prairie Park is located in Arlington Heights.

PEP and the village of Palatine have received a great deal of credit from the Clean Air Coordinating Committee for the stand they took concerning the spraying of insecticides into the atmosphere.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: We recently bought an omelet pan described as the type the French use — heavy, cold rolled steel with slipping sides. Instructions warned against the use of soap and water for cleaning; only a paper towel or soft cloth was to be used. Before re-use, we again wipe with a paper towel and the towel is invariably stained a dark rusty brown. It takes several brisk wipings with fresh towels to remove this stain. Are we doing something wrong?

—Granger Adams

Omelet fanciers say you must be browning the fat too much. Midge St. Denis, a gourmet cook, says you must heat the pan slowly and check with a drop of water. If it dances across the pan, it's the moment to put in the butter or oil. When it looks hot and sizzling (not brown) pour in the eggs. Quickly done, the fat will not have a chance to get brown. Wiping out the pan with paper towels should then be free of stain annoyance.

Dear Dorothy: I keep ballpoint pens in various parts of the house to have one

Latin American Style

"A really fun piece" purchased recently is a wingback chair-and-a-half upholstered in brown, black and cream plaid. "We wonder who will sit in it... two slender people or one heavy one?" Toni laughed.

The hospitable homemaker spends much time whipping up delicacies for friends in her 12 by 16 foot kitchen that adjoins the family room. The couple's first project shares attention with harvest gold appliances and dark brown cabinets trimmed in black hardware. Four farm chairs that Toni found in Long Grove circle the round knotty pine table with wrought iron base put together by the man of the house. Rafael took the chairs apart, stripped and sanded them, and then Toni antiqued them orange-red. They want to install Mexican tiles in the kitchen work area as their next project, Toni said.

DINING AND living areas in the Garcia home further demonstrate their individuality. Toni dishes matched sets so she put together natural pecan dining chairs and a dark walnut trestle table. They painted the walls gray-blue and coupled them with blue-on-blue traditional wallpaper in the living room and grass cloth in the dining room. Toni spotted the wallpaper for the foyer while walking down a small street in England. Dark oak floors in both rooms are accented with fringed champagne wool with pastel floral design rugs from India.

For the living room windows Toni chose matched antique satin draw draperies in champagne with sheer window curtains accented by a deep quilted valance in a Greek key design of her own creation. The sculptured garden visible outside the picture window was also designed by the mistress of the house. At night they spotlight it.

THOUGH TONI selected traditional chairs and loveseat for the living area, other decorating periods are represented. A contemporary parson's table holds a Mediterranean lamp. Swagged over their ebony grand piano hangs a leaded lamp. To show off the center medallion in the Oriental rug she chose a glass top cocktail table with antique gold wrought iron base. Here she also displays another favorite antique found in England, a two-tiered bedside steptable in faded mahogany.

Accessories the Garcias value most in their living room are a signed lithograph by Norman Rockwell and a carving of Don Quixote, holding outstretched sword. "We searched all over for him and finally found exactly what we wanted in Spain!"

Blending perfectly into this home of free expression are the couple's two cats, Chulo (wise guy), a lilac point Siamese, and Compinch or "Pinche" (buddy or companion), a golden-eyed Abyssinian.

New Fabric Shop In Golf Plaza

Fashion Yardage has opened a new store in Mount Prospect. This is the 79th store in the chain which specializes in fabrics, patterns and notions for the fashion-conscious customer.

The new store covers 10,000 square feet and is located at 1735 W. Golf Road in the Golf Shopping Plaza. It is open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Manager Jim Anderson is a resident of Hoffman Estates, and all clerks have been hired locally.

Other stores in the chain, which offers major name brand high style fabrics, are located in many of the Western states. The local store is the first in Illinois.

Next On The Agenda

FIFTH WHEELERS

Divorce, widowhood, money, children and sex are some of the subjects to be discussed at Sunday evening's meeting of the Fifth Wheelers of Des Plaines.

The group will break up into eight small panels to discuss the topics. Those present may join the one that is of particular interest to them.

Fifth Wheelers meet at Trinity Lutheran Church, Wolf and Algonquin Roads, Des Plaines, at 7:45 p.m. the first and third Sundays of the month. All those widowed, divorced or legally separated and living in the northwest suburbs are welcome.

A New Year's Eve party is planned at Forest River Community Hall, Des Plaines. Reservations are due at Sunday's meeting.

National Affairs Reporter Says:

Red China Drops Aggressive Role

by TOM WELLMAN

The Communist China which gained admission to the United Nations this fall is a much less aggressive and belligerent country than it has been in past years.

That was the argument of David Murray, Chicago Sun-Times national affairs reporter, who addressed 300 persons last week at the Old Orchard Country Club at a meeting of the Chicago Council on Foreign Affairs.

Murray reported that "all intelligence inputs" indicate there will be no more military adventures and little support for "wars of national liberation," a tactic which China used in the late 1950s and early 1960s.

China, following its 1960s cultural revolution, is going through a period of internal consolidation. However, "revolution is still the reality in China," Murray reported; the country remains more "idealistic" than the Soviet Union.

Murray does not see China as a "permanent disruptive force" in the United Nations, but he does see the country raising questions and arguments about the method of assessing countries for U.N. costs.

A lack of understanding of how the U.N. works was the primary reason why Taiwan lost its U.N. seat while Commu-

Murray agreed that President Richard Nixon and his adviser, Henry Kissinger, had come a long way from the "simplistic view" of "morals in one hand, missiles in the other" which persisted through the era of John Foster Dulles during the 1950s.

"It takes the leading exponent of a point of view to change that point of view," said Murray, who contended that Nixon was the only man who could have reversed this country's position on China.

During a question and answer session after his talk, Murray said that President Nixon's trip to China will have "good international overtones" and can help undo some of the harm created by the U.N. admissions battle.

He added the President "hopes to be reelected for his foreign policy achievements" and he reported the closeness of Nixon's China visit to the 1972 elections could be of great political benefit.

nist China gained its seat, Murray said. The U.N. is "not like Congress or the Texas legislature," and nations which told the United States officials that they would support the admission of both countries did not have to stick to their word, Murray said.

A "BLITZKRIEG" campaign, coupled with attacks of "braggadocio and jingoism," in which the United States made a "huge prestige issue" of its efforts to seat both nations, was just the type of campaign which could not succeed, Murray reported.

"It didn't sit well with countries who do not want to be regarded as serfs," Murray said. Small nations want individual, low-pressure diplomacy, and their latent feelings of resentment towards the superpowers were turned on by the United States campaign.

When the admissions question came to the U.N. floor, the United States officials found themselves outmaneuvered, because they had placed too much emphasis on behind-the-scenes persuasion. "U.N. Ambassador George Bush did not treat the small nations as diplomats," Murray said.

'Operation Snowball' Needs Help

The Christmas Eve deadline for Operation Snowball is less than two weeks away and items for 10,200 gift packages are still needed.

Operation Snowball, the annual holiday project conducted by the Mental Health Association of Greater Chicago, has a goal of remembering 17,500 mental patients in Chicago area state hospitals and aftercare facilities with a Christmas gift. To date, 7,300 gifts, each containing several items, have been assembled and wrapped by volunteers at the Snowball center.

Volunteers are scheduled to wrap 1,000 gifts daily for the next ten days in order to meet the deadline, but all activity is stalled until the public responds with gift contributions.

Community chairmen for the mental health association throughout Chicago and surrounding suburbs are appealing to residents of their towns to make their donations immediately. Items for adult male patients, such as socks, gloves, hosiery, toiletries and underwear, are most urgently needed.

All items must be at the Snowball center no later than the 17th if the gifts are to be assembled, wrapped and distributed on time.

Helping to avoid a breakdown in Operation Snowball progress at this crucial time are local Dodge Dealers who have volunteered their showrooms as official gift collection centers to make giving convenient for community residents.

Gifts are shuttled regularly from the showrooms to the wrapping center by Chicagoand Jaycees. Gifts can also be dropped off at the Operation Snowball center, 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago.

Despite the help of many groups and individuals to facilitate giving for Chicago area residents, there may still be some who are too busy with personal holiday plans to take advantage of the Snowball arrangements. Persons who wish may mail a cash contribution to Operation Snowball at the Dearborn Street center. All checks made out to Operation Snowball will be used specifically to purchase gifts for mental patients.

Community chairmen for the area-wide drive include: Mrs. Francis Dunleavy, 648 Elmwood Dr., Buffalo Grove; Mrs. Martin Newman, 8940 David Pl., Des Plaines; Mrs. Ruth Boebel, 77 Wildwood Rd., Elk Grove Village; Mrs. Edmund Ghannam, 205 Newport Rd., Schaumburg.

Edison's Rate Increase Is 'Disappointing'

by LEA TONKIN

The bright lights of Christmas added to the possibility of a cold snap and the approval of a 6.2 per cent rate hike for Illinois users, should be a welcome holiday package for the Commonwealth Edison Co.

Despite this revenue-boosting combination, Edison vice president Hubert H. Nexon last week termed the recent rate approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) "disappointing." The company asked for a rate increase of 10.4 per cent.

THE NEW RATES, effective Monday, are expected to generate an additional $66 million in operating revenue for the utility. This compares with the $110 million increase in revenue sought by the company.

"Edison must finance an enormous construction program which calls for spending nearly $10 million a week over the 5-year period, 1971-1975, or a total of $2.6 billion," Nexon said. "About $200 million of this sum is devoted to environmental improvements." Financing, construction and operating costs are rising, he said, adding taxes will eat up more than half the revenue increase.

The ICC decision, following 11 months of extensive hearings, will affect some 2.6 million customers in Chicago and 400 other Illinois communities. The average increase reflected in a user's bill is estimated at 90 cents to $1, according to an Edison spokesman. He said this reflects the average monthly use of 475 kilowatts of power.

The spokesman indicated the ICC rate hike approval is within the guidelines for Phase II in President Nixon's new economic program, but the decision is subject to review by the Price Board.

ADDITIONAL INCREASES approved by the ICC would not become effective until 1973, and only on the condition that Edison will be able to support its estimates of need by actual operating experience. The City of Chicago, the Chicago Transit Authority, and the Chicago Park District as special bulk customers will continue to receive lower rates, but with proportional increases.

The ICC noted the utility is going forward with a massive construction program and environmental program aimed at the least possible impact of its operations.

The Edison spokesman said environmental impact studies required by the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) for its new Dresden and LaSalle County nuclear generating stations have been submitted. The AEC has not ruled on these facilities, he said.

PERSONAL CONSUMPTION of electricity doubles every 10 years, according to the Edison spokesman.

"This applies to the typical householder," he said. "Along the way he adds various gadgets, starting out with toaster and adding a coffeemaker, blender and mixer. He starts out with a refrigerator then adds a freezer, goes from one, to two or three televisions. Air conditioning is the single largest contributor to peak loads."
